PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

On August 4, 2025, U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (“ICE”) detained Petitioner pending removal proceedings for his presence in the United States without admission or parole. Petitioner now brings a habeas action under 28 U.S.C. § 2241, alleging that the Immigration and Nationality Act (“INA”) and Due Process Clause require ICE to release him. ECF No. 1 (“Pet.”). The Court should dismiss or deny the Petition. Petitioner’s detention is lawful under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b), and mandatory detention under § 1225(b) comports with due process. Even if this Court finds Petitioner’s detention unlawful, the appropriate remedy is a bond hearing before an immigration judge rather than immediate release, as Petitioner requests. Accordingly, the Court should dismiss or deny the Petition.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

I. Relevant Statutory and Regulatory Background

This case concerns the detention authorities for aliens pending removal proceedings. Below, we discuss the relevant statutory and regulatory backdrop for the two detention provisions at issue—8 U.S.C. § 1225(b) and 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a)—as well as the framework for adjudicating removal proceedings under 8 U.S.C. § 1229a.

A. Detention Under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)

Section 1225 applies to “applicants for admission,” who are defined as “alien[s] present in the United States who [have] not been admitted” or “who arrive[] in the United States.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1). Applicants for admission “fall into one of two categories, those covered by § 1225(b)(1) and those covered by § 1225(b)(2).” Jennings

v. Rodriguez, 583 U.S. 281, 287 (2018).

Section 1225(b)(1) applies to (1) “arriving aliens” and (2) aliens who “ha[ve] not been admitted or paroled into the United States” and have not been “physically present in the United States” for two years. 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(A)(i)-(iii). “Arriving aliens” are defined by regulation as “an applicant for admission coming or attempting to come into the United States at a port-of-entry ...” 8 C.F.R. § 1.2. These aliens are generally subject to expedited removal proceedings. See 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(A)(i). If the alien does not indicate an intent to apply for asylum, express fear of persecution, or does not “have such a fear” after inquiry by an officer, the alien is detained until removed. Id. § 1225(b)(1)(A)(i), (B)(iii)(IV).

Section 1225(b)(2)—which applies to Petitioner here—is “broader” and “serves as a catchall provision.” Jennings, 583 U.S. at 287. Indeed, it “applies to all applicants for admission not covered by § 1225(b)(1).” Id. Under § 1225(b)(2), an alien “who is an applicant for admission” shall be detained for a removal proceeding “if the examining immigration officer determines that [the] alien seeking admission is not clearly and beyond a doubt entitled to be admitted.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A); Matter of Yajure Hurtado, 29 I. & N. Dec. 216, 220 (BIA 2025) (“[A]liens who are present in the United States without admission are applicants for admission as defined under section 235(b)(2)(A) of the INA, 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A), and must be detained for the duration of their removal proceedings.”); see also Matter of Q. Li, 29 I. & N. Dec. 66, 68 (BIA 2025) (“[F]or aliens arriving in and seeking admission into the United States who are placed directly in full removal proceedings, section 235(b)(2)(A) of the INA, 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A), mandates detention ‘until removal proceedings have concluded.’”). Still, the U.S. Department of Homeland Security (“DHS”) has the sole discretionary authority to temporarily release on parole “any alien applying for admission to the United States” on a “case-by-case basis for urgent humanitarian reasons or significant public benefit.” Id. § 1182(d)(5)(A).

B. Detention Under 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a)

Section 1226 provides for arrest and detention on a warrant “pending a decision on whether the alien is to be removed from the United States.” 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a). Under § 1226(a), immigration officials may detain an alien during removal proceedings, release the alien on bond, or release the alien on conditional parole.<sup>1</sup> By regulation, immigration officers can release an alien if the alien demonstrates that he “would not pose a danger to property or persons” and “is likely to appear for any future proceeding.” 8 C.F.R. § 236.1(c)(8). An alien can also request that an Immigration Judge conduct a custody redetermination hearing any time before a final order of removal is issued for the alien. See 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a); 8 C.F.R. §§ 236.1(d)(1), 1236.1(d)(1), 1003.19. At a custody redetermination hearing (i.e., a bond hearing), the Immigration Judge may continue detention, release the alien on bond, or release the alien on conditional parole. 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a); 8 C.F.R. § 1236.1(d)(1). Immigration

<sup>1</sup> Being “conditionally paroled under the authority of § 1226(a)” is distinct from being “paroled into the United States under the authority of § 1182(d)(5)(A).” Ortega-Cervantes v. Gonzales, 501 F.3d 1111, 1116 (9th Cir. 2007) (holding that because release on “conditional parole” under § 1226(a) is not a parole, the alien was not eligible for adjustment of status under § 1255(a)); Matter of Cabrera-Fernandez, 28 I. & N. Dec. 747, 749 (BIA 2023).

