1 I. Introduction

2 Petitioners have moved for a temporary restraining order (“TRO”) forcing the government to 3 immediately release them without an ankle monitor and enjoining the government from re-detaining them 4 absent further order of this Court. But under the applicable immigration statutes, Petitioners are 5 “applicants for admission” subject to mandatory detention under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b). See 8 U.S.C.
 6 § 1225(a)(1); 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(6)(A)(i) (categorizing certain classes of aliens as inadmissible, and 7 therefore ineligible to be admitted to the United States, including those “present in the United States
 8 without being admitted or paroled”); Dep’t of Homeland Sec. v. Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. 103, 138–140 9 (2020) (an alien who is neither admitted nor paroled, nor otherwise lawfully present in this country, 10 remains an “applicant for admission” who is “on the threshold” of initial entry, even if released into the 11 country “for years pending removal,” and continues to be “‘treated’ for due process purposes ‘as if stopped 12 at the border’”); Jennings v. Rodriguez, 583 U.S. 281, 287 (2018) (such aliens are “treated as ‘an applicant 13 for admission’”).

14 These “applicants for admission,” which include aliens present without being admitted or paroled 15 (“PWAP”)—as is the circumstance with each of the Petitioners in this case, “fall into one of two 16 categories, those covered by § 1225(b)(1) and those covered by § 1225(b)(2),” both of which are subject to 17 mandatory detention. Jennings, 583 U.S. at 287 (“[R]ead most naturally, §§ 1225(b)(1) and (b)(2) 18 mandate detention for applicants for admission until certain proceedings have concluded.”). They are not 19 entitled to custody redetermination hearings, whether pre- or post-detention. Jennings, 583 U.S. at 297
 20 (“[N]either § 1225(b)(1) nor § 1225(b)(2) says anything whatsoever about bond hearings.”). Petitioners 21 thus cannot show a likelihood of success on their claims that they are not subject to detention and that they 22 are entitled to a custody redetermination hearing prior to re-detention.

23 Nor could Petitioners show a likelihood of success on their claims even if they were subject to 24 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a) instead of the mandatory detention framework of § 1225(b). Section 1226(a) does not 25 provide for pre-detention immigration judge review but instead sets out a procedure for review of 26 detention by a U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (“ICE”) officer once an alien is in custody—a 27 process that the Ninth Circuit has found ensures “that the risk of erroneous deprivation would be 28 ‘relatively small.’” See Rodriguez Diaz v. Garland, 53 F.4th 1189, 1196–97 (9th Cir. 2022).

II. Statutory Background

A. “Applicants for Admission” Under 8 U.S.C. § 1225

The Immigration and Nationality Act (“INA”) deems an “applicant for admission” to be an “alien present in the United States who has not been admitted or who arrives in the United States (whether or not at a designated port of arrival . . .).” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1); Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. at 140 (“an alien who tries to enter the country illegally is treated as an ‘applicant for admission’”) (citing 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1)); Matter of Lemus, 25 I & N Dec. 734, 743 (BIA 2012) (“Congress has defined the concept of an ‘applicant for admission’ in an unconventional sense, to include not just those who are expressly seeking permission to enter, but also those who are present in this country without having formally requested or received such permission[.]”). However long they have been in this country, an alien who is present in the United States but has not been admitted “is treated as ‘an applicant for admission.’” Jennings, 583 U.S. at 287. Thus, for example, an “applicant for admission” includes certain classes of aliens that are inadmissible and therefore ineligible to be admitted to the United States under Section 212(a) of the INA, since those aliens are “present in the United States without being admitted or paroled[.]” 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(6)(A)(i).

B. Detention Under 8 U.S.C. § 1225

Applicants for admission, including those like Petitioners who are PWAP, may be removed from the United States by expedited removal under § 1225(b)(1), or full removal proceedings before an immigration judge under 8 U.S.C. § 1229a, pursuant to § 1225(b)(2). All applicants for admission “fall into one of two categories, those covered by § 1225(b)(1) and those covered by § 1225(b)(2),” both of which are subject to mandatory detention. Jennings, 583 U.S. at 287 (“[R]ead most naturally, §§ 1225(b)(1) and (b)(2) mandate detention for applicants for admission until certain proceedings have concluded.”).

1. Section 1225(b)(1)

Congress established the expedited removal process in § 1225(b)(1) to ensure that the Executive could “expedite removal of aliens lacking a legal basis to remain in the United States.” Kucana v. Holder, 558 U.S. 233, 249 (2010); see also Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. at 106 (“[Congress] crafted a system for weeding out patently meritless claims and expeditiously removing the aliens making such claims from the country.”). This provision authorizes immigration officers to order certain inadmissible aliens “removed from the United States without further hearing or review.” Section 1225(b)(1) applies to “arriving aliens”

1 and “certain other” aliens “initially determined to be inadmissible due to fraud, misrepresentation, or lack of 2 valid documentation.” Id.; 8 U.S.C. §§ 1225(b)(1)(A)(i), (iii). Section 1225(b)(1) also allows for the 3 expedited removal of any alien “described in” § 1225(b)(1)(A)(iii)(II), as designated by the Attorney General 4 (“AG”) or Secretary of Homeland Security—that is, any alien not “admitted or paroled into the United 5 States” and “physically present” fewer than two years—who is inadmissible under § 1182(a)(7) at the time
 6 of “inspection.” See 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(7) (categorizing as inadmissible aliens without valid entry 7 documents). Whether that happens at a port of entry or after illegal entry is not relevant; what matters is 8 whether, when an officer inspects an alien for admission under § 1225(a)(3), that alien lacks entry documents
 9 and so is subject to § 1182(a)(7). The AG’s or Secretary’s authority to “designate” classes of aliens as subject 10 to expedited removal is subject to his or her “sole and unreviewable discretion.” 8 U.S.C.
 11 § 1225(b)(1)(A)(iii); American Immigration Lawyers Ass’n v. Reno, 199 F.3d 1352 (D.C. Cir. 2000) 12 (upholding expedited removal statute).

13 On five occasions, the Secretary (and earlier, the AG) has designated categories of aliens for 14 expedited removal under § 1225(b)(1)(A)(iii). In 2004, citing “the interests of focusing enforcement 15 resources upon unlawful entries that have a close spatial and temporal nexus to the border,” the Secretary 16 designated for expedited removal those “aliens encountered within 14 days of entry without inspection and 17 within 100 air miles of any U.S. international land border.” Designating Aliens for Expedited Removal, 69
 18 Fed. Reg. 48877-01, 48879 (Aug. 11, 2004). More recently, the Secretary restored the expedited removal 19 scope to “the fullest extent authorized by Congress.” Designating Aliens for Expedited Removal, 90 Fed.
 20 Reg. 8139 (Jan. 24, 2025). The current notice enables DHS “to exercise the full scope of its statutory 21 authority to place in expedited removal, with limited exceptions, aliens determined to be inadmissible under 22 [8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(6)(C) or (a)(7)] who have not been admitted or paroled into the United States and who 23 have not affirmatively shown, to the satisfaction of an immigration officer, that they have been physically 24 present in the United States continuously for the two-year period immediately preceding the date of the 25 determination of inadmissibility,” who were not otherwise covered by prior designations. Id. at 8139–40.¹

