INTRODUCTION

2 Petitioner Rachad Taha (Mr. Taha or Petitioner) is a Lebanese noncitizen detained by 3 Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) at the Northwest ICE Processing Center (NWIPC)
4 in Tacoma, Washington. He is being held despite being prima facie eligible for Temporary 5 Protected Status (TPS)—which prevents his removal under the Immigration and Nationality Act 6 (INA)—and despite ICE’s own recent admissions that they lack travel documents to remove him.
7 Indeed, ICE previously released Mr. Taha from custody in 2024 because it could not obtain a 8 travel document to remove him, and he applied for TPS in January 2025 after the Department of 9 Homeland Security designated Lebanon for TPS. As an applicant for TPS who is prima facie 10 eligible, he is entitled to the benefits of that status, including its prohibition on removal. The 11 INA, as well as the Supreme Court’s due process precedent regarding indefinite detention for 12 people who cannot be removed, thus make plain that his continued detention is unlawful and 13 compel his immediate release.<sup>1</sup>

STATEMENT OF FACTS

I. Mr. Taha's Removal Proceedings and Subsequent Release

16 Mr. Taha is a noncitizen from Lebanon. Taha Decl. ¶ 2. He entered the United States in 17 July 2023, and at that time, he expressed a fear of returning to Lebanon. Id. ¶ 5; see also Maltese 18 Decl. Ex A (Form I-867A, Record of Sworn Statement). Following a screening interview known 19 as a credible fear interview (CFI), U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) 20 determined that Mr. Taha did not have a reasonable possibility of demonstrating that he would be 21 persecuted if removed to Lebanon. Maltese Decl. Ex. B (Form I-869B, Record of Negative

23 |<sup>1</sup> Concurrent with the filing of the habeas petition and motion, counsel certifies that they are 24 | providing notice regarding this filing to the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Western District of Washington via email.

1 Credible Fear and Reasonable Possibility Finding). As a result, on July 26, 2023, Mr. Taha was 2 ordered removed from the United States pursuant to an expedited removal order. Maltese Decl.
 3 Ex. C (Form I-860, Notice and Order of Expedited Removal). An immigration judge 4 subsequently affirmed USCIS's CFI decision. Taha Decl. ¶ 6. While he was in detention, Mr.
 5 Taha assisted ICE with efforts to obtain a travel document for his removal to Lebanon. Id. ¶ 9.

6 ICE, however, was unable to execute the removal order. As a result, on January 5, 2024, 7 ICE released Mr. Taha from detention—just shy of six months after he was order removed.
 8 Maltese Decl. Ex. D (Form I-286, Notice of Custody Determination); Taha Decl. ¶ 10. ICE did 9 so pursuant to Zadvydas v. Davis, a Supreme Court decision that guards against indefinite 10 detention of noncitizens where a person's removal is not foreseeable, and which requires the 11 government to justify any continued detention once removal reaches the six-month mark. 533 12 U.S. 678, 690–91, 700–01 (2001).

13 At the time of his release, ICE placed Mr. Taha on an order of supervision, requiring him 14 to comply with periodic check-ins. Maltese Decl. Ex. E (Form I-220B, Order of Supervision); 15 Taha Decl. ¶ 10. ICE also placed an ankle monitor on Mr. Taha and enrolled him in the Intensive 16 Supervision Appearance Program (ISAP), allowing for the agency to continuously monitor him.
 17 Maltese Decl. Ex. F (Form 71-071, ATD Enrollment – Notice to Alien); Taha Decl. ¶ 10. Mr.
 18 Taha's release was also accompanied by other conditions, such as requirements to update ICE 19 about any change of address and to not commit any crimes. See Maltese Decl. Ex. E (Form I-20 220B, Order of Supervision).

21 Over the next year, Mr. Taha complied with his check-in requirements and all other 22 conditions of release. Taha Decl. ¶¶ 11–23. Mr. Taha initially relocated to California, but soon 23 moved to live with his uncle near Portland, Oregon. Id. ¶ 11. Mr. Taha did so only after first 24

1 obtaining permission from ISAP officers. Id. ISAP removed his ankle monitor around two 2 months later, in light of Mr. Taha's timely and consistent compliance with ISAP program 3 requirements. Id. ¶ 17. To conduct most of his check-ins, Mr. Taha used the BI SmartLink app, 4 taking photos of himself and answering phone calls from ISAP officers. Id. ¶¶ 15–16. On one 5 occasion, he belatedly performed a check-in after his phone battery died, and an officer warned 6 him that a subsequent tardy check-in could result in restoration of the ankle monitor. Id. ¶ 20.
 7 Mr. Taha never had any further problems with checking in and did not commit any crimes that 8 could have resulted in revocation of his release. Id. ¶ 20; see generally id. ¶¶ 11–23. Eventually, 9 Mr. Taha moved in with his partner and her children in Beaverton, Oregon, and once again, he 10 obtained ISAP permission before doing so. Id. ¶ 18. Throughout this entire time, Mr. Taha also 11 made efforts to obtain a new Lebanese passport (his previous one had been stolen), as requested 12 by ICE. Id. ¶¶ 21–23.