Judges have broad discretion in deciding whether to release an alien on bond. Matter of Guerra, 24 I. & N. Dec. 37, 39–40 (BIA 2006) (listing nine factors for Immigration Judges to consider). But an alien “who presents a danger to persons or property should not be released during the pendency of removal proceedings.” Id. at 38.

C. Removal Proceedings Under 8 U.S.C. § 1229a

Removal proceedings under § 1229a are commonly referred to as “full removal proceedings” or “240 removal proceedings” due to the statutory section of the INA in which they appear. 8 U.S.C. § 1229a; INA § 240. The proceedings take place before an Immigration Judge. 8 U.S.C. § 1229a(a)(1), (b)(1). Aliens in 1229a proceedings have an opportunity to apply for relief from removal. See, e.g., 8 U.S.C. § 1158 (asylum); 8 U.S.C. § 1229b(b) (cancellation of removal for nonpermanent residents); 8 U.S.C. § 1255 (adjustment of status). The proceedings are adversarial, allowing the alien the right to counsel, examine and present evidence, and cross-examine witnesses. 8 U.S.C. § 1229a(b)(4). Either party may appeal the Immigration Judge’s decision to the Board of Immigration Appeals (“BIA”). 8 U.S.C. § 1229a(b)(4)(C); see also 8 C.F.R. § 1240.15. And, if the BIA issues a final order of removal, an alien may also seek judicial review at a U.S. court of appeals through a petition for review. 8 U.S.C. § 1252.

II. Petitioner’s Immigration History

Petitioner is a native and citizen of Nicaragua who unlawfully entered the United States without inspection in 2022. See ECF No. 1-2 at 3 (noting entry was on 9/6/2022); ECF No. 2-1, Exhibit O (“NTA”) (noting entry was on 11/6/2022). On August 4, 2025, DHS issued a Notice to Appear, charging Petitioner as being present in the United States without being admitted or paroled in violation of 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(6)(A)(i), pending removal proceedings under 8 U.S.C. § 1229a, as well as for not being in possession of a valid unexpired immigrant visa, reentry permit, border crossing card, or other valid entry document at the time of his application for admission in violation of 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(7)(A)(i)(I). See NTA at 4; see 8 C.F.R. § 1103.13 (defining Notice to Appear as “written instrument which initiates proceedings before an Immigration Judge.”).

On August 4, 2025, DHS served Petitioner with Notice to Appear citing violations of INA §§ 212(a)(6)(A)(i) and 212(a)(7)(A)(i)(I) and placing him in removal proceedings. See ECF No. 1-2 at 3; ECF No. 2-1 at Ex. O. Petitioner was taken into custody the next day. ECF No. 1-2 at 3. Following his detention, Petitioner applied for asylum. Pet. ¶ 20. On September 15, 2025, Petitioner requested a custody redetermination, which the Immigration Judge denied. See ECF No. 1-2 at 4; ECF No. 2-1, Exhibit A (“Bond Order Decision”).

III. Procedural History

Petitioner filed this habeas petition on September 30, 2025, challenging his detention under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2). Petitioner argues that the proper authority for his detention arises under 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a), and so any detention under § 1225(b)(2)—which, unlike § 1226(a), is mandatory and does not allow for a bond hearing—violates the INA and its regulations, the Administrative Procedure Act (“APA”), and the Due Process Clause. See Pet. ¶¶ 31-40.

Petitioner seeks release and preliminary and permanent injunctive relief enjoining Respondents from further detaining him. See id. at Prayer for Relief. On October 3, 2025, the Court directed Respondents to answer the petition within 20 days. See ECF No. 4. Respondents now move to dismiss the petition.

