

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF MICHIGAN
SOUTHERN DIVISION

JOSE ANTONIO RIVERO,

Case No. 1:25-cv-1294

Petitioner,

Hon. Jane M. Beckering
U.S. District Court Judge

v.

KRISTI NOEM, Secretary, U.S. Department of Homeland Security; ROBERT LYNCH, Field Office
Director, Detroit Field Office, Immigration Customs Enforcement,

Respondents.

RESPONSE IN OPPOSITION TO PETITION FOR WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS

Petitioner, Jose Antonio Rivero, is a noncitizen who was not lawfully admitted to the United States and has no lawful immigration status. He seeks the grant of a petition for writ of habeas corpus pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2241, challenging the lawfulness of his detention by the U.S. Department of Homeland Security (DHS), U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE).

The Court must deny the petition. First, 8 U.S.C. § 1252 deprives the Court of jurisdiction over Petitioner's claims. Sections 1252(g), (b)(9), and (e)(3) collectively bar review because Petitioner's challenge arises from DHS's discretionary decision to commence and conduct removal proceedings—including his detention under § 1225(b)(2)—and such claims may be heard, if at all, only through a petition for review in the appropriate court of appeals or under § 1252(e)(3) in the District of Columbia.

Second, Petitioner has not exhausted his administrative remedies. A habeas petitioner must ordinarily seek relief through the immigration courts and the Board of Immigration Appeals (BIA) before turning to federal court. Petitioner has not requested a bond hearing or pursued an appeal to the BIA, and the purposes of exhaustion—agency expertise, respect for administrative authority, and judicial efficiency—all weigh in favor of requiring him to do so before seeking habeas relief.

Third, Petitioner is currently detained under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A) and is therefore ineligible for release under § 1226(a). He seeks to circumvent the detention statute under which he is rightfully detained to secure a custody redetermination hearing that he is not entitled to. Petitioner argues that contrary to the plain language of § 1225(b)(2)(A), the authority for his detention is better understood to arise under § 1226(a), a detention statute that allows for release on bond or conditional parole. That argument fails to square with the fact that he falls neatly and precisely within the statutory definition of aliens subject to detention pursuant to § 1225(b)(2)(A).

Finally, Petitioner's detention does not violate the Due Process Clause. He received notice of the charges against him, has access to counsel, may attend hearings with an immigration judge, can request bond at that time, and has the right to appeal the denial of any request for bond.

Accordingly, the Court should decline to issue a writ of habeas corpus to Petitioner.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Petitioner is a citizen of Venezuela who entered the United States in 2023. (Pet. ¶¶ 23, PageID.4.) On December 13, 2023, United States Border Patrol encountered Petitioner, arrested him, and served him with a Form I-200, Warrant for Arrest of Alien. (Ex. A, Ellis Decl. ¶ 5.) Border Patrol issued Petitioner a Form I-862, Notice to Appear, charging him with inadmissibility under section 212(a)(6)(A)(i) of the INA because he is an immigrant who is present in the United States without having been admitted or paroled, or who arrived at a time or place not designated by the Attorney General. (Id.) The Notice to Appear was filed with the Chicago Immigration Court. (Id.) On December 14, 2023, Border Patrol issued Petitioner a Form I-220A, Order of Release on Recognizance, which stated that his release was contingent upon his enrollment and successful participation in an Alternatives to Detention (ATD) program. (Id. ¶ 6.) That day, Petitioner enrolled in a designated ATD program and ICE released him from custody. (Id.)

On May 7, 2024, Petitioner filed an Application for Asylum and Withholding of Removal with the Chicago Immigration Court. (Id. ¶ 7.)

On August 12, 2025, Petitioner ceased complying with the conditions of his ATD program. (Id.) On August 12, 2025, a Border Patrol agent arrested Petitioner and terminated him from the ATD program. (Id. ¶ 9.) DHS detained Petitioner without bond because it determined that Petitioner was an applicant for admission seeking admission, and not clearly and beyond doubt entitled to admission, under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2). (Id. ¶ 9.)

