EMERGENCY MOTION FOR TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER

IMMIGRATION HABEAS CASE

PETITIONER'S EMERGENCY MOTION FOR TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER

Petitioner, by and through undersigned counsel, respectfully moves this Court for a Temporary Restraining Order (TRO) pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 65(b), to enjoin Respondents from removing Petitioner from the United States while his habeas petition is pending and to immediately release him from custody.

I. INTRODUCTION

Esneyder Fernando Rivera Gomez (Petitioner), by and through his undersigned counsel, hereby files this petition for a Temporary Restraining Order. Petitioner entered the United States on October 23, 2023 after having presented himself at the border for asylum. Ex. 1. Petitioner is a native and citizen of Colombia. Id. At the border, Petitioner was given a credible fear interview and was permitted to enter the United States on a form of parole. Ex. 4; see also 8 U.S.C. 1182(d)(5).

Soon after removal proceedings were commenced against Petitioner. Ex. 1. On May 28, 2025, DHS filed a motion with the immigration judge to dismiss proceedings, alleging that Petitioner was subject to expedited removal. Ex. 3. However, soon after, DHS discovered that he had already been subjected to expedited removal and was found to have a credible fear of return to his home country. Ex. 4. DHS immediately filed a motion to reconsider the IJ's decision. Ex. 2.

Immediately after dismissing proceedings, Petitioner filed an appeal of the IJ's decision with the Board of Immigration Appeals, which kept the dismissal from being final. Ex. 5. On September 24, 2025, Petitioner withdrew his appeal, thus making the dismissal final. Ex. 5. On October 30, 2025, the Board of Immigration Appeals dismissed the appeal, to date, no further removal proceedings have commenced. Ex. 7.

Under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1), certain arriving aliens who are not lawful permanent residents and who lack proper entry documents may be subject to expedited removal. This process allows

1 immigration officers at a port of entry, or within 100 miles of the border, to quickly determine
2 admissibility and order removal without a full hearing before an immigration judge. Expedited removal
3 is typically applied to individuals who have recently entered the United States or attempted entry
4 without inspection, and it is designed to prevent inadmissible persons from entering the country. During 5 the expedited removal process, the alien is detained pending a credible fear screening; if the alien
6 expresses a credible fear of persecution or torture, they may be referred for a full asylum interview and 7 proceedings before an immigration judge. Importantly, release from detention prior to these
8 proceedings is only available through discretionary parole under 8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5), emphasizing 9 the mandatory detention framework for arriving aliens.
10
12

13 If an arriving alien is found to have a credible fear, then the expedited removal proceedings are 14 terminated and the alien is referred to an immigration judge for removal proceedings under 8 U.S.C.
15 1229a. 8 C.F.R. § 235.6.
16

17 Once an asylum officer determines that an alien has a credible fear of persecution or torture,
18 the expedited removal proceedings under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1) and 8 C.F.R. § 235.3 are terminated,
19 and the alien is referred to an immigration judge for full removal proceedings under 8 U.S.C. § 1229a.
20 At that point, DHS may not recommence expedited removal proceedings against the same alien for the 21 same encounter, as doing so would circumvent the statutory and regulatory framework established to 22 ensure that individuals with a credible fear are afforded a full hearing and the opportunity to apply for 23 asylum, withholding of removal, or protection under the Convention Against Torture. This principle is 24 reflected in the USCIS and EOIR guidance, which emphasizes that credible fear findings convert the 25 alien's case from an expedited removal process to formal removal proceedings before an immigration
26 judge.
27
28

1 When the removal proceedings under 8 U.S.C. § 1229a were dismissed, this would have
2 terminated all removal proceedings, but for Petitioner's appeal. Since Petitioner's appeal has been
3 dismissed, there are currently no open removal proceedings under the Immigration and Nationality Act.
4 As Petitioner has a positive credible fear determination, DHS cannot re-commence proceedings under
5 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1). DHS has not recommenced non-expedited removal proceedings, and his asylum
6 application has been dismissed. Ex. 3.
7

8
9 Because the petitioner has no pending or open removal proceedings, DHS lacks statutory
10 authority to detain him. Under the Immigration and Nationality Act, detention authority is tied either
11 to removal proceedings (8 U.S.C. §§ 1226, 1229a) or to mandatory detention for arriving aliens (8
12 U.S.C. § 1225(b)). Once an alien is no longer in expedited removal or formal removal proceedings,
13 and does not otherwise fall within a category requiring mandatory detention, DHS cannot lawfully
14 continue to hold the individual. Detention under these circumstances is therefore ultra vires, and the 15 petitioner must be released unless DHS can identify a separate, lawful basis for custody. Courts have 16 repeatedly recognized that immigration detention must be grounded in statutory authority, and absent
17 such authority, continued detention violates the petitioner's constitutional and statutory rights.
19

20 II. LEGAL STANDARD

21 A Temporary Restraining Order (TRO) is an extraordinary remedy, but it is warranted when 22 the movant satisfies the four-part standard set forth by the Supreme Court. To obtain a TRO, the 23 Petitioner must show:
24

- 25 1. A likelihood of success on the merits,
- 26 2. Irreparable harm in the absence of relief,
- 27 3. The balance of equities favors the movant, and
- 28 4. The injunction is in the public interest.