STANDARD OF REVIEW

28 U.S.C. § 2241(c)(3) authorizes a court to grant a writ of habeas corpus where a prisoner “is in custody in violation of the Constitution or laws or treaties of the United States.” Rule 4 of the Rules Governing Section 2254 Cases in the United States District Courts, which is applicable to § 2241 petitions through Rule 1(b), provides this Court with the authority to dismiss a habeas petition if it “plainly appears from the petition and any attached exhibits that the petitioner is not entitled to relief.” See also Moncrieffe v. Yost, 367 Fed. Appx. 286, 288 n.2 (3d Cir. 2010) (noting summary dismissal of a § 2241 habeas petition is appropriate pursuant to Rule 4 of the Rules Governing Section 2254 Cases). “Federal courts are authorized to dismiss summarily any habeas petition that appears legally insufficient on its face.” McFarland v. Scott, 512 U.S. 849, 856 (1994) (citing 28 U.S.C. § 2254, Rule 4).

LEGAL ARGUMENT

The Court should dismiss the petition because Petitioner’s detention is lawful. The plain text of the INA demonstrates that Petitioner is correctly considered an “applicant for admission” and subject to mandatory detention under § 1225(b)(2). Petitioner’s detention also comports with due process.

I. Petitioner is Properly Detained Under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)

In Counts 1 through 3, Petitioner challenges his detention under § 1225(b)(2) arguing that applying that authority to detain him violates the INA, its regulations, and the APA. See Pet. ¶¶ 31-40; ECF No. 1-2 at 10-23. Petitioner is incorrect as a matter of plain meaning. The text of § 1225(b)(2) is clear: it allows for mandatory detention to any alien “present in the United States who has not been admitted.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a), (b)(2). Petitioner falls in that category, and his arguments to the contrary are unavailing.

A. Petitioner’s Detention is Lawful Under the Plain Text of the INA

Where, as here, the question is one of statutory interpretation, “we start where we always do: with the text of the statute.” Van Buren v. United States, 593 U.S. 374, 381 (2021). Section 1225(b)(2) provides, “in the case of an alien who is an applicant for admission, if the examining immigration officer determines that an alien seeking admission is not clearly and beyond a doubt entitled to be admitted, the alien shall be detained” pending removal proceedings. This provision, then, has three key components. The alien must be: (1) an “applicant for admission”; (2) who is “seeking admission”; and (3) an examining immigration officer has determined the alien “is not clearly and beyond a doubt entitled to be admitted.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2). Petitioner meets all three.

Petitioner is an “applicant for admission” under the INA. An “applicant for admission” means any “alien present in the United States who has not been admitted” or “who arrives in the United States.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1). Petitioner does not dispute that he is present in the United States but “entered . . . without parole or inspection.” Pet. ¶ 16. Indeed, DHS issued a Notice to Appear on the basis that Petitioner is “an alien present in the United States without being admitted or paroled.” NTA (citing 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(6)(A)(i)). Petitioner meets the statutory definition of an “applicant for admission” under § 1225(a)(1).

Petitioner is also “seeking admission.” The INA defines “admission” as “the lawful entry of the alien into the United States after inspection and authorization by an immigration officer.” 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(13)(A). When it comes to interpreting “seeking admission” in § 1225(b)(2), the phrase must be read in context with “applicant for admission” as defined by § 1225(a). See Abramski v. United States, 573 U.S. 169, 179 (2014) (instructing courts to “interpret the relevant words not in a vacuum, but with reference to the statutory context, ‘structure, history and purpose.’” (quotation omitted)). As noted above, Congress defined ‘applicant for admission’ under § 1225(a) to include both those who arrive in the United States and those present without admission. See 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1) (emphasis added). Both are understood to be “seeking admission” under § 1225(a)(1). See Matter of Lemus-Losa, 25 I. & N. 734, 743 (BIA 2012) (recognizing “‘applicant for admission’” includes “not just those who are expressly seeking permission to enter, but also those who are present in this country without having formally requested or received such permission.”).