26
 27 ¹ On August 29, 2025, a district court in the District of Columbia stayed the government’s 28 implementation and enforcement of this 2025 notice. Make the Road New York, et al., v. Noem, et al., No.
 25-cv-190 (JMC), 2025 WL 2494908 (D.D.C. Aug. 29, 2025), appeal docketed, No. 25-5320 (D.C. Cir.
 Sept. 5, 2025). The government’s position is that Make the Road was wrongly decided, and appealed that decision. Id. at ECF No. 66. The government’s emergency motion is now pending with the D.C.
 RESPONDENTS’ OPPOSITION TO TRO MOTION
 NO. 3:25-CV-8408-EKL

1 Expedited removal proceedings under § 1225(b)(1) include additional procedures if an alien 2 indicates an intention to apply for asylum² or expresses a fear of persecution, torture, or return to the 3 alien's country. See 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(A)(ii); 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(b)(4). In that situation, the alien is 4 given a non-adversarial interview with an asylum officer, who determines whether the alien has a "credible 5 fear of persecution" or torture. Id. §§ 1225(b)(1)(A)(ii), (b)(1)(B)(iii)(II), (b)(1)(B)(iv), (v); see also 8 6 C.F.R. § 208.30; Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. at 109–11 (describing the credible fear process). The alien may 7 also pursue de novo review of that determination by an immigration judge ("IJ"). 8 U.S.C.
 8 § 1225(b)(1)(B)(iii)(III); 8 C.F.R. §§ 1003.42(d), 1208.30(g). During the credible fear process, an alien 9 may consult with an attorney or representative and engage an interpreter. 8 C.F.R. § 208.30(d)(4), (5).
 10 However, an alien subject to these procedures "shall be detained pending a final determination of credible 11 fear of persecution and, if found not to have such a fear, until removed." 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B)(iii)(IV).

12 If the asylum officer or IJ does not find a credible fear, the alien is "removed from the United 13 States without further hearing or review." 8 U.S.C. §§ 1225(b)(1)(B)(iii)(I), (b)(1)(C); 1252(a)(2)(A)(iii), 14 (e)(2); 8 C.F.R. §§ 1003.42(f), 1208.30(g)(2)(iv)(A). If the asylum officer or IJ finds a credible fear, the 15 alien is generally placed in full removal proceedings under 8 U.S.C. § 1229a, but remains subject to 16 mandatory detention. See 8 C.F.R. § 208.30(f); 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B)(iii)(IV).

17 Expedited removal under § 1225(b)(1) is a statutory procedure distinct from § 1229a.
 18 Section 1229a governs full removal proceedings initiated by a notice to appear and conducted before an IJ, 19 during which the alien may apply for relief or protection. By contrast, expedited removal under 20 § 1225(b)(1) applies in narrower, statutorily defined circumstances—typically to individuals apprehended 21 at or near the border who lack valid entry documents or commit fraud upon entry—and allows for their 22 removal without a hearing, subject to limited exceptions. For these aliens, DHS has discretion to pursue
 23 expedited removal under § 1225(b)(1) or § 1229a. Matter of E-R-M- & L-R-M-, 25 I & N Dec. 520, 524
 24 (BIA 2011).

25
 26
 27 Circuit.

28 ² Aliens must apply for asylum within one year of arriving in the United States, 8 U.S.C. § 1558(a)(2)(B), except if the alien can demonstrate "extraordinary circumstances" that justify moving that deadline. Id. § 1558(a)(2)(D).

1 2. Section 1225(b)(2)

2 Section 1225(b)(2) is “broader” and “serves as a catchall provision.” Jennings, 583 U.S. at 287. It
 3 “applies to all applicants for admission not covered by § 1225(b)(1).” Id. Under Section 1225(b)(2), an alien 4 “who is an applicant for admission” is subject to mandatory detention pending full removal proceedings “if 5 the examining immigration officer determines that [the] alien seeking admission is not clearly and beyond a 6 doubt entitled to be admitted.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A) (requiring that such aliens “be detained for a 7 proceeding under section 1229a of this title”); Matter of Q. Li, 29 I. & N. Dec. 66, 68 (BIA 2025)

 9 (“[F]or aliens arriving in and seeking admission into the United States who are placed directly in full removal 10 proceedings, [] 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A)[] mandates detention ‘until removal proceedings have 11 concluded.’”) (citing Jennings, 583 U.S. at 299); 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(b)(3) (an alien placed into § 1229a 12 removal proceedings in lieu of expedited removal proceedings under § 1225(b)(1) “shall be detained” 13 pursuant to § 1225(b)(2)). DHS has the sole discretionary authority to temporarily release on parole “any 14 alien applying for admission to the United States” on a “case-by-case basis for urgent humanitarian reasons 15 or significant public benefit.” 8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5)(A); see also Biden v. Texas, 597 U.S. 785, 806 (2022).

16 C. Detention Under 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a)

17 A different statutory detention authority, 8 U.S.C. § 1226, applies to aliens who have been lawfully 18 admitted into the U.S. but are deportable and subject to removal proceedings. Section 1226(a) provides 19 for the arrest and detention of these aliens “pending a decision on whether the alien is to be removed from 20 the United States.” 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a). Under § 1226(a), DHS may, in its discretion, detain an alien 21 during his removal proceedings, release him on bond, or release him on conditional parole.³ By 22 regulation, immigration officers can release an alien if he demonstrates that he “would not pose a danger to 23 property or persons” and “is likely to appear for any future proceeding.” 8 C.F.R. § 236.1(c)(8). An alien 24 can also request a custody redetermination (i.e., a bond hearing) by an IJ at any time before a final order of 25 removal is issued. See 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a); 8 C.F.R. §§ 236.1(d)(1), 1236.1(d)(1), 1003.19. At a custody

26
 27 ³ Being “conditionally paroled under the authority of § 1226(a)” is distinct from being “paroled into 28 the United States under the authority of § 1182(d)(5)(A).” Ortega-Cervantes v. Gonzales, 501 F.3d 1111, 1116 (9th Cir. 2007) (holding that because release on “conditional parole” under § 1226(a) is not a parole, the alien was not eligible for adjustment of status under § 1255(a)).

1 redetermination, the IJ may continue detention or release the alien on bond or conditional parole. 8 U.S.C.
2 § 1226(a); 8 C.F.R. § 1236.1(d)(1). IJs have broad discretion in deciding whether to release an alien on 3 bond. In re Guerra, 24 I. & N. Dec. 37, 39–40 (BIA 2006) (listing nine factors for IJs to consider).