13 II. Mr. Taha's Re-detention

14 On January 26, 2025, Mr. Taha received a notification via the BI SmartLink app 15 requesting that he immediately present himself at the ICE office in Portland. Id. ¶ 25. As he 16 always did, Mr. Taha immediately complied. Id. ¶¶ 25, 27. Upon arrival, ICE re-detained Mr.
 17 Taha despite his compliance with his release conditions and his efforts to obtain a new passport.
 18 Id. ¶ 27. At the time of his arrest, ICE did not provide any notice of the reason for his arrest, 19 other than to say that his name was on a list of people with final orders of removal. Id. ¶¶ 26–28.
 20 ICE did not provide Mr. Taha with an opportunity to contest the basis for his re-detention or any 21 information that would indicate his removal was now reasonably foreseeable. Id. ¶¶ 26–30.
 22 Indeed, upon his transfer to NWIPC, an ICE officer simply explained that Mr. Taha had been re-23 arrested "because of Trump." Id. ¶ 28.

1 Prior to his arrest, in December 2024, Mr. Taha had retained a law firm in Oregon to 2 apply for Temporary Protected Status (TPS). Id. ¶ 24. The previous month, on November 27, 3 2024, the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) designated Lebanon for TPS. See 4 Designation of Lebanon for Temporary Protected Status, 89 Fed. Reg. 93641 (Nov. 27, 2024).
 5 Pursuant to that designation, Lebanese noncitizens in the United States who have resided here 6 since October 16, 2024, may apply for and receive TPS, as well as its protection against removal 7 and provision of work authorization. See generally 8 U.S.C. § 1254a. In his application, Mr.
 8 Taha provided evidence of his continuous residence in the United States since October 2024 and 9 his Lebanese nationality. Taha Decl. ¶ 24. Mr. Taha has no criminal history in the United States 10 or Lebanon, and none of the bars to obtaining TPS apply to him. See 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(c)(1)(A); 11 Maltese Decl. Ex. G (FBI Criminal History Report).<sup>2</sup> Mr. Taha’s counsel filed his application for 12 TPS with USCIS around the time that he was detained. Maltese Decl. Ex. H (TPS Application 13 Receipt Notice). On February 4, 2025, USCIS issued a notice explaining that the agency had 14 received Mr. Taha’s application on January 30, 2025. Id.

15 Following his re-detention, Mr. Taha repeatedly sent inquiries to ICE officers at NWIPC 16 asking why he had been detained, and noting that he had a pending application for TPS. Taha 17 Decl. ¶¶ 29–30. On one occasion, ICE responded, again simply noting that Mr. Taha had a final 18 order of removal. Id. ¶ 29. ICE never responded to Mr. Taha’s other messages, explained why 19 the agency now believed it could remove him, or why the agency could remove him 20 notwithstanding his pending TPS application. Id. ¶¶ 29–30.

 23 <sup>2</sup> The FBI report was obtained by Mr. Taha’s previous immigration counsel pursuant to a FOIA 24 request. It shows redacted information for an arrest from June 10, 2023. This arrest is immigration-related and is likely from the Panamanian authorities who processed Mr. Taha after he entered Panama en route to the United States. Taha Decl. ¶ 4.

1 In March 2025, after ICE repeatedly failed to respond to his inquiries or release him, Mr.
 2 Taha retained the services of the Northwest Immigrant Rights Project to assist him in requesting 3 release. Id. ¶ 32. His counsel then contacted James Yi, Deputy Chief Counsel for ICE's Office
 4 the Principal Legal Advisor, to request release. In that email, counsel explained that Mr. Taha 5 was prima facie eligible for TPS and therefore entitled to the benefits of TPS, including its 6 protection against removal. Stopher Decl. ¶ 5; Maltese Decl. Ex. I (Emails). Rather than 7 releasing Mr. Taha, Acting Deputy Field Office Director Erik Johnson issued Mr. Taha a Notice 8 of Revocation of Release, over two months after he had been re-detained. Maltese Decl. Ex. J 9 (Notice of Revocation of Release). This was the first explanation of his re-detention that Mr.
 10 Taha received since being arrested in January. See Taha Decl. ¶¶ 26–35. The notice asserted that 11 “changed circumstances” justified Mr. Taha’s re-detention and claimed that Mr. Taha’s “case is 12 under current review by Lebanon for the issuance of a travel document.” Maltese Decl. Ex. J 13 (Notice of Revocation of Release). The notice also stated that Mr. Taha would be “promptly be 14 afforded an informal interview” at which he would “be given an opportunity to respond to the 15 reasons for the revocation.” Id. Mr. Taha’s counsel subsequently requested that she be present 16 for the interview. Stopher Decl. ¶ 7. ICE has not yet held or scheduled this “prompt[]” interview.
 17 Taha Decl. ¶ 34; Stopher Decl. ¶ 11; see also 8 C.F.R. §§ 241.4(l)(1), 214.13(i)(3) (requiring 18 prompt interview of person re-detained following release pursuant to Zadvydas and the 19 regulations implementing that decision).