Petitioner submitted a request to ICE for parole on October 14, 2025. (Id. ¶ 10.) On October 17, 2025, Petitioner's removal proceedings were transferred to the Detroit Immigration Court. (Id. ¶ 11.) ICE denied his request for parole on October 24, 2025. (Id. ¶ 12.)

Petitioner is currently detained at the North Lake Processing Center in Baldwin, Michigan. (Id. ¶ 3.) He is in removal proceedings on the detained docket before the Detroit Immigration Court. (Id. ¶ 13.) Petitioner is awaiting a hearing date. (Id.)

On October 24, 2025, Petitioner filed a petition in federal court seeking a writ of habeas corpus asking the Court to issue a temporary restraining order directing Respondents to release Petitioner or provide him with a bond hearing within seven days. (Pet., PageID.18.)

ARGUMENT

I. The Court lacks jurisdiction over Petitioner's claims under Rule 12(b)(1).

A. 8 U.S.C. § 1252(e)(3) bars review of Petitioner's claims.

Section 1252(e)(3) deprives this court of jurisdiction, including habeas corpus jurisdiction, over Petitioner's challenge to his detention under § 1225(b)(2)(A). Section 1252(e)(3) limits judicial review of "determinations under section 1225(b) of this title and its implementation" to only in the District Court for the District of Columbia. 8 U.S.C. § 1252(e)(3). Paragraph (e)(3) further confines this limited review to (1) whether § 1225(b) or an implementing regulation is constitutional or (2) whether a regulation or other written policy directive, guideline, or procedure implementing the section violates the law. See 8 U.S.C. § 1252(e)(3)(A)(i)-(ii); see also M.M.V. v. Garland, 1 F.4th 1100, 1109 (D.C. Cir. 2021). Unlike other provisions within 1252(e), section 1252(e)(3) applies broadly to judicial review of section 1225(b), not just determinations under section 1225(b)(1). Compare 8 U.S.C. § 1252(e)(1)(A), (e)(2), with 8 U.S.C. § 1252(e)(3)(A). See Russello v. United States, 464 U.S. 16, 23 (1983) (quoting United States v. Wong Kim Bo, 472 F.2d 720, 722 (5th Cir. 1972)) (“[W]here Congress includes particular language in one section of a statute but omits it in another section of the same Act, it is generally presumed that Congress acts intentionally and purposely in the disparate inclusion or exclusion.’ ... We refrain from concluding here that the differing language in the two subsections has the same meaning in each. We would not presume to ascribe this difference to a simple mistake in draftsmanship.”).

Here, Petitioner challenges the determination, set forth in writing by both the Department of Justice and DHS, that aliens who entered the United States without inspection are subject to mandatory detention under § 1225(b)(2). (Pet. ¶¶ 26-30, 41, PageID.4-5, 9.) Petitioner thus seeks judicial review of a written policy or guideline implementing § 1225(b), which is covered by § 1252(e)(3)(A)(ii).