4 Until recently, the government interpreted § 1226(a) to be an available detention authority for 5 aliens PWAP placed directly in full removal proceedings under § 1229a. See, e.g., Ortega-Cervantes, 501 6 F.3d at 1116. In view of legal developments, the government has determined that this interpretation was 7 incorrect. But prior agency practice applying § 1226(a) to Petitioners does not control because the plain 8 language of the statute, and not prior practice, controls. Matter of Yajure Hurtado, 29 I&N Dec. 216, 225-
9 26 (BIA 2025); see also Loper Bright Enters. v. Raimondo, 603 U.S. 369, 408, 431-32 (2024) 10 (explaining that “the basic nature and meaning of a statute does not change . . . just because the agency 11 has happened to offer its interpretation through the sort of procedures necessary to obtain deference” and 12 finding that the weight given to agency interpretations “must always “depend upon the[ir] thoroughness 13 . . . , the validity of [their] reasoning, [their] consistency with earlier and later pronouncements, and all 14 those factors which give [them] power to persuade”). Section 1225 is the sole applicable immigration 15 detention authority for all applicants for admission. See Jennings, 583 U.S. at 297 (“Read most naturally, 16 §§ 1225(b)(1) and (b)(2) thus mandate detention of applicants for admission until certain proceedings have 17 concluded.”). In Jennings, the Supreme Court explained that 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b) applies to all applicants 18 for admission, noting that the language of 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2) is “quite clear” and “unequivocally 19 mandate[s]” detention. 583 U.S. at 300, 303 (explaining that “the word ‘shall’ usually connotes a 20 requirement” (quoting Kingdomware Technologies, Inc. v. United States, 579 U.S. 162, 171 (2016))).
21 Similarly, the Attorney General, in Matter of M-S-, unequivocally recognized that 8 U.S.C. §§ 1225 and 22 1226(a) do not overlap but describe “different classes of aliens.” 27 I&N Dec. at 516. The Attorney 23 General also held—in an analogous context—that aliens present without admission and placed into 24 expedited removal proceedings are detained under 8 U.S.C. § 1225 even if later placed in 8 U.S.C. § 25 1229a removal proceedings. 27 I&N Dec. at 518-19. In Matter of Q. Li, the Board of Immigration 26 Appeals (BIA) held that an alien who illegally crossed into the United States between ports of entry and 27 was apprehended without a warrant while arriving is detained under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b). 29 I&N Dec. at 28 71. The BIA recently resolved the question of whether an alien PWAP released from DHS custody pursuant to INA § 236(a) is an applicant for admission detained under INA § 235(b)(2)(A) in the affirmative. Matter of Yajure Hurtado, 29 I&N Dec. 216.

This ongoing evolution of the law makes clear that all applicants for admission are subject to detention under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b). Cf. Niz-Chavez v. Garland, 593 U.S. 155, 171 (2021) (providing that “no amount of policy-talk can overcome a plain statutory command”); see generally Florida v. United States, 660 F. Supp. 3d 1239, 1275 (N.D. Fla. 2023) (explaining that “the 1996 expansion of § 1225(b) to include illegal border crossers would make little sense if DHS retained discretion to apply § 1226(a) and release illegal border crossers whenever the agency saw fit”).⁴ Florida’s conclusion “that § 1225(b)’s ‘shall be detained’ means what it says and . . . is a mandatory requirement . . . flows directly from Jennings.” Florida, 660 F. Supp. 3d at 1273.

III. Background

A. Factual Background

All of the Petitioners entered the United States without inspection, admission, or parole within the last two years and thus are presumptively subject to expedited removal under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1).

1. Petitioner Aldana Serrano

Petitioner Aldana Serrano—a citizen and native of Columbia—entered the U.S. in November 2023 without inspection, admission, or parole. Pet. ¶¶ 9 & 49. She claims that immigration officials encountered her at the border, and asserts that she was released into the community under 8 U.S.C. § 1226a to wait for an immigration court date. Id. ¶ 49. Petitioner Aldana Serrano appeared at a master calendar hearing before an immigration judge on October 2, 2025. Id. ¶ 54. The government made an oral motion to dismiss the case; the immigration judge did not rule on the motion. Id. DHS agents arrested Petitioner Aldana Serrano following the hearing. Id. ¶ 1.

2. Petitioner Fernandez Sanchez

Petitioner Fernandez Sanchez—a citizen and native of Guatemala—entered the U.S. in May ⁴ Though not binding, the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Florida’s decision is instructive here. Florida held that 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b) mandates detention of applicants for admission throughout removal proceedings, rejecting the assertion that DHS has discretion to choose to detain an applicant for admission under either 8 U.S.C. §§ 1225(b) or 1226(a). 660 F. Supp. 3d at 1275. The court held that such discretion “would render mandatory detention under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b) meaningless.” Id.

16 Petitioner Salgado Sotomayor—a citizen and native of Nicaragua—entered the U.S. in 17 November 2023 without inspection, admission, or parole. Pet. ¶¶ 12 & 52. She claims that immigration 18 officials encountered her at the border, and asserts that she was released into the community under 8 19 U.S.C. § 1226a to wait for an immigration court date. Id. ¶ 52. Petitioner Salgado Sotomayor appeared

24 Petitioner Vasquez Oviedo—a citizen and native of Columbia—entered the U.S. in March 2024
25 without inspection, admission, or parole. Pet. ¶¶ 13 & 53. He claims that immigration officials

28 calendar hearing before an immigration judge on October 2, 2025. Id. ¶ 54. The government made an oral motion to dismiss the case; the immigration judge did not rule on the motion. Id. DHS agents arrested Petitioner Vasquez Oviedo following the hearing. Id. ¶ 1.

B. Procedural Background

On October 2, 2025, Petitioners filed a group habeas petition. ECF No. 1.⁵ That same day, they moved ex parte for a TRO. ECF No. 2.

IV. Argument

A. Legal Standard

A temporary restraining order is “an extraordinary and drastic remedy, one that should not be granted unless the movant, by a clear showing, carries the burden of persuasion.” Lopez v. Brewer, 680 F.3d 1068, 1072 (9th Cir. 2012). To obtain relief, the moving party must show that “he is likely to succeed on the merits, that he is likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief, that the balance of equities tips in his favor, and that an injunction is in the public interest.” Winter v. NRDC, 555 U.S. 7, 20 (2008).

B. Petitioners Cannot Show a Likelihood of Success on the Merits

1. Under the Plain Text of 8 U.S.C. § 1225, Petitioners Must Be Detained Pending the Outcome of Their Removal Proceedings

Petitioners cannot show a likelihood of success on their claims that they either (1) cannot be detained or (2) are entitled to a custody hearing prior to re-detention. This is because Petitioners are “applicants for admission” due to their presence in the U.S. without having been either “admitted or paroled.” Such aliens are subject to the mandatory detention framework of 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b) that specifically applies to them, not the general provisions of § 1226(a).

⁵ The Petition joins five separate petitioners with separate sets of underlying factual circumstances in a single habeas petition. See Pet. ¶¶ 49-55. Petitioners do not cite any authority for bringing a group petition with multiple petitioners, and Respondents are unaware of any authority that would permit joinder of separate petitioners. Cf. Acord v. California, No. 17-cv-01089, 2017 WL 4699835, at *1 (E.D. Cal. Oct. 19, 2017) (“There is no authority for permitting multiple petitioners to file a single habeas petition under 28 U.S.C. § 2254, and doing so generally is not permitted.”). Indeed, this request for relief for multiple individual aliens would appear to contravene the prohibition contained in 8 U.S.C. § 1252(f)(1), which states that “no court (other than the Supreme Court) shall have the jurisdiction or authority to enjoin or restrain . . . other than with respect to the application of such provisions to an individual alien against whom proceedings under such part have been initiated.” Respondents reserve their right to move to sever the petition. See Acord, 2017 WL 4699835, at *1; see also Buriev v. Warden, Geo. Broward Transitional Ctr., No. 25-cv-60459, 2025 WL 1906626, *1 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 18, 2025) (denying motion for joinder of two habeas petitions); Rubinstein v. United States, No. 23-cv-12685, 2024 WL 37931, *3 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 3, 2024) (finding misjoinder of multiple parties in a single habeas petition).

