In addition therefore it violates my due Process to keep me in immigration detention for more than 8 months on the basis of dangerousness where the overriding reason is that a non-violent crime was committed as a result of my addiction, and I have available plan for rehabilitation and compliance with pertinent conditions of release. I also submitted substantial evidence of my rehabilitation and have robust re-entry plan to address any concern about danger to the community given this context the risk of an erroneous deprivation my high unless a neutral decision maker and ~~my~~ weights my evidence

On the other hand an immigration judge (IJ) may consider an alien's criminal activity and the seriousness of the offenses. when it comes to non-violent crimes especially those cause by addiction the passage of time does make a difference as does the availability of treatment options