B. 8 U.S.C. § 1252 bars review of Petitioner’s claims.

Section 1252(g) categorically bars jurisdiction over “any cause or claim by or on behalf of any alien arising from the decision or action by the [Secretary of Homeland Security] to commence proceedings, adjudicate cases, or execute removal orders against any alien.” 8 U.S.C. § 1252(g) (emphasis added). The Secretary of Homeland Security’s decision to commence removal proceedings, including the decision to detain an alien pending such removal proceedings, squarely falls within this jurisdictional bar. In other words, detention clearly “aris[es] from” the decision to commence removal proceedings against an alien. See Alvarez v. ICE, 818 F.3d 1194, 1203 (11th Cir. 2016) (“By its plain terms, [§ 1252(g)] bars us from questioning ICE’s discretionary decisions to commence removal” and also to review “ICE’s decision to take [plaintiff] into custody and to detain him during removal proceedings”); Tazu v. Att’y Gen. U.S., 975 F.3d 292, 298 (3d Cir. 2020) (“The text of § 1252(g)... strips us of jurisdiction to review... [T]o perform or complete a removal, the [Secretary of Homeland Security] must exercise [her] discretionary power to detain an alien for a few days. That detention does not fall within some other part of the deportation process.”) (cleaned up) (internal quotations and citations omitted); Valencia-Mejia v. United States, No. CV 08–2943 CAS (PJWx), 2008 WL 4286979, at *4 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 15, 2008) (“The decision to detain plaintiff until his hearing before the Immigration Judge arose from this decision to commence proceedings[.]”) (emphasis added); Wang v. United States, No. CV 10-0389 SVW (RCx), 2010 WL 11463156, at *6 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 18, 2010) (citing Khorrami v. Rolince, 493 F. Supp. 2d 1061 (N.D. Ill. 2007) (“[Plaintiff’s] detention necessarily arises from the decision to initiate removal proceedings against him.”); Herrera-Correra v. United States, No. CV 08-2941 DSF (JCx), 2008 WL 11336833, at *3 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 11, 2008) (citing Sissoko v. Rocha, 509 F.3d 947, 949 (9th Cir. 2007) (“The [Secretary] may arrest the alien against whom proceedings are commenced and detain that individual until the conclusion of those proceedings. ... Thus, an alien’s detention throughout this process arises from the [Secretary]’s decision to commence proceedings[.]” and review of claims arising from such detention is barred under § 1252(g)). As such, judicial review of the Petitioner’s claim[s] is barred by § 1252(g).

C. 8 U.S.C. § 1252(b)(9) also bars review of Petitioner’s claims.

Under § 1252(b)(9), “judicial review of all questions of law . . . including interpretation and application of statutory provisions . . . arising from any action taken . . . to remove an alien from the United States” is only proper before the appropriate court of appeals in the form of a petition for review of a final removal order. See 8 U.S.C. § 1252(b)(9); Reno v. American-Arab Anti-Discrimination Comm., 525 U.S. 471, 483 (1999) (“AADC”). Section 1252(b)(9) is an “unmistakable ‘zipper’ clause” that “channels judicial review of all [claims arising from deportation proceedings]” to a court of appeals in the first instance. Id.; see Lopez v. Barr, No. CV 20-1330 (JRT/BRT), 2021 WL 195523, at *2 (D. Minn. Jan. 20, 2021) (citing Nasrallah v. Barr, 590 U.S. 573, 579–80 (2020)).

Moreover, § 1252(a)(5) provides that a petition for review is the exclusive means for judicial review of immigration proceedings.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law (statutory or nonstatutory), . . . a petition for review filed with an appropriate court of appeals in accordance with this section shall be the sole and exclusive means for judicial review of an order of removal entered or issued under any provision of this chapter, except as provided in subsection (e) [concerning aliens not admitted to the United States].

8 U.S.C. § 1252(a)(5). “Taken together, § 1252(a)(5) and § 1252(b)(9) mean that any issue—whether legal or factual—arising from any removal-related activity can be reviewed only through the [petition-for-review] process.” J.E.F.M. v. Lynch, 837 F.3d 1026, 1031 (9th Cir. 2016) (emphasis in original); see id. at 1035 (“§§ 1252(a)(5) and [(b)(9)] channel review of all claims, including policies-and-practices challenges . . . whenever they ‘arise from’ removal proceedings”); accord Ruiz v. Mukasey, 552 F.3d 269, 274 n.3 (2d Cir. 2009) (only when the action is “unrelated to any removal action or proceeding” is it within the district court’s jurisdiction); cf. Xiao Ji Chen

v. U.S. Dep't of Justice, 434 F.3d 144, 151 n.3 (2d Cir. 2006) (a “primary effect” of the REAL ID Act is to “limit all aliens to one bite of the apple” (internal quotation marks omitted)).