20 Following the revocation notice, on April 3, counsel for Mr. Taha again wrote James Yi, 21 reiterating the request for Mr. Taha’s release and explaining that his removal is not foreseeable 22 given the pending TPS application. Stopher Decl. ¶ 8; Maltese Decl. Ex. I. Counsel explained 23 that the NWIRP would pursue litigation on Mr. Taha’s behalf if he was not released. Maltese 24

1 Decl. Ex. I. Mr. Yi has not responded to this latest request and counsel's efforts to address this 2 matter short of litigation. Stopher Decl. ¶ 8; Maltese Decl. Ex. I (Emails). Mr. Taha remains 3 detained at NWIPC. Taha Decl. ¶¶ 35, 37–38.

4 ARGUMENT

5 On a motion for a TRO, the movant “must establish that he is likely to succeed on the 6 merits, that he is likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief, that the 7 balance of equities tips in his favor, and that an injunction is in the public interest.” Winter v.
 8 Nat. Res. Def. Council, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 20 (2008); Stuhlbarg Int'l Sales Co. v. John D. Brush &

9 Co., 240 F.3d 832, 839 n.7 (9th Cir. 2001) (noting that preliminary injunction and TRO 10 standards are “substantially identical”). A TRO may issue where “serious questions going to the 11 merits [are] raised and the balance of hardships tips sharply in [plaintiff's] favor.” All. for the 12 Wild Rockies v. Cottrell, 632 F.3d 1127, 1131 (9th Cir. 2011) (second alteration in original) 13 (citation omitted). To succeed under the “serious question” test, Mr. Taha must also show that he 14 is likely to suffer irreparable injury and that an injunction is in the public's interest. Id. at 1132.

15 I. Mr. Taha is likely to succeed on the merits of his argument that his removal is not 16 reasonably foreseeable and that he is entitled to immediate release.

17 Mr. Taha's current detention is unlawful because he is prima facie eligible for TPS and 18 ICE has yet to obtain any travel documents for him. Each reason independently demonstrates his 19 removal not reasonably foreseeable and that his continued detention violates the Due Process 20 Clause of the Fifth Amendment and the INA. Moreover, ICE has failed to afford Mr. Taha any 21 meaningful process prior to revoking his release that justifies his re-detention through a showing 22 of changed circumstances.

23 As a person with a final order of removal, Mr. Taha is subject to detention under § 1231.
 24 That statute provides that DHS “shall remove” such individuals during a 90-day “removal

1 period,” during which DHS “shall detain” the noncitizen. 8 U.S.C. § 1231(a)(1)(A)–(B), 2 (a)(2)(A). However, “[i]f the [noncitizen] does not leave or is not removed within the removal 3 period, the [noncitizen] . . . shall be subject to supervision”—that is, released under conditions.
 4 Id. § 1231(a)(3). Only where the individual is deportable or inadmissible on certain grounds, or 5 “has been determined . . . to be a risk to the community or unlikely to comply with the order of 6 removal,” the individual “may be detained beyond the [90-day] removal period.” Id. § 7 1231(a)(6).

8 This case concerns discretionary detention under the authority of § 1231(a)(6), as Mr.
 9 Taha is far beyond the 90-day removal period of § 1231(a). In Zadvydas, the Supreme Court 10 found § 1231(a)(6) “ambiguous” as to the length of post-removal-period detention it authorizes.
 11 533 U.S. at 697. Applying the constitutional avoidance canon, the Court construed the statute to 12 contain an “implicit ‘reasonable time’ limitation” of six months. Id. at 682; see also id. at 700– 13 01. The Court concluded that the statute does not permit continued incarceration after six months 14 “if removal is not reasonably foreseeable.” Id. at 699. And even “if removal is reasonably 15 foreseeable,” the Court held, detention is permitted only if there is a sufficient “risk of the 16 [noncitizen]’s committing further crimes.” Id. at 700. Accordingly, “once the [noncitizen] 17 provides good reason to believe that there is no significant likelihood of removal in the 18 reasonably foreseeable future, the Government must respond with evidence sufficient to rebut 19 that showing.” Id. at 701. Where the Government fails to justify continued detention under § 20 1231, this Court may order immediate release. See, e.g., Jatta v. Clark, No. C19-2086-MJP-21 MAT, 2020 WL 7138006, at *2 (W.D. Wash. Dec. 5, 2020); Tkachev v. ICE Field Off. Dir., No.
 22 C20-532-RSL-MLP, 2020 WL 6947356, at *3 (W.D. Wash. Oct. 9, 2020), R&R adopted, 2020
 23 WL 6939639 (W.D. Wash. Nov. 25, 2020).