This is not to say the words “seeking admission” and “applicant for admission” are identical. The former is broader than the latter. For example, the INA contemplates that “stowaways” may seek admission by requesting asylum, yet stowaways are excluded from the definition of “applicant of admission.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(2). In addition, an applicant for admission must be physically present in the United States, while an alien can “seek admission” in the United States or outside of it, such as in an embassy before a consular officer. See Romero v. Hyde, No. 25-cv-11631, 2025 WL 2403827, at *9 (D. Mass. Aug. 19, 2025) (although ruling against ICE, noting terms have slightly different breadth). That is why, in § 1225(a)(3), immigration officers must inspect all aliens “who are applicants for admission or otherwise seeking admission.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(3) (emphasis added).

The relevant phrases play out in a commonsense way in § 1225(b)(2). The statute begins with a limiting clause: the subsection applies to “any applicant for admission,” which means only those physically present and who can be detained. This avoids the conclusion that § 1225(b)(2) applies to those “seeking admission” from abroad; say, in an embassy. Having made clear that § 1225(b)(2) applies only to those present, it continues with a second clause mandating detention if the immigration officer finds the “alien seeking admission” is not entitled to it. See Adamowicz v. I.R.S., 552 F. Supp. 2d 355, 367–68 (S.D.N.Y. 2008) (“[A] limiting clause or phrase ... should ordinarily be read as modifying only the noun or phrase that it immediately follows.”).

Here, Petitioner is an applicant for admission who is present in the United States without having been admitted. He satisfies the second element, “seeking admission,” under § 1225(b)(2).

An examining immigration officer charged Petitioner with being inadmissible under the INA. Petitioner also meets the final element under § 1225(b)(2), which is that an examining immigration officer determined he “is not clearly and beyond a doubt entitled to be admitted.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A). Here, an examining officer made that determination when DHS issued a Notice to Appear charging Petitioner with being inadmissible under the INA. See NTA (citing 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(6)(A)(i)).

For the reasons above, Petitioner is an “applicant for admission” under the plain meaning of § 1225(a)(1), and subject to mandatory detention under the text of § 1225(b)(2)(A). See Matter of Yajure Hurtado, 29 I. & N. Dec. 216; Vargas Lopez v. Trump, No. 25-526, 2025 WL 2780351, at *9 (D. Neb. Sept. 30, 2025) (finding alien properly detained under § 1225(b)(2) because he was present in United States without having been admitted, and thus an applicant for admission under § 1225(a)); Chavez v. Noem, No. 25-02325, 2025 WL 2730228, at *4-5 (S.D. Cal. Sept. 24, 2025) (same); Pipa-Aquise v. Bondi, No. 25-1094, 2025 WL 2490657, at *1 (E.D. Va. Aug. 5, 2025) (same); Pena v. Hyde, No. 25-11983, 2025 WL 2108913, at *2 (D. Mass. July 28, 2025) (upholding detention under § 1225(b)(2) of alien “present in the country but [who] has not yet been lawfully granted admission”); but see Rivera Zumba v. Bondi, No. 25-14626 (KSH), 2025 WL 2753496, at *7–9 (D.N.J. Sept. 26, 2025) (holding alien residing in the United States for 20 years was not affirmatively “seeking admission” and therefore not subject to § 1225(b)(2)).

For the reasons above, Respondents respectfully submit that the Court should dismiss Counts 1 through 3 of the Petition because Petitioner’s detention is authorized under § 1225(b)(2).

B. The Supreme Court’s Decision in Jennings and Recent BIA Decisions Support Applying 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)

Respondents’ reading of the statutory text is supported by recent Supreme Court and BIA precedent. As the Supreme Court has recognized, applicants for admission “fall into one of two categories, those covered by § 1225(b)(1) and those covered by § 1225(b)(2).” Jennings, 583 U.S. at 287. The former, which is not relevant here, applies to arriving aliens and “certain other” aliens “initially determined to be inadmissible due to fraud, misrepresentation, or lack of valid documentation.” Id. It is also temporally limited to arriving aliens and aliens present less than two years. See 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1). Here, Petitioner has been present for almost three years, since 2022. Therefore, the latter provision, § 1225(b)(2), applies to Petitioner because it is a “broader ... catchall provision” applying to “all applicants for admission not covered by § 1225(b)(1).” Id. In other words, because Petitioner is an applicant for admission who is not covered by § 1225(b)(1), he falls within the “catchall provision” in § 1225(b)(2).