Critically, “[§] 1252(b)(9) is a judicial channeling provision, not a claim-barring one.” Aguilar v. ICE, 510 F.3d 1, 11 (1st Cir. 2007). Indeed, 8 U.S.C. § 1252(a)(2)(D) provides that “[n]othing . . . in any other provision of this chapter . . . shall be construed as precluding review of constitutional claims or questions of law raised upon a petition for review filed with an appropriate court of appeals in accordance with this section.” See also Ajlani v. Chertoff, 545 F.3d 229, 235 (2d Cir. 2008) (“[J]urisdiction to review such claims is vested exclusively in the courts of appeals[.]”). The petition-for-review process before the court of appeals ensures that aliens have a proper forum for claims arising from their immigration proceedings and “receive their day in court.” J.E.F.M., 837 F.3d at 1031–32 (internal quotations omitted); see also Rosario v. Holder, 627 F.3d 58, 61 (2d Cir. 2010) (“The REAL ID Act of 2005 amended the [INA] to obviate . . . Suspension Clause concerns” by permitting judicial review of “nondiscretionary” BIA determinations and “all constitutional claims or questions of law.”).

In evaluating the reach of subsections (a)(5) and (b)(9), the Second Circuit explained that jurisdiction turns on the substance of the relief sought. Delgado v. Quarantillo, 643 F.3d 52, 55 (2d Cir. 2011). Those provisions divest district courts of jurisdiction to review both direct and indirect challenges to removal orders, including decisions to detain for purposes of removal or for proceedings. See Jennings, 583 U.S. at 294–95 (section 1252(b)(9) includes challenges to the “decision to detain [an alien] in the first place or to seek removal[.]”). Here, Petitioner challenges the decision and action to detain him, which arises from DHS’s decision to commence removal proceedings, and is thus an “action taken . . . to remove him from the United States.” See 8 U.S.C. § 1252(b)(9); see also, e.g., Jennings, 583 U.S. at 294–95; Velasco Lopez v. Decker, 978 F.3d 842, 850 (2d Cir. 2020) (finding that 8 U.S.C. § 1226(e) did not bar review in that case because the petitioner did not challenge “his initial detention”); Saadulloev v. Garland, No. 3:23-CV-00106, 2024 WL 1076106, at *3 (W.D. Pa. Mar. 12, 2024) (recognizing that there is no judicial review of the threshold detention decision, which flows from the government’s decision to “commence proceedings”). As such, the Court lacks jurisdiction over this action. The reasoning in Jennings outlines why the Petitioner’s claims cannot be reviewed by this Court.

While holding that it was unnecessary to comprehensively address the scope of § 1252(b)(9), the Supreme Court in Jennings provided guidance on the types of challenges that may fall within the scope of § 1252(b)(9). See Jennings, 583 U.S. at 293–94. The Court found that “§1252(b)(9) [did] not present a jurisdictional bar” in situations where “respondents . . . [were] not challenging the decision to detain them in the first place.” Id. at 294–95. In this case, the Petitioner does challenge the government’s decision to detain him in the first place. (Pet. ¶¶ 57, 65, PageID.15, 17.) Though the Petitioner frames his challenge as relating to detention authority, rather than a challenge to DHS’s decision to detain him in the first instance, such creative framing does not evade the preclusive effect of § 1252(b)(9).

The fact that the Petitioner is challenging the basis upon which he is detained is enough to trigger § 1252(b)(9) because “detention is an ‘action taken . . . to remove’ an alien.” See Jennings, 583 U.S. at 319 (Thomas, J., concurring); 8 U.S.C. § 1252(b)(9). The Court should dismiss the Petitioner’s claims for lack of jurisdiction under § 1252(b)(9). The Petitioner must present his claims before the appropriate court of appeals because he challenges the government’s decision or action to detain him, which must be raised before a court of appeals, not this Court. See 8 U.S.C. § 1252(b)(9).