Recent BIA authority confirms that Petitioners are subject to expedited removal and mandatory detention under § 1225(b). In Matter of Yajure Hurtado, 29 I.&N. Dec. 216 (BIA 2025), the BIA held that, based on the plain text of the statute, an alien who entered without inspection remains an “applicant for admission” who is “seeking admission,” and is therefore subject to mandatory detention without a bond hearing, even if that alien has been present in the U.S. for years. Id., slip op. at 220. Thus, the BIA also held that IJs lack authority to hold bond hearings for aliens in such circumstances. Id. The BIA considered, and rejected, the individual’s argument that the government’s “‘longstanding practice’ of treating aliens who are present in the United States without inspection as detained under [§] 8 U.S.C.A. § 1226(a), and therefore eligible for a bond.” Id. at 225. Citing the Supreme Court’s decision in Loper Bright Enterprises v. Raimondo, 603 U.S. 369 (2024), the BIA explained that such a practice could be relevant where the statute is “doubtful and ambiguous,” but here, “the statutory text of the INA . . . is instead clear and explicit in requiring mandatory detention of all aliens who are applicants for admission, without regard to how many years the alien has been residing in the United States without lawful status.” Hurtado, slip op. at 226. Nor did it matter that “DHS [had] issued an arrest warrant in conjunction with the Notice to Appear and a Notice of Custody Determination”: “the mere issuance of an arrest warrant does not endow an [IJ] with authority to set bond for an alien who falls under section 235(b)(2)(A) of the INA . . . If it did, it would render meaningless the many prohibitions cited above on the authority of an [IJ] to set bond.” Id. at 227 (citing, e.g., Matter of Q. Li, 29 I&N Dec. 66, 69 (BIA 2025)). The BIA has therefore now confirmed, in a decision binding on IJs nationwide, what the government is arguing here: individuals such as Petitioners are “applicants for admission” subject to mandatory detention under § 1225(b), and have no right to a bond hearing.

Respondents recognize that recent district court preliminary injunction decisions have concluded that § 1225(b) is not applicable to aliens who were conditionally released in the past under § 1226(a).⁶ But these ⁶ See, e.g., Ramirez Clavijo v. Kaiser, No. 25-CV-06248-BLF, 2025 WL 2419263 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 21, 2025); Jimenez Garcia v. Kaiser, No. 4:25-cv-06916-YGR (N.D. Cal. Aug. 29, 2025); Hernandez Nieves v. Kaiser, No. 25-CV-06921-LB, 2025 WL 2533110 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 3, 2025); Salcedo Aceros v. Kaiser, No. 25-CV-06924-EMC (EMC), 2025 WL 2637503 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 12, 2025).

1 non-binding decisions do not grapple with the textual argument that the BIA just held was “clear and 2 explicit.” Hurtado, slip op. at 226. Taken together, the plain language of §§ 1225(a) and 1225(b) indicate 3 that applicants for admission, including those “present” in the U.S.—like Petitioners—are subject to 4 mandatory detention under Section 1225(b). When there is “an irreconcilable conflict in two legal 5 provisions,” then “the specific governs over the general.” Karczewski v. DCH Mission Valley LLC, 862 F.3d 6 1006, 1015 (9th Cir. 2017). While § 1226(a) applies generally to aliens who are “arrested and detained 7 pending a decision on” removal, § 1225 applies more narrowly to “applicants for admission”—i.e., aliens 8 present in the U.S. who have not been admitted. Because Petitioners fall within this latter category, the 9 specific detention authority under § 1225 controls over the general authority found at § 1226(a).

10 As alien PWAP subject to mandatory detention under § 1225(b), Petitioners are not entitled to 11 custody redetermination hearings at any time, whether pre- or post-detention. Jennings, 583 U.S. at 297 12 (“[N]either § 1225(b)(1) nor § 1225(b)(2) says anything whatsoever about bond hearings.”); Matter of 13 Yajure Hurtado, I&N Dec. at 229 (holding that immigration judge “lacked authority to hear the 14 respondent’s request for a bond as the respondent is an applicant for admission and is subject to 15 mandatory detention under section 235(b)(2)(A) of the INA, 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A)”). In addition,
 16 although DHS initially elected to place Petitioners in full removal proceedings under § 1229a, Petitioners 17 remain PWAP aliens who are amenable to expedited removal and subject to mandatory detention due to their 18 presence in the U.S. without having been either “admitted or paroled” or physically present in the U.S.
 19 continuously for the two-year period immediately preceding the date of the determination of inadmissibility.

20 2. A Narrow Interpretation of “Seeking Admission” Runs Counter to 21 Congress’s Use of the Phrase “Or Otherwise” in § 1225(a)(3)

22 Numerous courts in this district have dismissed the government’s construction of § 1225(b), but none
 23 of these courts has considered the significance of Congress’s use of “or otherwise” language in § 1225(a)(3) 24 when interpreting § 1225(b)(2). While these courts have narrowly construed the “seeking admission” 25 language in § 1225(b)(2), see, e.g., Salcedo Aceros, 2025 WL 2637503 at *10, their textual analysis has not 26 squared their conclusion with the one provision elsewhere in § 1225 where Congress expressly explained the 27 relationship between “seeking admission” and “applicants for admission”—that is, § 1225(a)(3). The 28 government posits that the starting point for understanding what “seeking admission” in § 1225(b) means is

1 the language of § 1225(a)(3).

2 In § 1225(a)(3), Congress provided:

3 All aliens (including alien crewmen) who are applicants for admission or 4 otherwise seeking admission or readmission to or transit through the United States shall be inspected by immigration officers.

5 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(3) (emphasis added). This use of “or otherwise” to connect terms is a familiar legal 6 construction where the specific items that precede that phrase are meant to be subsumed by what comes after 7 it. See, e.g., Villarreal v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 839 F.3d 958, 963-64 (11th Cir. 2016) (en banc) (noting 8 four Congressional statutes and three 11th Circuit procedural rules as exemplary of how the phrase “or 9 otherwise” is to be construed such that “the first action is a subset of the second action”); cf. Patrick’s Payroll 10 Servs., Inc. v. Comm’r of Internal Revenue, 848 F. App’x 181, 183-84 (6th Cir. 2021) (interpreting the “plain 11 meaning and ordinary usage of the phrase ‘or did not otherwise’” to mean that what immediately preceded the 12 phrase was “one of the most common examples” of what followed it). As such, “or otherwise” operates as a 13 catch-all category that serves to make clear that what precedes that phrase falls within the larger category that 14 follows. See Kleber v. CareFusion Corp., 914 F.3d 480, 482-83 (7th Cir. 2019) (analyzing the “or otherwise” 15 phrase in a Congressional statute and determining that Congress’s “word choice is significant” in that it 16 “employ[s] a catchall formulation”); see also Al Otro Lado v. Executive Office for Immigration Review, 138 17 F.4th 1102, 1119 (2025) (finding that in 8 U.S.C. §§ 1225(a)(2) and (a)(3) “Congress took care to provide for 18 the inspection of both the catch-all category of noncitizens ‘otherwise seeking admission’ and stowaways”) (emphasis added).⁷ The catch-all formulation does not render the phrase preceding “or otherwise” as 19 superfluous since “the specific items that precede it are meant to be subsumed by what comes after the ‘or 20 otherwise.’” Villarreal, 839 F.3d at 964 (emphasis in original) (citing Begay v. United States, 553 U.S. 137, 21 153 (2008) (Scalia, J., concurring) (“[T]he canon against surplusage has substantially less force when it comes 22 to interpreting a broad residual clause . . .”). To treat what follows “or otherwise” and what precedes it “as 23 separate categories, does not give effect to every word because it reads ‘otherwise’ out of the statute.”