The BIA is the highest-level administrative body for interpreting immigration law. It, too, recently adopted this understanding of § 1225(b)(2) in a decision that binds all immigration judges and is persuasive authority here. See generally Matter of Yajure Hurtado, 29 I. & N. Dec. 216 (interpreting § 1225(b)(2)(A) to require detention of aliens present in the United States without admission); see also Ahmed v. Ashcroft, 341 F.3d 214, 217 (3d Cir. 2003) (“We defer to the BIA’s interpretation of the Immigration and Nationality Act (“INA”) unless the interpretation is ‘arbitrary, capricious, or manifestly contrary to the statute.’”).

The BIA’s interpretation of § 1225(b)(2) follows directly from the plain text. As discussed above, § 1225(b) requires ICE to detain two types of “applicants for admission”—those who have “arrived in the United States” and those “who ha[ve] not been admitted.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1). “[A]rrive[d] in the United States” means an alien who has just entered the country—such as at the airport or at the U.S. border—or did so very recently. See Dep’t of Homeland Sec. v. Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. 103, 139 (2020). But aliens “have not been admitted” if no immigration officer inspected them or authorized them to be here. See 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(13)(A) (defining “admission”). Petitioner falls into that latter category. As the Supreme Court recognized, and as the BIA has held, the latter category is broader and includes Petitioner because he is present in the United States without admission or parole. See Jennings, 583 U.S. at 287 (noting § 1225(b)(2) is a “broader,” “catchall provision” that “applies to all applicants for admission not covered by § 1225(b)(1)”). Accordingly, Petitioner’s detention is lawful under § 1225(b)(2).

C. Petitioner’s Arguments Cannot Re-Write § 1225’s Plain Meaning

Petitioner contends that § 1226(a) provides the sole authority for his detention, and thus any detention under § 1225(b)(2) must violate the INA. See ECF No. 1-2 at 9-23. Petitioner is mistaken for several reasons.<sup>2</sup>

Petitioner appears to argue that 1226(a) is a sort of “default” provision that “applies to noncitizens here in the United States who entered without inspection.” ECF No. 1-2 at 13. But 8 U.S.C. § 1225 is much narrower; it covers only “applicants for admission,” which, as noted above, is a specifically defined subset of aliens that explicitly includes those “present in the United States who ha[ve] not been admitted.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a). Petitioner fits squarely within that definition. And where, as here, there is any arguable overlap between two statutory provisions, the “commonplace rule of statutory interpretation is that the specific governs the general, particularly when Congress has targeted specific solutions in the context of a general statute.” Aristy-Rosa v. Attorney Gen., 994 F.3d 112, 116 n.4 (3d Cir. 2021) (quotations omitted). The specific detention authority in § 1225 governs over the general or “default” authority described in § 1226.

Along these lines, Petitioner’s argument that § 1225(b)(2)(A) is cabined to aliens arriving at U.S. ports of entry or who very recently entered the United States, ECF No. 1-2 at 15-16, 19-20, cannot be squared with the INA. Indeed, any such argument ignores half the definition of “applicant for admission.” Congress defined an applicant for admission to mean two things: (1) an arriving alien; or (2) an alien present without being admitted. See 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1). The former is someone <sup>2</sup> Petitioner’s arguments largely track those accepted by almost all district courts to have considered this issue. See, e.g., ECF No. 1-2 at 11-12, n.1 (collecting cases and noting specifically the Rivera Zumba v. Bondi, 2025 WL 2753496 decision in this District). For the reasons provided here, Respondents respectfully disagree with those decisions and Petitioner’s arguments here.

“coming or attempting to come into the United States at a port of entry. . . .” 8 C.F.R. § 1.2 (defining “arriving alien”). This covers an encounter at the border or soon thereafter. See Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. at 139 (finding § 235(a) applied to aliens “taken into custody the instant [they] attempted to enter the country (as would have been the case had he arrived at a lawful port of entry)” and those who “succeeded in making it [a short distance] into U. S. territory before [being] caught”).