II. Petitioner has not exhausted his administrative remedies.

The Court should dismiss the petition for writ of habeas corpus for lack of jurisdiction as Petitioner has failed to exhaust administrative remedies. A habeas petitioner must normally exhaust administrative remedies before seeking federal court intervention. The exhaustion requirement “aims to provide the agency with a chance to correct its own errors, ‘protect[] the authority of administrative agencies,’ and otherwise conserve judicial resources by ‘limiting interference in agency affairs, developing the factual record to make judicial review more efficient, and resolving issues to render judicial review unnecessary.” Beharry v. Ashcroft, 329 F.3d 51, 62 (2d Cir. 2003) (Sotomayor, J.).

Petitioner does not allege that he requested a bond hearing before the immigration court. Should he request and the court grant a hearing, he would have the right to appeal any unfavorable decision to the BIA. Himnandez Torrealba v. U.S. Dep’t of Homeland Sec., No. 1:25CV01621, 2025 WL 2444114, at *9 (N.D. Ohio Aug. 25, 2025). Accordingly, Petitioner has yet to exhaust his administrative remedies within the immigration courts before seeking a writ of habeas corpus from this Court.

“When a petitioner does not exhaust administrative remedies, a district court ordinarily should either dismiss the [habeas] petition without prejudice or stay the proceedings until the petitioner has exhausted remedies, unless exhaustion is excused.” Leonardo v. Crawford, 646 F.3d 1157, 1160 (9th Cir. 2011) (citations omitted). In Leonardo, the petitioner pursued habeas review of an immigration judge’s (IJ) adverse bond determination before he appealed to the Board of Immigration Appeals. Id. The Ninth Circuit determined that filing a habeas petition in federal district court was “improper” because the petitioner “should have exhausted administrative remedies by appealing to the BIA before asking the federal district court to review the IJ’s decision.” Id. (citing Rojas-Garcia v. Ashcroft, 339 F.3d 814, 819 (9th Cir. 2003)). The Sixth Circuit has endorsed this procedure for challenging bond determinations. See Rabi v. Sessions, No. 19-3249, 2018 U.S. App. LEXIS 19661, at *1-2 (6th Cir. July 16, 2018) (citing Leonardo, 646 F.3d at 1160) (unpublished order). Additionally, some lower courts in this circuit have applied a three-factor test for determining whether prudential exhaustion applies. See, e.g., Himnandez Torrealba v. U.S. Dep’t of Homeland Sec., No. 1:25CV01621, 2025 WL 2444114, at *9 (N.D. Ohio Aug. 25, 2025). The test considers whether:

(1) agency expertise makes agency consideration necessary to generate a proper record and reach a proper decision; (2) relaxation of the requirement would encourage the deliberate bypass of the administrative scheme; and (3) administrative review is likely to allow the agency to correct its own mistakes and to preclude the need for judicial review.

Id. (quoting Puga v. Chimtoff, 488 F.3d 812, 815 (9th Cir. 2007)).

The government acknowledges that the Court previously declined to require prudential exhaustion, for example, in Sanchez Alvarez, 2025 WL 2942648, at *3, and Marin Garcia, 2025 WL 3017200, at *5. Here, however, the three-factor test weighs in favor of requiring Petitioner to exhaust his administrative remedies. First, although Petitioner alleges that Respondents violated the INA and the Due Process Clause, the latter claim likewise hinges on the INA and Respondents’ allegedly wrongful interpretation of the statute. “In other words, any determination regarding detention here turns on interpretation and application of the governing removal regime,” a review that in the first instance “should proceed before the Board of Immigration Appeals to ‘apply its experience and expertise without judicial interference.’” Monroy Villalta v. Greene, — F. Supp. 3d —, 2025 WL 2472886, at *2 (N.D. Ohio Aug. 5, 2025) (quoting Khalili v. Holder, 557 F.3d 429, 435 (6th Cir. 2009) (abrogated on other grounds)); see also Himnandez, 2025 WL

2444114, at *10 (applying Monroy Villalta to find that the first factor weighs in favor of requiring exhaustion of claims premised on the statutory interpretation of the INA).