 26 ⁷ Fischer v. United States, 603 U.S. 480 (2024), which addressed the import of “otherwise” on the 27 preceding subsection’s list of criminal violations, does not change the calculus. The Court did not 28 consider—as here—the use of “or otherwise” connecting two surrounding phrases and, in any event, found—in a situation unlike here—that a list of “many specific examples of prohibited actions” in a prior subsection merely defined the scope of the following “residual clause” to “give it more definite meaning.”
Id. at 489-91.

1 Villarreal, 839 F.3d at 964. To that end, Congress’s use of “otherwise” immediately after “or” is textually 2 significant since using the disjunctive word “or” by itself would have suggested a different interpretation 3 “indicat[ing] alternatives and requir[ing] that those alternatives be treated separately.” Id.

4 The import of these statutory construction rules is meaningful as applied to § 1225. First, given 5 Congress’s use of “or otherwise” instead of “or,” “applicant for admission” and “seeking admission” are not 6 separate requirements. Second, based on the plain language of § 1225(a)(3), an “applicant for admission” is a 7 subset of the larger category of aliens that are “seeking admission or readmission to or transit through the 8 United States.” This interpretation necessarily flows from two word choices made by Congress: (1) its use of 9 the word “or” to disjunctively join “admission,” “readmission” and “transit” as modifiers of the word 10 “seeking” to create a broad catch-all category and (2) its use of “or otherwise” to define the relationship 11 between the phrase “applicant for admission” that precedes it and the phrase “seeking admission or 12 readmission to or transit through the United States” that follows it. Third, by so choosing its words, Congress 13 did not describe “seeking admission” as a narrow subset of “applicants for admission.” On the contrary, since 14 “applicant for admission” is a subset of the larger category of “seeking admission or readmission to or transit 15 through the United States,” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(3), the plain language of § 1225(b)(2) indicates only that, “in 16 the case of an applicant for admission,” Congress did not extend that subsection’s detention authority to 17 individuals “seeking readmission” and “seeking transit through.” It does not follow, however, that the 18 remaining phrase “seeking admission” was meant to be narrower than “applicant for admission”—a point 19 confirmed by the Ninth Circuit in its recent en banc decision in Al Otro Lado.

20 In Al Otro Lado, the Ninth Circuit compared the “applicant for admission” provision in § 1225(a)(1), 21 which deems an “applicant for admission” to be “[a]n alien present in the United States who has not been 22 admitted or who arrives in the United States,” with the INA’s asylum provision in 8 U.S.C. § 1158(a)(1), 23 which utilizes similar language providing that an “[a]ny alien who is physically present in the United States or 24 who arrives in the United States . . . may apply for asylum.” 138 F.4th at 1118-19. The Ninth Circuit did not 25 find that “seeking admission” is a subset of “applicants for admission.” Instead, the Ninth Circuit found that 26 “seeking admission” is at least as broad as “applicant for admission.” Id. at 1119 (concluding that 27 “§ 1225(a)(1) is solely about people seeking admission to the country”) (emphasis added). This finding is 28 consistent with the fact that the INA provides other instances of individuals who are seeking admission but

1 who do not fulfill the criteria for an “applicant for admission” since they are either not present in the United 2 States or admitted. See, e.g., Ogbolumani v. U.S. Citizenship & Immigr. Servs., 523 F. Supp. 2d 864, 869
 3 (N.D. Ill. 2007) (describing visa applicant at an American Embassy or Consulate abroad as seeking 4 admission); Matter of Lemus-Losa, 25 I&N Dec. 734, 741 (BIA 2012) (an alien “can ‘seek admission’ from 5 anywhere in the world, for ‘example by applying for a visa at a consulate abroad’); see also 8 U.S.C.
 6 § 1101(a)(13)(ii), (iv) (noting two circumstances where an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence 7 can be regarded as “seeking an admission”).

8 3. “Seeking Admission” Is Not Limited to Aliens Who Take Action Toward 9 Admission

10 At least one court in this district has found that “applicant for admission” is broader than “seeking 11 admission” because it covers “someone who is not ‘admitted’ but is not necessarily ‘seeking admission.’” See 12 Salcedo Aceros, 2025 WL 2637503 at *11 (emphasis in original). As the argument goes, § 1225(b)(2) covers 13 only a smaller set of aliens “actively seeking admission.” But “seeking admission” is not a subcategory of 14 “applicants for admission” referring only to aliens necessarily taking steps toward actual admission.

15 “Seeking admission” is a term of art. Matter of Lemus-Losa, 25 I&N at 743 n.6 (BIA 2012). The 16 INA provides that “many people who are not actually requesting permission to enter the United States in the 17 ordinary sense [including aliens present who have not been admitted] are nevertheless deemed to be ‘seeking 18 admission’ under immigration laws.” Id. at 743; Matter of Yajure Hurtado, 29 I. & N. Dec. 216, 221 (BIA 19 2025); see also Angov v. Lynch, 788 F.3d 893, 898 (9th Cir. 2015). The INA provides numerous examples of 20 Congress using “seeks admission” to mean something more expansive than seeking an actual admission. See, 21 e.g., 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(A) (an alien previously ordered removed and “who again seeks admission within 5 22 years” is inadmissible); 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B) (an alien unlawfully present for more than 180 days but less 23 than a year who voluntarily departed and “again seeks admission within 3 years” is inadmissible). These 24 latter two groups of aliens accrued past periods of “unlawful presence” in the United States and thus were 25 deemed “applicants for admission” under § 1225(a)(1), but they were also “in a very meaningful (if 26 sometimes artificial) sense, ‘again seek[ing] admission.’” Matter of Lemus-Losa, 25 I&N at 743 n.6.
 27 Accordingly, Congress’s use of “seeking admission” in § 1225(b)(2) did not mean to include only aliens who 28 are “actually” or “necessarily” seeking admission.