1 Situations like the one in Zadvydas often arise where a person's country of origin is 2 unwilling to provide a travel document for that person. See generally 8 C.F.R. § 241.4 (providing 3 procedures for a person's detention where ICE is in the process of obtaining a travel document).
 4 Under Zadvydas and the regulations ICE issued following that case, Respondents have 5 historically released persons after six months if ICE is unable to obtain a travel document after 6 six months of § 1231(a)(6) detention. See 8 C.F.R. § 241.13(g)(1) (requiring DHS to 7 "promptly . . . release" an individual where "there is no significant likelihood of removal").
 8 These authorities provided the basis for Mr. Taha's release in January 2024, when ICE placed 9 him under supervision with an ankle monitor around six months after his removal order became 10 final. See supra p. 2.

11 Against this legal and factual backdrop, the government cannot justify Mr. Taha's 12 renewed detention for two independent reasons: (1) Mr. Taha's prima facie eligibility for TPS 13 and (2) Respondents' failure to obtain a travel document. Each of these reasons provides a 14 basis for this Court to order Mr. Taha's immediate release.

15 First, Mr. Taha has presented an application for TPS that demonstrates prima facie 16 eligibility for that status, which explicitly bars his removal. Congress established TPS as part of 17 the Immigration Act of 1990, Pub L. No. 101-649, § 302, 104 Stat. 4978, 5030–36, to provide 18 temporary relief to noncitizens from countries facing wars, disasters, or emergencies that make 19 safe return to their countries of origin impossible. Pursuant to that authority, the Secretary of 20 Homeland Security (DHS Secretary) may designate a country for TPS where such conditions 21 exist. See 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(b)(1). TPS designations last between six and eighteen months, and 22 may be extended. Id. § 1254a(b)(2)–(3). To qualify for TPS, a national of a TPS-designated 23 country must apply during DHS's registration period, meet certain physical presence and 24

1 residence requirements in the United States, and be “admissible as an immigrant,” with certain 2 exceptions and opportunities for waivers. Id. § 1254a(c)(1)(A)(i)–(iv).

3 Once approved, a TPS applicant is entitled to several key benefits, including that DHS 4 “shall not remove the [noncitizen] from the United States during the period in which [TPS] status 5 is in effect.” Id. § 1254a(a)(1)(A). Critically, this same benefit applies during the application 6 period. Under the TPS statute, the prohibition on removal and grant of employment authorization 7 also extend to TPS applicants. Id. § 1254a(a)(4)(B). Such “temporary” benefits “shall” be 8 granted when an applicant “establishes a prima facie case of eligibility for benefits,” and those 9 benefits remain effective “until a final determination with respect to the [noncitizen’s] eligibility 10 for such benefits . . . has been made.” Id. § 1254a(a)(4)(B). Taken together, these provisions 11 guarantee TPS-eligible noncitizens the right to a prohibition on their removal from the time they 12 apply for TPS through the time their country’s TPS designation ends or TPS is otherwise 13 withdrawn. See id. § 1254a(c)(3).

14 Notably, ICE and USCIS policy reflect this statutory prohibition on removal. For 15 example, ICE policies provide that TPS applicants should not be removed and that potential TPS
 16 applicants who demonstrate eligibility must be released from detention. See, e.g., Immigr. & 17 Customs Enf’t, Detention and Deportation Officer’s Field Manual § 20.10(b) (2006), 18 https://www.ice.gov/doclib/foia/dro\_policy\_memos/09684drofieldpolicymanual.pdf;
 19 (“[Noncitizens] who have registered for TPS may not be removed from the United States.”); see 20 also 8 C.F.R. § 244.1 (defining “Register” for purposes of TPS as meaning “to properly file, with 21 the director, a completed application, with proper fee, for [TPS] during the registration period 22 designated under [8 U.S.C. § 1254a(b)]”); U.S. Dep’t of Just., Immigr. & Naturalization Serv., 23 Administrative Closure When Alien is Prima Facie Eligible for TPS or DED, HQCOU 120/12.2-24