Second, “relaxing the exhaustion requirement would encourage the deliberate bypass of the administrative scheme in favor of what may be perceived as a potentially more favorable and/or timely reviewing body, i.e., federal court.” Himnandez, 2025 WL 2444114, at *10. Petitioner has not even begun the process of seeking relief through the administrative process provided by the immigration courts and already seeks the Court’s “interference in agency affairs.” Id. Waiving administrative exhaustion in this context would undermine the authority of the agency and the “important purposes served by exhaustion.” Id.

Third, allowing the immigration court and, if necessary, the BIA to evaluate Petitioner’s bond motion “would permit the agency to correct its own mistakes, if any, and preclude the need for judicial review if Petitioner is successful.” Id. at *10. If the immigration court grants Petitioner bond, there will be no need for judicial review of his claims. Likewise, if the immigration court denies his motion, Petitioner may appeal the decision to the BIA, when he may seek a new bond hearing and request release. Indeed, a bond hearing is the very relief Petitioner seeks here. (Pet., PageID.11.)

Thus, as in Leonardo, 646 F.3d at 1160, “prudential principles of exhaustion counsel that Petitioner pursue his administrative remedies before seeking a writ of habeas corpus.” Monroy Villalta, 2025 WL 2472886, at *2 (requiring administrative exhaustion where habeas petitioner challenged his bond determination based on the statutory interpretation of 8 U.S.C. §§ 1225(b) and 1226(a)). Petitioner should pursue his claims before the immigration court and, if necessary, the Board of Immigration Appeals before seeking relief from this Court.

III. Petitioner is properly detained under § 1225.

A. Applicants for admission are subject to detention under 8 U.S.C. § 1225.

“As with any question of statutory interpretation, [the] analysis begins with the plain language of the statute.” Jimenez v. Quarterman, 555 U.S. 113, 118 (2009) (citing Lamie v. U.S. Tr., 540 U.S. 526, 534 (2004)). Section 1225(a)(1) defines an “applicant for admission” as an “alien present in the United States who has not been admitted or who arrives in the United States (whether or not at a designated port of arrival . . .)” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1); see Matter of Velasquez-Cruz, 26 I&N Dec. 458, 463 n.5 (BIA 2014) (“[R]egardless of whether an alien who illegally enters the United States is caught at the border or inside the country, he or she will still be required to prove eligibility for admission.”). Accordingly, by its very definition, the term “applicant for admission” includes two categories of aliens: (1) arriving aliens, and (2) aliens present without admission. See Dep’t of Homeland Sec. v. Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. 103, 140 (2020) (explaining that “an alien who tries to enter the country illegally is treated as an ‘applicant for admission’” (citing 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1)); Matter of Lemus, 25 I&N Dec. 734, 743 (BIA 2012) (“Congress has defined the concept of an ‘applicant for admission’ in an unconventional sense, to include not just those who are expressly seeking permission to enter, but also those who are present in this country without having formally requested or received such permission”); Matter of E-R-M- & L-R-M-, 25 I&N Dec. 520, 523 (BIA 2011) (stating that “the broad category of applicants for admission . . . includes, inter alia, any alien present in the United States who has not been admitted” (citing 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1))). An arriving alien is defined, in pertinent part, as “an applicant for admission coming or attempting to come into the United States at a port-of-entry. . . .” 8 C.F.R. §§ 1.2, 1001.1(q).

All aliens who are applicants for admission “shall be inspected by immigration officers.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(3); see also 8 C.F.R. § 235.1(a). An applicant for admission seeking admission at a United States port-of-entry “must present whatever documents are required and must establish to the satisfaction of the inspecting officer that the alien is not subject to removal . . . and is entitled, under all of the applicable provisions of the immigration laws . . . to enter the United States.” 8 C.F.R. § 235.1(f)(1); see 8 U.S.C. § 1229a(c)(2)(A). “An alien present in the United States who has not been admitted or paroled or an alien who seeks entry at other than an open, designated port-of-entry. . . is subject to the provisions of [8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)] and to removal under [8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)] or [8 U.S.C. § 1229a].” 8 C.F.R. § 235.1(f)(2).