But the second type of person covered under § 1225(b)(2)—an alien present without being admitted—must mean something else. Petitioner falls in this “broader” or “catchall” category. See Jennings, 583 U.S. at 287. He is an alien present in the United States without being admitted within the definition of § 1225(a)(1), so the “catchall provision” in § 1225(b)(2), which “applies to all applicants for admission not covered by § 1225(b)(1),” governs his detention. Id.<sup>3</sup>

The Laken Riley Act (“LRA”), which added § 1226(c)(1)(E) to the statute, does

<sup>3</sup> Even though § 1225(b) requires the detention of both types of applicants for admission, immigration officials did not always interpret it that way. Specifically, DHS’s predecessor agency, the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service (“INS”), read § 1225(b) to apply only to those who have arrived in the United States. That is, while INS detained arriving aliens, INS chose whether to detain aliens who have not been admitted. Inspection and Expedited Removal of Aliens; Detention and Removal of Aliens; Conduct of Removal Proceedings; Asylum Procedures, 62 Fed. Reg. 10312-01, 10323, 1997 WL 93131, (Mar. 6, 1997) (“Despite being applicants for admission, aliens who are present without having been admitted or paroled (formerly referred to as aliens who entered without inspection) will be eligible for bond and bond redetermination.”). Aliens present without admission were detained under § 1226(a). See id. As of July 8, 2025, however, ICE has taken the position that all applicants for admission, including those who are present without admission, are subject to mandatory detention under § 1225(b)(2). ICE takes this position because it accords with the plain language of the statute and is consistent with recent caselaw from the BIA, the highest-level administrative body for interpreting immigration law. See Matter of Yajure Hurtado, 29 I. & N. Dec. 216 (BIA 2025).

not alter this conclusion. See ECF No. 1-2 at 14. That provision now requires mandatory detention for various types of “inadmissible” aliens, which, according to Petitioner, makes clear that 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a) applies here. Id. Respondents disagree.

The LRA arose, according to Congress, after an inadmissible alien “was paroled into this country through a shocking abuse of that power.” 171 Cong. Rec. H278 (daily ed. Jan 22, 2025) (statement of Rep. McClintock). Congress passed the law out of concern that the executive branch “ignore[d] its fundamental duty under the Constitution to defend its citizens.” Id. at H269 (statement of Rep. Roy). One member of Congress noted this redundancy, stating that “every illegal alien is currently required to be detained by current law throughout the pendency of their asylum claims.” Id. at H278 (statement of Rep. McClintock). The LRA thus reflects a “congressional effort to be doubly sure” that such unlawful aliens are detained. See Barton v. Barr, 590 U.S. 222, 239 (2020) (recognizing redundancies in statutory drafting are “common . . . sometimes in a congressional effort to be doubly sure.”). That does not change what Congress intended when it passed the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996 (“IIRIRA”), which added 8 U.S.C. §§ 1225(a)(1) to the INA. See Pub. L. No. 104-208, § 302, 110 Stat. 3009-546; see also Almendarez-Torres v. United States, 523 U.S. 224, 237 (1998) (“These later-enacted laws, however, are beside the point. They do not declare the meaning of earlier law. . . or a change in the meaning of an earlier statute.”); see also S. Dakota v. Yankton Sioux Tribe, 522 U.S. 329, 355 (1998) (“[T]he views of a subsequent Congress form a hazardous basis for inferring the intent of an earlier one.”) (quoting United States v. Philadelphia Nat. Bank, 374 U.S. 321, 348–349 (1963)). In sum, nothing in the LRA requires that the alien who falls under § 1225(b)(2) be treated as an alien detained under § 1226(a).

Indeed, the legislative history of the INA cuts against Petitioner’s argument that detention under § 1225(b)(2) is improper for aliens in his situation.<sup>4</sup> Congress passed the IIRIRA to correct “an anomaly whereby immigrants who were attempting to lawfully enter the United States were in a worse position than persons who had crossed the border unlawfully.” Torres v. Barr, 976 F.3d 918, 928 (9th Cir. 2020) (en banc). It “intended to replace certain aspects of the [then] current ‘entry doctrine,’ under which illegal aliens who have entered the United States without inspection gain equities and privileges in immigration proceedings that are not available to aliens who present themselves for inspection at a port of entry.” Id. (quoting H.R. Rep. 104-469, pt. 1, at 225). Respondents’ reading of § 1225(b)(2) makes sense. It would not put aliens who “crossed the border unlawfully” in a better position than those “who present themselves for inspection at a port of entry.” Id. Otherwise, aliens who presented at a port of entry would be subject to mandatory detention, but those who crossed illegally, like Petitioner, would be eligible for bond.