1 P, at 9 (Feb. 7, 2002) (Att. A) (“INS must release detained individuals who may be eligible for 2 TPS and who wish to apply for such protection. Release is not contingent upon . . . filing or 3 adjudication . . .”). Similarly, USCIS’s regulation states that “[u]pon the filing of an application 4 for Temporary Protected Status, the [noncitizen] shall be afforded temporary treatment benefits, 5 if the application establishes the [noncitizen]’s prima facie eligibility for Temporary Protected 6 Status.” 8 C.F.R. 244.5(b). These benefits “shall remain in effect until a final decision has been 7 made on the application for Temporary Protected Status.” Id. § 244.10(e)(2); see also id.
 8 § 244.13(a) (“Temporary treatment benefits terminate upon a final determination with respect to 9 the [noncitizen]’s eligibility for Temporary Protected Status.”). Notably, prima facie eligibility is 10 “established with the filing of a completed application for Temporary Protected Status containing 11 factual information that if unrebutted will establish a claim of eligibility.” Id. § 244.1 (emphasis 12 added).

13 This statutory framework demonstrates that Mr. Taha’s removal is not reasonably 14 foreseeable and that his immediate release is warranted. As a person who has submitted an 15 application demonstrating prima facie eligibility for TPS, Mr. Taha is entitled to protection from 16 removal under 8 U.S.C. § 1254a(a)(1)(A) and (a)(4)(B). It directly follows that his removal is not 17 foreseeable; after all, the law explicitly forbids his removal.

18 Other courts have granted habeas petitions in similar situations as the government has 19 recently targeted for deportation persons with final orders of removal. For example, in Salad v.
 20 Department of Corrections, the U.S. District Court for the District of Alaska granted a habeas 21 petition for a noncitizen for whom ICE had a travel document, but who had a pending TPS 22 application for Somalia. --- F. Supp. 3d ---, 3:25-cv-00029-TMB-KFR, 2025 WL 732305 (D.
 23 Alaska Mar. 7, 2025). As the court explained, “the INA prohibits removal of an individual who 24

1 is prima facie eligible for TPS.” Id. at *6. Given that fact and other related TPS protections, the 2 Court held that “there is no significant likelihood of removal in the reasonably foreseeable 3 future” and ordered the release of the petitioner. Id. Similarly, in a habeas petition in the Eastern 4 District of Virginia, the court granted the habeas petition and issued final judgment for 5 petitioners in active TPS status just days after the case was filed. See, e.g., Transcript of Writ 6 Hearing at 8:15–9:13, Sanchez v. Puentes, No. 1:25-cv-509 (E.D. Va. Mar. 28, 2025) (Att. B) 7 (granting habeas petition and ordering immediate release of noncitizen petitioner in case filed a 8 few days earlier because persons were in active TPS status and government had no reason to 9 detain them). The Court should do the same here, as the INA expressly prohibits Mr. Taha’s 10 removal. Cf. Nadarajah v. Gonzales, 443 F.3d 1069, 1081–82 (9th Cir. 2006) (holding that 11 removal of noncitizen was not reasonably foreseeable where the noncitizen had been granted 12 asylum and protection under the Convention against Torture, which prohibit removal to a 13 designated country).

14 Even if TPS eligibility did not provide a basis for Mr. Taha’s immediate release, other 15 facts also demonstrate his removal is not reasonably foreseeable. In the belated Notice of 16 Revocation of Release that ICE provided to Mr. Taha, the agency acknowledged that it does not 17 even have a travel document. See Maltese Decl. Ex. J (Notice of Revocation of Release). Even 18 so, ICE arrested Mr. Taha. ICE’s bare and self-serving recitation that Lebanon is allegedly 19 cooperating in obtaining a travel document cannot now justify Mr. Taha’s detention. This is 20 particularly true, where, as here, Mr. Taha has cooperated in attempting to obtain travel 21 documents and where he was previously released despite those efforts because of ICE’s inability 22 to obtain a travel document. See, e.g., Xi v. I.N.S., 298 F.3d 832, 834–36 (9th Cir. 2002) 23 (ordering release of Chinese national pursuant to Zadvydas where noncitizen had recently 24