1 4. To Apply § 1225(b)(2) Narrowly to “Arriving Aliens” Runs Counter to 2 Congress’s Specific Use of “Arriving Aliens” Elsewhere in § 122

3 At least one court in this district has also concluded that “seeking admission” in § 1225(b)(2) applies 4 narrowly to “arriving aliens.” See Salcedo Aceros, 2025 WL 2637503 at *10, 11. And similarly, the 5 petitioners’ bar in this district have referred to § 1225(b)(2) as an “arriving alien statute.” See Salcedo Aceros
 6 v. Kaiser, et al., Case 3:25-cv-06924-EMC, ECF No. 24 (September 4, 2025 Hearing Tr.) at 14:10, 23:4-5, 7 25:1-2. But “where Congress knows how to say something but chooses not to, its silence is controlling.” In 8 re Griffith, 206 F.3d 1389, 1394 (11th Cir. 2000) (holding that “Congress must have consciously chosen not 9 to include the language ‘or the payment thereof’” in one statutory section when it specifically chose to use that 10 language in a different section); see also BFP v. Resolution Trust Corp., 511 U.S. 531, 537 (1994) (“[I]t is 11 generally presumed that Congress acts intentionally and purposely when it includes particular language in one 12 section of a statute but omits it in another”). Congress knew how to use the word “arriving” and, to that 13 end, twice included that word elsewhere in the same statutory section, both in the text and title of § 1225’s 14 expedited removal provision. See 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1) (“Inspection of aliens arriving in the United States 15 and certain other aliens who have not been admitted or paroled”) (emphasis added); 8 U.S.C.
 16 § 1225(b)(1)(A)(i) (“If an immigration officer determines that an alien . . . who is arriving in the United 17 States. . .”) (emphasis added). Congress’s decision not to use “arriving”—or any variant thereof—in 18 § 1225(b)(2) was purposeful, and that word cannot now be read into that provision to unnecessarily limit 19 Congress’ express language. Accordingly, § 1225(b)(2) is not limited to aliens arriving at the border; it also 20 covers aliens in the country’s interior who are present and not admitted. See, e.g., Pena v. Hyde, No. CV 25-21 11983-NMG, 2025 WL 2108913, *1-3 (D. Mass. July 28, 2025) (holding that an alien living in the country 22 and later detained after a traffic stop “remains an applicant for admission” and “his continued detention is 23 therefore authorized by § 1225(b)(2)(A)” consistent with constitutional due process); Sixtos Chavez, et al. v.
 24 Kristi Noem, et al., No. 3:25-cv-02325-CAB-SBC (S.D. Cal. Sep. 24, 2025), ECF No. 8 (denying application 25 for temporary restraining order and rejecting petitioners’ argument that their detention was governed by 26 § 1226, finding instead that they were subject to mandatory detention under the plain text of § 1225(b)(2)).
 27
 28

1 5. The INA's Implementing Regulations Are Contrary to the Court's Narrow 2 View That § 1225(b)(2) Applies Only to Arriving Aliens

3 At least one court in this district has relied upon “the implementing regulation for § 1225(b)(2)” to 4 bolster its conclusion that this statutory section “has limited application” and applies only to an “arriving 5 aliens” subset of applicants for admission. Salcedo Aceros, 2025 WL 2637503 at *10 (“8 C.F.R. § 235.3 6 describes Section 1225(b)(2) as applying to ‘any arriving alien who appears to the inspecting officer to be 7 inadmissible.’”) (emphasis in original). However, this regulation does not support that narrow construction. It 8 provides that the expedited removal provision of § 1225(b)(1) applies to “arriving aliens,” 8 C.F.R.
 9 § 235.3(b)(1)(i), and that an arriving alien can be put into regular removal proceedings, 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(c)(1).
 10 But most significantly, the regulations expressly provide that § 1225(b)(2) is not limited to arriving aliens:

11 An alien who was not inspected and admitted or paroled into the United States 12 but who establishes that he or she has been continuously physically present in 13 the United States for the 2-year period immediately prior to the date of determination of inadmissibility shall be detained in accordance with section 235(b)(2) of the Act for a proceeding under section 240 of the Act.

14 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(b)(1)(ii) (emphasis added). This implementing regulation—applying § 1225(b)(2) to aliens 15 able to establish their presence in the United States for two consecutive years—undermines the narrow 16 interpretation that § 1225(b)(2) is limited to aliens arriving at the border.

17 6. The Mathews Factors Do Not Apply

18 Given their status as applicants for admission subject to mandatory detention, Petitioners' reliance on 19 Mathews v. Eldridge, 424 U.S. 319, 335 (1976) is misplaced. As an initial matter, the Supreme Court has 20 upheld mandatory civil immigration detention without utilizing the multi-factor “balancing test” of Mathews.
 21 See Demore v. Kim, 538 U.S. 510 (2003) (upholding mandatory detention under 8 U.S.C. § 1226(c)); cf.
 22 Zadvydas v. Davis, 533 U.S. 678 (2001) (upholding mandatory detention under 8 U.S.C. § 1231(a)(6) for six 23 months after the 90-day removal period).⁸

24 In any event, applicants for admission like Petitioners, who were not admitted or paroled into the

 26 ⁸ As the Ninth Circuit recognized in Rodriguez Diaz, “the Supreme Court when confronted with 27 constitutional challenges to immigration detention has not resolved them through express application of 28 Mathews.” Rodriguez Diaz v. Garland, 53 F.4th 1206 (9th Cir. 2022) (citations omitted). Whether the Mathews test applies in this context is an open question in the Ninth Circuit. See Rodriguez Diaz, 53 F.4th at 1207 (applying Mathews factors to uphold constitutionality of Section 1226(a) procedures in a prolonged detention context; “we assume without deciding that Mathews applies here”).

country, lack a liberty interest in additional procedures including a custody redetermination or pre-detention bond hearing. Their conditional parole status does not provide them with additional rights above and beyond the specific process already provided by Congress in § 1225. See Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. at 139 (“aliens who arrive at ports of entry—even those paroled elsewhere in the country for years pending removal—are ‘treated’ for due process purposes ‘as if stopped at the border’”); Ma v. Barber, 357 U.S. 185, 190 (1958) (concluding that the parole of an alien released into the country while admissibility decision was pending did not alter her legal status); Pena, 2025 WL 2108913 at *2 (finding that mandatory detention under § 1225(b)(2)(A) of an alien arrested at a traffic stop in the interior of the United States “comports with due process”). Indeed, for “applicants for admission” who are amenable to § 1225(b)(1)—i.e., because they were not physically present for at least two years on the date of inspection, 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(A)(iii)(II)— “[w]hatever the procedure authorized by Congress . . . is due process,” whether or not they are apprehended at the border or after entering the country. Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. at 138–139 (“This rule would be meaningless if it became inoperative as soon as an arriving alien set foot on U.S. soil.”). These aliens have “only those rights regarding admission that Congress has provided by statute.” Id. at 140; see Dave v. Ashcroft, 363 F.3d 649, 653 (7th Cir. 2004). Petitioners are entitled only to the protections set forth by statute, and “the Due Process Clause provides nothing more.” Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. at 140.⁹

7. Congress Did Not Intend to Treat Individuals Who Unlawfully Enter the Country Better than Those Who Appear at a Port of Entry

When the plain text of a statute is clear, “that meaning is controlling” and courts “need not examine legislative history.” Washington v. Chimei Innolux Corp., 659 F.3d 842, 848 (9th Cir. 2011). But to the extent legislative history is relevant here, nothing “refutes the plain language” of § 1225. Suzlon Energy Ltd. v. Microsoft Corp., 671 F.3d 726, 730 (9th Cir. 2011). Congress passed the Illegal Immigration Reform and ⁹ Courts in this district frequently cite to Morrissey v. Brewer, 408 U.S. 471 (1972), in support of their conclusion that aliens in similar circumstances to Petitioners are entitled to a pre-deprivation hearing. While the Supreme Court did find that post-arrest process should be afforded to the parolee in that case, the government respectfully submits that the framework for determining process for parolees is different from that for aliens illegally present in the United States. A fundamental purpose of the parole system is “to help individuals reintegrate into society” in order to lessen the chance of committing antisocial acts in the future. See id. at 478–80. That same goal of integration, in order to support the constructive development of individuals who have committed crimes and to lessen any recidivistic tendencies, is not present with unlawfully present aliens, who were not released for the same purpose.