1 Winter v. NRDC, 555 U.S. 7, 20 (2008); Monsanto Co. v. Geertson Seed Farms, 561 U.S. 139,
2 156 (2010).

4 Likelihood of success on the merits requires that the Petitioner demonstrate that it is “more
5 likely than not” that the legal claim will prevail. Courts recognize that noncitizens with pending asylum
6 applications have a statutory and regulatory right to have those claims adjudicated before removal.
7

8 Irreparable harm exists when the injury cannot be adequately remedied by money damages or 9 other legal relief. Winter, 555 U.S. at 20.

10 Balance of equities requires weighing the harm to the Petitioner against any potential harm to 11 the Respondents from issuance of a TRO. Winter, 555 U.S. at 24.

13 Public interest favors compliance with statutory and regulatory requirements, and the United
14 States’ obligations under international law to protect individuals from persecution and torture.

15 III. ARGUMENT

16
17 Petitioner is entitled to a Temporary Restraining Order because all four factors for injunctive
18 relief are met: (1) likelihood of success on the merits, (2) irreparable harm, (3) balance of equities, and 19 (4) public interest. Winter v. NRDC, 555 U.S. 7, 20 (2008); Monsanto Co. v. Geertson Seed Farms, 20 561 U.S. 139, 156 (2010).

21 A. Petitioner Is Likely to Succeed on the Merits

22 i. Respondents Are Unlawfully Detaining the Plaintiff

23
24 The Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution prohibits the federal
25 government from depriving any person of “life, liberty, or property, without due process of law.” U.S.
26 Const. Amend. V. Due process protects “all ‘persons’ within the United States, including [non-
27 citizens], whether their presence here is lawful, unlawful, temporary, or permanent.” Zadvydas, 533
28 U.S. at 693.57.

1 Here, the petitioner is currently detained by DHS despite having no pending removal
2 proceedings, no pending asylum, or other statutory basis for custody. Because detention authority under
3 the INA is tied to either formal removal proceedings (8 U.S.C. §§ 1226, 1229a) or mandatory detention
4 of arriving aliens (8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)), the petitioner's continued detention is unsupported by any
5 statutory provision. As a result, DHS's actions deprive him of his liberty without due process of law,
6 in violation of the Fifth Amendment. Under Zadvydas, detention must be grounded in statutory
7 authority and reasonably related to the government's legitimate interest in effectuating removal; absent
8 a removal order or credible fear proceedings, there is no lawful basis for holding the petitioner, and 9 continued confinement constitutes a clear deprivation of liberty without due process.
10

12
13 The Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) sets forth specific circumstances under which the 14 federal government may detain noncitizens. Under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1), arriving aliens may be 15 detained pending a determination of admissibility or the determination of his asylum application, and
16 under 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a), the Attorney General may take into custody aliens who are already in removal
17 proceedings. Additionally, 8 U.S.C. § 1226(c) mandates detention for certain criminal aliens during 18 removal proceedings. Once an alien is no longer subject to expedited removal, has completed credible
19 fear proceedings, has had his asylum dismissed, or does not fall within one of these statutory categories,
20 the INA provides no authority for continued detention.

23 Here, the petitioner has no open removal proceedings, has no pending asylum petition, and has
24 no other statutory category that would authorize detention. Consequently, DHS's continued custody of 25 the petitioner exceeds the statutory authority granted under the INA and is therefore unlawful. Courts
26 have consistently recognized that immigration detention must be tied to statutory authority, and absent
27 such authority, detention violates both the INA and the Constitution. See Zadvydas v. Davis, 533 U.S.
28 678 (2001).

1 Because the petitioner does not fall within any statutory basis for detention under the INA, his
2 continued confinement is ultra vires, and DHS is required to release him immediately.

3
4 B. Petitioner Will Suffer Irreparable Harm

5 Petitioner is currently being deprived of his liberty and property while being detained. He is
6 unable to work and unable to provide for his family. DHS is actively attempting to remove Plaintiff to 7 his home country despite having a positive credible fear determination. If he is removed from the 8 United States, he could potentially face persecution and even death.

9
10 C. The Balance of Equities Favors Petitioner

11 Respondents suffer minimal burden by released Petitioner and releasing petitioner would be in 12 the interest of justice and would secure his due process rights.

13
14 In contrast, Petitioner faces permanent harm to his liberty and safety. He has been detained for 15 over four months and faced potential death if returned to his home country.

16
17 D. The Public Interest Supports a TRO

18 Public interest supports preserving the due process rights of every individual in the United
19 States. If Petitioner remains detained by the U.S. government he faces further deprivation of his rights,
20 and his life and liberty.

21
22 IV. CONCLUSION

23 Because all four TRO factors are satisfied—likelihood of success, irreparable harm, favorable
24 balance of equities, and public interest—Petitioner respectfully requests that the Court:

- 25
26 1. Issue an immediate Temporary Restraining Order prohibiting Respondents from removing the 27 Petitioner from the United States;
28 2. Require Respondents to release Plaintiff from custody; and
3. Schedule a prompt hearing on a preliminary injunction.

PRAYER FOR RELIEF

For the foregoing reasons, Petitioner respectfully requests that the Court:

1. Issue an immediate Temporary Restraining Order prohibiting Respondents from removing Petitioner from the United States;
2. Order Respondents to release Petitioner from custody ;
3. Schedule a prompt hearing on Petitioner's request for a preliminary injunction; and
4. Grant any other relief the Court deems just and proper.