1 cooperated in seeking to obtain travel document and China had not provided a travel document); 2 Andreasyan v. Gonzales, 446 F. Supp. 2d 1186, 1189–90 (W.D. Wash. 2006) (granting habeas 3 petition where noncitizen had been detained for eight months and no travel documents had been 4 produced); Mohamed v. Ashcroft, No. C01-1747P, 2002 WL 32620339, at *1 (W.D. Wash., 5 April 15, 2002) (granting petitioner habeas corpus relief where government failed to offer any 6 “specific information regarding how or when [it] expect[ed] to obtain the necessary 7 documentation or cooperation from the Ethiopian government”); Islam v. Kane, No. CV-11-515-8 PHX-PGR, 2011 WL 4374226, at *4 (D. Ariz. Aug. 30, 2011) (recommending grant of habeas 9 petition where respondents merely “stat[ed] that the travel document request is ‘pending’”), R&R 10 adopted, 2011 WL 4374205 (D. Ariz. Sept. 20, 2011). Indeed, as noted above, in Zadvydas, the 11 Court explained that even where “removal is reasonably foreseeable,” detention is permitted only 12 if there is a sufficient “risk of the [noncitizen]’s committing further crimes.” 533 U.S. at 700 13 (emphasis added). Here, no evidence exists that Mr. Taha presents a danger and his lengthy 14 history of compliance with his order of supervision, fixed residence, and ties to the Oregon area 15 demonstrate he is not a flight risk. See generally Taha Decl. ¶¶ 10–23, 40; Maltese Decl. Ex. G 16 (FBI Criminal History Report).

17 The passage of time since Mr. Taha’s re-detention only highlights this point. If a travel 18 document has been issued (and if the TPS application did not otherwise bar removal), then 19 Respondents would have a basis to argue that removal is reasonably foreseeable. But since being 20 re-detained in January, Mr. Taha has spent months in detention—without ever being removed, 21 and without ICE obtaining a travel document. See Maltese Decl. Ex. J (Notice of Revocation of 22 Release). That fact only underscores that ICE’s continued detention of Mr. Taha lacks any 23 connection to the agency’s detention authority under 8 U.S.C. § 1231(a)(6).

24

1 Finally, ICE's failure to follow its own procedures in re-detaining Mr. Taha underscores 2 the propriety of release. Under governing regulations, ICE must "afford[] [Mr. Taha] an initial 3 informal interview promptly after his . . . return to Service custody to afford [him] an opportunity 4 to respond to the reasons for revocation stated in the notification." 8 C.F.R. § 241.4(l)(1); see 5 also id. § 241.13(i)(3) (similar). Yet following his arrest, ICE did not provide a notice of the 6 reason for revocation until two months later, when his counsel requested his release. Moreover, 7 Mr. Taha has never received the "prompt" interview ICE's own regulations requires, and ICE 8 has never explained the basis for the "changed circumstances" justifying his re-detention, other 9 than to claim that "[y]our case is under current review by Lebanon for the issuance of a travel 10 document." Maltese Decl. Ex. J(Notice of Revocation of Release).<sup>3</sup>

11 Even had ICE provided its informal interview, however, due process would demand more 12 and underscores the need for the Court's immediate intervention here. "The Supreme Court has 13 repeatedly held that in at least some circumstances, a person who is in fact free of physical 14 confinement—even if that freedom is lawfully revocable—has a liberty interest that entitles him 15 to constitutional due process before he is re-incarcerated." Hurd v. District of Columbia, 864 16 F.3d 671, 683 (D.C. Cir. 2017) (emphasis added). As the Hurd court explains, this includes cases 17 of "pre-parole conditional supervision," id. (citing Young v. Harper, 520 U.S. 143, 152 (1997)); 18 "probation," id. (citing Gagnon v. Scarpelli, 411 U.S. 778, 782 (1973)); and "parole," id. (citing 19 Morrissey v. Brewer, 408 U.S. 471, 482 (1972)).

22 <sup>3</sup> Notably, this failure to provide notice and an opportunity to be heard—the most basic of due 23 process protections—appears to be a systemic problem at NWIPC. See, e.g., Resp'ts' Answer &
 24 Return to Pet. for Writ of Habeas Corpus at 16, Waterhouse v. Bostock, No. 2:24-cv-650-JNW-GJL (W.D. Wash. July 24, 2024), ECF No. 8 (acknowledging that ICE failed to provide the interview and notice required by 8 C.F.R. § 241.4(l)(1) to another recently detained person).