1 Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996 to correct “an anomaly whereby immigrants who were attempting to 2 lawfully enter the United States were in a worse position than persons who had crossed the border
 3 unlawfully.” Torres v. Barr, 976 F.3d 918, 928 (9th Cir. 2020) (en banc). It “intended to replace certain 4 aspects of the [then] current ‘entry doctrine,’ under which illegal aliens who have entered the United States 5 without inspection gain equities and privileges in immigration proceedings that are not available to aliens 6 who present themselves for inspection at a port of entry.” Id. (quoting H.R. Rep. 104-469, pt. 1, at 225). For 7 that reason, Petitioners—who entered the United States without inspection, admission, or parole and were 8 processed and released outside of a port of entry—should be treated no differently than noncitizens who 9 present at a port of entry and are subject to mandatory detention under § 1225, including pending further 10 consideration of their applications for asylum. See 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B)(ii). To hold that these 11 individuals are entitled to additional process would create the perverse incentive for aliens to enter the 12 country unlawfully—or surreptitiously get access to the country’s interior—rather than enter at a lawful 13 location. See Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. at 140.

14 8. Petitioners’ Detention Authority Cannot Be Converted to § 1226(a)

15 As “applicants for admission,” Petitioners’ detention is governed by the § 1225(b) framework. This 16 remains true even where the government previously released them under 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a). By citing 17 § 1226(a), DHS does not permanently alter an alien’s status as an “applicant for admission” under § 1225; to 18 the contrary, the alien’s release is expressly subject to an order to appear for removal proceedings based on 19 unlawful entry. Nor is DHS prevented from clarifying the detention authority to conform to the requirements 20 of the statutory framework as DHS now interprets it. See, e.g., United Gas Improvement v. Callery, 382 U.S.
 21 223, 229 (1965) (explaining that an agency can correct its own error). Pursuant to the statutory framework, 22 an alien’s conditional release is not the type of “lawful entry into this country” that is necessary to 23 “establish[] connections” that could form a liberty interest requiring additional process, and he or she 24 remains an “applicant for admission” who is “at the threshold of initial entry” and subject to mandatory 25 detention under § 1225. Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. at 106–07 (“While aliens who have established 26 connections in this country have due process rights in deportation proceedings, the Court long ago held that 27 Congress is entitled to set the conditions for an alien’s lawful entry into this country and that, as a result, an 28 alien at the threshold of initial entry cannot claim any greater rights under the Due Process Clause.”)

1 This binding Supreme Court authority is therefore in conflict with recent district court decisions 2 finding that the government's "election to place Petitioner in full removal proceedings under § 1229a and 3 releasing Petitioner under § 1226(a) provided Petitioner a liberty interest that is protected by the Due Process 4 Clause." Ramirez Clavijo, 2025 WL 2419263, *3. The government's decision to place aliens like 5 Petitioners in full removal proceedings under § 1229a is consistent with § 1225(b)(2), and its decision to cite 6 § 1226(a) in releasing them does not render their entry lawful; it remains unlawful (as the alien's release is 7 conditioned on appearing for removal proceedings based on unlawful entry), and as the Supreme Court 8 confirmed in Thuraissigiam, the alien remains "on the threshold of initial entry," is "treated for due process 9 purposes as if stopped at the border," and "cannot claim any greater rights under the Due Process Clause"
 10 than what Congress provided in § 1225. Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. at 139–40; see also Pena, 2025 WL
 11 2108913 at *2 ("Based upon the inherent authority of the United States to expel aliens, however, applicants 12 for admission are entitled only to those rights and protections Congress set forth by statute.").

13 The Supreme Court's holding in Thuraissigiam is consistent with its earlier holding in Landon, 14 where the Court observed that only "once an alien gains admission to our country and begins to develop the 15 ties that go with permanent residence [does] his constitutional status change[]." 459 U.S. at 32. In 16 Thuraissigiam, the Court reiterated that "established connections" contemplate "an alien's lawful entry into 17 this country." 591 U.S. at 106–07. In this case, Petitioners were neither admitted nor paroled, nor lawfully 18 present in this country as required by Landon and Thuraissigiam to claim due process rights beyond what 19 § 1225(b) provides. They instead remain applicants for admission who—even if released into the country 20 "for years pending removal"—continue to be "'treated' for due process purposes 'as if stopped at the 21 border.'" Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. at 139–140 (explaining that such aliens remain "on the threshold" of 22 initial entry).

23 9. Petitioners Are Not Entitled to a Pre-Detention Hearing Under § 1226(a)

24 Even if this Court finds that § 1226(a) applies here, Petitioner would still not be entitled to a pre-25 detention hearing. For aliens detained under § 1226(a), "an ICE officer makes the initial custody 26 determination" post-detention, which the alien can later request to have reviewed by an IJ. Rodriguez Diaz, 27 53 F.4th at 1196. The Supreme Court has long upheld the constitutionality of the basic process of 28 immigration detention. Reno v. Flores, 507 U.S. 292, 309 (1993) (rejecting procedural due process claim that “the INS procedures are faulty because they do not provide for automatic review by an immigration judge of the initial deportability and custody determinations”); Abel v. United States, 362 U.S. 217, 233–34 (1960) (noting the “impressive historical evidence of acceptance of the validity of statutes providing for administrative deportation arrest from almost the beginning of the Nation”); Carlson v. Landon, 342 U.S. 524, 538 (1952) (“Detention is necessarily a part of this deportation procedure.”); Wong Wing v. United States, 163 U.S. 228, 235 (1896) (“We think it clear that detention or temporary confinement, as part of the means necessary to give effect to the provisions for the exclusion or expulsion of aliens, would be valid.”). Thus, under Section 1226(a), aliens are not guaranteed pre-detention review and may instead only seek review of their detention by an ICE official once they are in custody—a process that the Ninth Circuit has found constitutionally sufficient in the prolonged-detention context. Rodriguez Diaz, 53 F.4th at 1196–97.¹⁰

10. Petitioners Cannot Obtain an Injunction Prohibiting Transfer

Petitioners cannot succeed on their attempt to seek an injunction prohibiting the government from transferring them out of this District. The AG has discretion to determine the appropriate place of detention. Milan-Rodriguez v. Sessions, No. 16-cv-01578-AWI, 2018 WL 400317, *10 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 12, 2018) (citing Rios-Berrios v. INS, 776 F.2d 859, 863 (9th Cir. 1985)). And while the Court may review whether such discretion resulted in a deprivation of rights, Petitioners have not shown how their mandatory detention or any transfer would interfere with their ability to present their cases or access counsel any more than any other similarly situated detainee. See Milan-Rodriguez, 2018 WL 400317, *10.