In the end, Petitioner’s argument is premised on the notion that § 1225(b) and <sup>4</sup> To be sure, when the plain text of a statute is clear, that meaning controls, and courts “need not consider ... extra-textual evidence” like legislative “history, purpose, and post-enactment practice.” N.L.R.B. v. SW General, Inc., 580 U.S. 288, 305 (2017). But to the extent legislative history is relevant, it supports Respondents.

§ 1226(a) are mutually exclusive provisions. They are not. See Vargas Lopez, 2025 WL 2780351, at *7-9 (rejecting argument that two provisions apply to distinct groups and concluding alien may properly be detained under § 1225(b)(2) even if also subject to § 1226(a)).

Petitioner's claim to the contrary appears based, in part, on a selective quotation from Jennings. See ECF No. 1-2 at 12-13; Jennings, 583 U.S. at 287 (recognizing that the process of determining “(1) who may enter the country and (2) who may stay here after entering,” under § 1225, “generally begins at the Nation’s borders and ports of entry...”). In Jennings, the Court “did not state that § 1225(b) applies only ‘to aliens seeking entry into the United States’; rather, the Supreme Court said § 1225(b) ‘applies primarily to aliens seeking entry into the United States.’” Vargas Lopez, 2025 WL 2780351, at *9 (quoting Jennings, 583 U.S. at 297). Based on the plain text of the INA, “the additional aliens to whom § 1225(b) applies are ‘alien[s] present in the United States who ha[ve] not been admitted’ according to the definition of ‘applicants for admission’ in § 1225(a)(1).” Id. (quoting § 1225(a)). Indeed, nothing in the text of the INA supports the reading that detention under § 1225(b)(2) and § 1226(a) are mutually exclusive. See id. And “the Supreme Court’s decision in Jennings does not state that § 1225(b) and § 1226(a) apply to distinct groups of aliens.” Id. at *9 n.5. Here, then, “[e]ven if [Petitioner] might fall within the scope of § 1226(a), he certainly fits,” for the reasons discussed above, “within the language of § 1225(b)(2) as well.” Id. at *9.

For the reasons above, the Court should dismiss Counts 1 through 3 because

Petitioner's detention is lawful under § 1225(b)(2).<sup>5</sup>

II. Petitioner's Detention Does Not Violate the Due Process Clause

As discussed above, the INA authorizes Petitioner's detention under § 1225(b)(2). Notwithstanding this statutory framework, Petitioner argues in Counts I and II that his continued detention violates the substantive and procedural components of the Due Process Clause. See Pet. ¶¶ 31-37. The Court should reject this argument.

An applicant for admission who remains in the country unlawfully is entitled to due process rights. See Pena, 2025 WL 2108913, at *2 (D. Mass. July 28, 2025) (citing Wong Wing v. United States, 163 U.S. 228, 238 (1896)); see also Reno v. Flores, 507 U.S. 292, 306 (1993). But those rights are coterminous “only to those rights and protections Congress set forth by statute”; the Due Process Clause “requires nothing more.” Id. (quoting Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. at 140). That is because “the

<sup>5</sup> If the court holds that § 1226(a) applies to Petitioner, the appropriate remedy is a bond hearing conducted by an Immigration Judge, not immediate release. See Valeriano v. Bondi, No. 25-16100 (MAS), ECF No. 4 (D.N.J. Oct. 1, 2025), at 2 (“As Petitioner acknowledges, even under his reading of the relevant immigration statutes, he is still subject to detention under 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a), albeit with an entitlement to seek bond from an immigration judge. Should Petitioner prevail in this matter, the proper relief would constitute an order directing the Government to provide Petitioner with the bond hearing to which he contends he is entitled under § 1226(a).”); cf. Barbot v. Warden Hudson Cnty. Corr. Facility, 966 F.3d 274, 278–79 (3d Cir. 2018); but see, e.g., Rivera Zumba, 2025 WL 2753496, at *10–11 (ordering release and “temporarily enjoin[ing] respondents from re-arresting petitioner under . . . 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a) for 14 days after her release”). Moreover, the burden of proof in any such hearing falls on Petitioner. “Nothing in § 1226(a)’s text . . . even remotely supports the imposition” of the burden on the government to prove that an alien is a danger or a flight risk, much less by clear and convincing evidence. Jennings, 583 U.S. at 306.