1 Notably, the principles from these cases apply with even greater force to individuals like 2 Mr. Taha, who have been released in civil immigration proceedings, rather than parolees or 3 probationers who are subject to incarceration as part of a sentence for a criminal conviction.
 4 “Given the civil context, [a noncitizen’s] liberty interest is arguably greater than the interest of 5 parolees in Morrissey.” Ortega v. Bonnar, 415 F. Supp. 3d 963, 970 (N.D. Cal. 2019). Parolees 6 and probationers have a diminished liberty interest because of their underlying convictions. See, 7 e.g., United States v. Knights, 534 U.S. 112, 119 (2001) (“Probation is one point on a continuum 8 of possible punishments . . . .” (internal quotation marks and citation omitted)); Griffin v.
 9 Wisconsin, 483 U.S. 868, 874 (1987) (“To a greater or lesser degree, it is always true of 10 probationers (as we have said it to be true of parolees) that they do not enjoy the absolute liberty 11 to which every citizen is entitled . . . .” (internal quotation marks and citation omitted)).
 12 Nonetheless, even in the criminal parole and supervised release context, courts have held that the 13 parolee cannot be re-arrested without a due process hearing in which they can raise any claims 14 they may have regarding why their re-incarceration would be unlawful. See, e.g., Hurd, 864 F.3d 15 at 684. These principles have repeatedly led other courts to require a hearing prior to or shortly 16 after a non-citizen’s re-detention where the government must justify its decision to detain a 17 person once more. See Jorge M.F. v. Jennings, 534 F. Supp. 3d 1050, 1055–56 (N.D. Cal. 2021) 18 (pre-deprivation hearing); Perera v. Jennings, 598 F. Supp. 3d 736, 745–46 (N.D. Cal. 2022) 19 (post-deprivation hearing).

20 Here, Mr. Taha not even received an “informal interview” before the “government 21 enforcement agent,” Coolidge v. New Hampshire, 403 U.S. 443, 450 (1971), much less a hearing 22 before a neutral decisionmaker, see, e.g., Shadwick v. City of Tampa, 407 U.S. 345, 350 (1972)
 23 (“Whatever else neutrality and detachment might entail, it is clear that they require severance 24

1 and disengagement from activities of law enforcement."); see also Gerstein v. Pugh, 420 U.S.
 2 103, 112 (1975) (similar). In similar circumstances, this Court has found that ICE's "fail[ure] to 3 comply with its own regulations" implementing the protections of Zadvydas provide further 4 reason to conclude that removal is not reasonably foreseeable and that release is warranted.
 5 Singh v. Gonzales, 448 F. Supp. 2d 1214, 1219 (W.D. Wash. 2006).

6 In the end, however, the fact remains that (1) Mr. Taha is prima facie eligible for TPS, 7 and (2) ICE itself admits there is no travel document. Under these circumstances—especially 8 given the lack of any procedures to protect against unnecessary detention—Mr. Taha's 9 immediate release is warranted under the INA and the Due Process Clause of the Fifth 10 Amendment. See Zadvydas, 533 U.S. at 690–91, 701.

11 II. Mr. Taha will suffer irreparable harm absent an injunction.

12 Parties seeking a TRO must also show they are "likely to suffer irreparable harm in the 13 absence of preliminary relief." Winter, 555 U.S. at 20. Irreparable harm is the type of harm for 14 which there is "no adequate legal remedy, such as an award of damages." Ariz. Dream Act Coal.
 15 v. Brewer, 757 F.3d 1053, 1068 (9th Cir. 2014).

16 Here, Mr. Taha's unlawful detention constitutes "a loss of liberty that is . . . irreparable." 17 Moreno Galvez v. Cuccinelli, 492 F. Supp. 3d 1169, 1181 (W.D. Wash. 2020) (Moreno II), aff'd
 18 in part, vacated in part on other grounds, remanded sub nom. Moreno Galvez v. Jaddou, 52 19 F.4th 821 (9th Cir. 2022); cf. Rodriguez v. Robbins, 715 F.3d 1127, 1145 (9th Cir. 2013) 20 (irreparable harm is met where "preliminary injunction is necessary to ensure that individuals . . .
 21 are not needlessly detained" because they are neither a danger nor a flight risk). This is 22 particularly true here, where Mr. Taha's detention also violates the Constitution. Civil 23 immigration detention violates due process outside of 'certain special and narrow nonpunitive 24 circumstances.'" Rodriguez v. Marin, 909 F.3d 252, 257 (9th Cir. 2018) (citation omitted). As

1 detailed above, Mr. Taha's detention is outside of those "special and narrow nonpunitive 2 circumstances," as the Due Process Clause forbids the indefinite detention he faces due to the 3 lack of foreseeability in his removal. See Zadvydas, 533 U.S. at 690–91, 701. These 4 constitutional concerns also counsel in favor of finding that Mr. Taha has demonstrated 5 irreparable harm, for he has demonstrated that his detention violates the Constitution. See Baird 6 v. Bonta, 81 F.4th 1036, 1048 (9th Cir. 2023) (declaring that "in cases involving a constitutional 7 claim, a likelihood of success on the merits usually establishes irreparable harm").