C. Petitioners Cannot Establish Irreparable Harm

Petitioners do not establish that they will be irreparably harmed absent a TRO. The “unlawful deprivation of physical liberty” is a harm that “is essentially inherent in detention,” and thus “the Court cannot weigh this strongly in favor of” Petitioners. Lopez Reyes v. Bonnar, No 18-cv-07429-SK, 2018 WL 7474861 at *10 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 24, 2018). It is also countervailed by authority mandating—and upholding—their categorical detention as lawful. Indeed, the alleged infringement of constitutional rights is insufficient where, as here, a petitioner fails to demonstrate “a sufficient likelihood of success on the merits of [his] constitutional claims to warrant the grant of a preliminary injunction.” Marin All. For Med. Marijuana v. Holder, 866 F. Supp. 2d 1142, 1160 (N.D. Cal. 2011) (quoting Assoc’d Gen. Contractors of Cal., Inc. v. Coal for Econ. Equity, 950 F.2d 1401, 1412 (9th Cir. 1991)); Meneses v. Jennings, No. 21-cv-07193-JD, 2021 WL 4804293, at *5 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 14, 2021) (denying TRO where petitioner “assume[d] a deprivation to assert the resulting harm”). Further, any alleged harm from detention alone is insufficient because “detention during deportation proceedings [is] a constitutionally valid aspect of the deportation process.” Demore, 538 U.S. at 523; see also Flores, 507 U.S. at 306; Carlson, 342 U.S. at 538. And as noted by the Ninth Circuit in Rodriguez Diaz, if treated as detention under § 1226(a), the risk of erroneous deprivation and value of additional process is small due to the procedural safeguards that Section 1226(a) provides. Thus, Petitioners cannot establish that their lawfully authorized mandatory detention would cause irreparable harm.

¹⁰ Although Rodriguez Diaz did not arise in the pre-detention context, the Ninth Circuit noted that the petition argued that the Section 1226(a) framework was unlawful “for any length of detention” and concluded that the challenge to Section 1226(a) failed “whether construed as facial or as-applied challenges to § 1226(a).” Rodriguez Diaz, 53 F.4th at 1203.

D. The Balance of Equities and Public Interest Do Not Favor an Injunction

When the government is a party, the balance of equities and public interest merge. Drakes Bay Oyster Co. v. Jewell, 747 F.3d 1073, 1092 (9th Cir. 2014) (citing Nken v. Holder, 556 U.S. 418, 435 (2009)). Further, where a moving party only raises “serious questions going to the merits,” the balance of hardships must “tip sharply” in his favor. All. for Wild Rockies v. Cottrell, 632 F.3d 1127, 1134–35 (9th Cir. 2011) (quoting The Lands Council v. McNair, 537 F.3d 981, 987 (9th Cir. 2008)).

Here, the government has a compelling interest in the steady enforcement of its immigration laws. See Noem v. Vasquez Perdomo, 606 U.S. —, 2025 WL 2585637, at *4-5 (2025) (Kavanaugh, J., concurring) (finding that balance of harms and equities tips in favor of the government in immigration enforcement given the “myriad ‘significant economic and social problems’ caused by illegal immigration”); Demore, 538 U.S. at 523; Stormans, Inc. v. Selecky, 586 F.3d 1109, 1140 (9th Cir. 2009) (holding that the court “should give due weight to the serious consideration of the public interest” in enacted laws); see also Ubiquity Press v. Baran, No 8:20-cv-01809-JLS-DFM, 2020 WL 8172983, at *4 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 20, 2020) (“the public interest in the United States’ enforcement of its immigration laws is high”); United States v. Arango, CV 09-178 TUC DCB, 2015 WL 11120855, at 2 (D. Ariz. Jan. 7, 2015) (“the Government’s interest in enforcing immigration laws is enormous”). Indeed, the government “suffers a form of irreparable injury” “[a]ny time [it] is enjoined by a court from effectuating statutes enacted by representatives of its people.” Maryland

1 v. King, 567 U.S. 1301, 1303 (2012) (Roberts, C.J.) (citation omitted).

2 Petitioners' claimed harms cannot outweigh this public interest in the application of the law, 3 particularly since courts "should pay particular regard for the public consequences in employing the 4 extraordinary remedy of injunction." Weinberger v. Romero-Barcelo, 456 U.S. 305, 312 (1982) (citation 5 omitted). Recognizing the availability of an injunction under these circumstances would permit any 6 "applicant for admission" subject to § 1225(b) to obtain additional review simply because he or she was 7 released—even if that release is expressly conditioned on appearing at removal proceedings for unlawful 8 entry—circumventing the comprehensive statutory scheme that Congress enacted. That statutory scheme 9 —and judicial authority upholding it—likewise favors the government. While it is "always in the public 10 interest to protect constitutional rights," if, as here, a petitioner has not shown a likelihood of success on 11 the merits of her claim, that public interest does not outweigh the competing public interest in enforcement 12 of existing laws. See Preminger v. Principi, 422 F.3d 815, 826 (9th Cir. 2005). The public and 13 governmental interest in applying the established procedures for "applicants for admission," including 14 their lawful, mandatory detention, see 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b); Jennings, 583 U.S. at 297, is significant.

15 E. Any Court Order Should Not Provide for Immediate Release and Should Not 16 Reverse the Burden of Proof

17 Immediate release is improper in these circumstances, where Petitioners are subject to mandatory 18 detention. If the Court is inclined to grant any relief whatsoever, such relief should be limited to providing 19 Petitioners with a bond hearing while they remain detained. See, e.g., Javier Ceja Gonzalez v. Noem, 20 No. 5:25-cv-02054-ODW (C.D. Cal. Aug. 13, 2025), ECF No. 12 (ordering the government to "release 21 Petitioners or, in the alternative, provide each Petitioner with an individualized bond hearing before an 22 immigration judge pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a) within seven (7) days of this Order").

23 Moreover, at any bond hearing, Petitioners should have the burden of demonstrating that they are not 24 a flight risk or danger to the community. That is the ordinary standard applied in bond hearings. Matter of 25 Guerra, 24 I&N Dec. 37, 40 (B.I.A. 2006) ("The burden is on the alien to show to the satisfaction of the [IJ] 26 that he or she merits release on bond."). It would be improper to reverse the burden of proof and place it on 27 the government in these circumstances. See Rodriguez Diaz, 53 F.4th at 1210-12 ("Nothing in this record 28 suggests that placing the burden of proof on the government was constitutionally necessary to minimize the

1 risk of error, much less that such burden-shifting would be constitutionally necessary in all, most, or many 2 cases.”).

3 The Ninth Circuit previously held that the government bears the burden by clear and convincing 4 evidence that an alien is not a flight risk or danger to the community for bond hearings in certain 5 circumstances. Singh v. Holder, 638 F.3d 1196, 1203-05 (9th Cir. 2011) (bond hearing after allegedly 6 prolonged detention). But following intervening Supreme Court decisions, the Ninth Circuit has explained 7 that “Singh’s holding about the appropriate procedures for those bond hearings . . . was expressly premised 8 on the (now incorrect) assumption that these hearings were statutorily authorized.” Rodriguez Diaz, 53 F.4th 9 at 1196, 1200-01 (citing Jennings, 583 U.S. 281, and Johnson v. Arteaga-Martinez, 596 U.S. 573 (2022)).
10 Thus, the prior Ninth Circuit decisions imposing such a requirement are “no longer good law” on this issue, 11 Rodriguez Diaz, 53 F.4th at 1196, and the Court should follow Rodriguez Diaz and the Supreme Court cases.