Constitution gives the political department of the government plenary authority to decide which aliens to admit, and a concomitant of that power is the power to set the procedures to be followed in determining whether an alien should be admitted.” Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. at 139 (citation omitted) (cleaned up). Those procedures authorize detention pending removal proceedings, which is a “constitutionally valid aspect of the deportation process.” Demore v. Kim, 538 U.S. 510, 523 (2003).

Here, as discussed above, Petitioner is an “applicant for admission” under the plain text of the INA whose detention complies with § 1225(b)(2). “And because Petitioner’s detention complies with the relevant statutes, namely Section 1225(b), ‘the Due Process Clause provides nothing more.’” Pipa-Aquise, 2025 WL 2490657, at *2 (E.D. Va. Aug. 5, 2025) (quotation omitted); see also Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. at 138 (recognizing, as to, aliens who have never “been admitted into the country pursuant to law, the decisions of executive or administrative officers, acting within powers expressly conferred by Congress, are due process of law.” (quotation omitted)).

Nor is Petitioner’s detention unconstitutionally prolonged. Although “nothing in the statutory text imposes any limit on the length of detention” under § 1225(b)(2), Jennings, 583 U.S. at 297, courts within this District considering as-applied due process challenges under the statute have looked to whether the detention without bond has become so prolonged as to be considered unreasonable. See Adel G. v. Warden, Essex Cnty. Jail, No. 19-13512 (KM), 2020 WL 1243993, at *2 (D.N.J. Mar. 13, 2020) (collecting cases). This turns on whether the detention has become “so unreasonable as to amount to an arbitrary deprivation of liberty which cannot comport with the requirements of the Due Process Clause.” Id. (quoting Dryden v. Green, 321 F.Supp.3d 496, 502 (D.N.J. 2018)). This is a high bar. While there is no “bright line rule which marks the border between constitutional and unconstitutional detention” under § 1225(b), several courts “within this district have previously found that detention for fifteen months or less is insufficient to support an as-applied challenge to detention under § 1225(b).” Id. (citing cases). Here, Petitioner has been detained pursuant to § 1225(b)(2) since August 4, 2025, which is less than three months. Petitioner’s detention therefore comports with due process. See, e.g., Pipa-Aquise, 2025 WL 2490657, at *1 (holding “two-month detention” under § 1225(b) did not violate due process); Cf. Zadvydas v. Davis, 533 U.S. 678, 690 (2001) (finding post-final-order detentions under six months presumptively reasonable); German Santos v. Warden Pike Cnty. Corr. Facility, 965 F.3d 203, 210-11 (3d Cir. 2020) (holding that Due Process Clause demands bond hearing only when detention pending removal under § 1226(c)—which, like § 1225(b)(2), requires mandatory detention—has become “unreasonably prolonged,” which is “highly fact-specific inquiry,” without a bright line).<sup>6</sup>

Petitioner’s detention, pending the conclusion of removal proceedings, is presumptively reasonable.<sup>7</sup> But even if the Court were to conclude that a less than

<sup>6</sup> Courts outside this District have held similarly that § 1225(b) detention, under thirteen months, is not unconstitutionally prolonged. See, e.g., Rodriguez v. Bondi, No. 25-791, 2025 WL 2490670, at *3 (E.D. Va. June 24, 2025) (collecting cases).

<sup>7</sup> Petitioner is scheduled for an individual hearing in immigration court on November 13, 2025. See Exhibit 1 (“Hearing Notice”).

three-month detention under § 1225(b) has become “unreasonable” under the Due Process Clause, the appropriate remedy is a bond hearing conducted by an Immigration Judge, not immediate release. See, e.g., Akhmadjanov v. Oddo, No. 25-35, 2025 WL 660663, at *5 (W.D. Pa. Feb. 28, 2025); Rodriguez, 2025 WL 2490670, at *3. Accordingly, Respondents respectfully submit that if the Court finds Petitioner’s detention is unreasonable, it should order an Immigration Judge to conduct a bond hearing rather than order Petitioner’s release.