8 Detention also inflicts substantial harm on Mr. Taha by separating him from his family 9 members. Absent a TRO, Mr. Taha has no hope of being reunited with his partner, her children, 10 and other family members, like his uncle. See Taha Decl. ¶¶ 18, 37, 40. Such "separation from 11 family members" is an important irreparable harm factor. Leiva-Perez v. Holder, 640 F.3d 962, 12 969–70 (9th Cir. 2011) (per curiam) (citation omitted); see also, e.g., Washington v. Trump, 847 13 F.3d 1151, 1169 (9th Cir. 2017) (per curiam) (finding "separated families" to be a "substantial 14 injur[y] and even irreparable harm[]"); cf. Hernandez v. Sessions, 872 F.3d 976, 996 (9th Cir.
 15 2017) (recognizing that "government-compelled [family] separation" causes family members 16 "trauma" and "other burdens").

17 Detention has also taken an emotional and mental toll on Mr. Taha. See Taha Decl. ¶ 37 18 ("Being detained has been very hard on me. Reliving this trauma is very difficult. I was already 19 detained once and I did not think I would have to live through this horrible situation again.").
 20 Such "emotional stress, depression and reduced sense of well-being" further support a finding of 21 irreparable harm. Chalk v. U.S. Dist. Ct. C.D. Cal., 840 F.2d 701, 709 (9th Cir. 1988); see also 22 Moreno II, 492 F. Supp. 3d at 1181–82 ("[S]tress, devastation, fear, and depression" arising from

23

1 unlawful immigration policy are the type of “harms [that] will not be remedied by an award of 2 damages.”).

3 In sum, Mr. Taha is suffering numerous and irreparable harms: detention itself, 4 separation from his family, and emotional harm. All of these warrant a TRO or simply granting 5 the habeas petition itself.

6 III. The balance of hardships and public interest weigh heavily in Mr. Taha’s favor.

7 The final two factors for a preliminary injunction—the balance of hardships and public 8 interest—“merge when the Government is the opposing party.” Nken v. Holder, 556 U.S. 418, 9 435 (2009). Here, Mr. Taha faces weighty hardships: loss of liberty, separation from family, and 10 significant stress and anxiety. See supra Sec. II. The government, by contrast, faces no hardship, 11 as all it must do is release a person who is legally entitled to release. Avoiding such “preventable 12 human suffering” strongly tips the balance in favor of Mr. Taha. Hernandez, 872 F.3d at 996 13 (quoting Lopez v. Heckler, 713 F.2d 1432, 1437 (9th Cir. 1983)).

14 What is more, because Mr. Taha’s detention “is inconsistent with federal law, . . . the 15 balance of hardships and public interest factors weigh in favor of a preliminary injunction.” 16 Moreno Galvez v. Cuccinelli, 387 F. Supp. 3d 1208, 1218 (W.D. Wash. 2019) (Moreno I); see 17 also Moreno Galvez, 52 F.4th at 832 (affirming in part permanent injunction issued in Moreno II 18 and quoting approvingly district judge’s declaration that “it is clear that neither equity nor the 19 public’s interest are furthered by allowing violations of federal law to continue”). This is because 20 “it would not be equitable or in the public’s interest to allow the [government] . . . to violate the 21 requirements of federal law, especially when there are no adequate remedies available.” Valle del 22 Sol Inc. v. Whiting, 732 F.3d 1006, 1029 (9th Cir. 2013) (second alteration in original) (citation 23 omitted). Indeed, Respondents “cannot suffer harm from an injunction that merely ends an 24 unlawful practice.” Rodriguez, 715 F.3d at 1145. “The public interest benefits from an injunction

1 that ensures that individuals are not deprived of their liberty and held in immigration detention 2 because of . . . a likely [illegal bond] process." Hernandez, 872 F.3d at 996.<sup>4</sup>

3 Accordingly, the balance of hardships and the public interest favor a temporary 4 restraining order to ensure that Respondents comply with federal law and release Mr. Taha.

5 CONCLUSION

6 For the foregoing reasons, Mr. Taha respectfully requests the Court grant his motion for a 7 temporary restraining order. Alternatively, after hearing from Respondents, this Court should 8 convert this motion into a final ruling on the habeas petition and grant the petition for a writ of 9 habeas corpus. See 28 U.S.C. § 2243 (instructing courts to "forthwith award the writ or issue an 10 order directing the respondent to show cause why the writ should not be granted" and requiring a 11 government response to the writ "within three days"); id. ("The court shall summarily hear and 12 determine the facts, and dispose of the matter as law and justice require."). Yong v. I.N.S., 208 13 F.3d 1116, 1120 (9th Cir. 2000) (instructing district courts to expeditiously rule on habeas 14 petitions because the writ is intended to be a "swift and imperative remedy in all cases of illegal 15 restraint or confinement" (citation omitted)).