Here, Petitioner did not present himself at a port-of-entry but instead entered the United States in 2023 between port-of-entries and without having been admitted after inspection by an immigration officer. Petitioner is, therefore, an alien present without admission and, consequently, an applicant for admission.

Both arriving aliens and aliens present without admission, as applicants for admission, may be removed from the United States by, inter alia, expedited removal procedures under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)¹ or removal proceedings before an IJ under 8 U.S.C. § 1229a. 8 U.S.C. §§ 1225(b)(1), (b)(2)(A), 1229a; see also Jennings v. Rodriguez, 583 U.S. 281, 287 (2018) (describing how “applicants for admission fall into one of two categories, those covered by § 1225(b)(1) and those covered by § 1225(b)(2)”). Immigration officers have discretion to apply expedited removal under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1) or to initiate removal proceedings before an IJ under 8 U.S.C. § 1229a. E-R-M- & L-R-M-, 25 I&N Dec. at 524; see also Matter of Q. Li, 29 I&N Dec. 66, 68 (BIA 2025) (“DHS may place aliens arriving in the United States in either expedited removal proceedings under [§ 1225(b)(1)], or full removal proceedings under [§ 1229a]” (citations omitted)).

B. Petitioner is in regular removal proceedings rather than expedited removal under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1).

Applicants for admission whom DHS places into expedited removal under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1) are subject to detention under § 1225(b)(1). Such aliens (including those referred for § 1229a removal proceedings after establishing a credible fear of persecution or torture) are ineligible for a custody redetermination hearing before an IJ. 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B)(ii), (iii)(IV); see also 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(b)(2)(iii), (b)(4)(ii); Matter of M-S-, 27 I&N Dec. 509 (A.G. 2019) (holding that aliens present without admission, placed in expedited removal, and transferred to § 1229a removal proceedings after establishing a credible fear of persecution or torture are subject to detention under § 1225(b)(1) and are ineligible for release under 8 U.S.C. § 1226).

Petitioner, an applicant for admission, has never been subject to expedited removal proceedings and is therefore not subject to detention under § 1225(b)(1). However, as discussed below, Petitioner is an applicant for admission in § 1229a removal proceedings and is subject to detention under § 1225(b)(2)(A).

C. Applicants for admission placed in § 1229a removal proceedings are subject to detention under § 1225(b)(2)(A).

Applicants for admission whom DHS places in § 1229a removal proceedings are similarly subject to detention and ineligible for a custody redetermination hearing before an IJ. Specifically, aliens present without admission placed in 8 U.S.C. § 1229a removal proceedings are both applicants for admission as defined in § 1225(a)(1) and aliens “seeking admission,” as contemplated in § 1225(b)(2)(A). Such aliens are subject to detention under § 1225(b)(2)(A) and thus ineligible for a bond redetermination hearing before the IJ.

Applicants for admission whom DHS places in 8 U.S.C. § 1229a removal proceedings are subject to detention under § 1225(b)(2)(A) and ineligible for a custody redetermination hearing before an IJ. Section 1225(b)(2)(A) “serves as a catchall provision that applies to all applicants for admission not covered by § 1225(b)(1).” Jennings, 583 U.S. at 287; see 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A), (B). Under § 1225(b)(2)(A), “an alien who is an applicant for admission” “shall be detained for a proceeding under [8 U.S.C. § 1229a]” “if the examining immigration officer determines that [the] alien seeking admission is not clearly and beyond a doubt entitled to be admitted.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A) (emphasis added); 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(b)(3) (providing that an alien placed into 8 U.S.C. § 1229a removal proceedings in lieu of expedited removal proceedings under 8 U.S.C. § 1225 “shall be detained” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)); 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(c) (providing that “any arriving alien . . . placed in removal proceedings pursuant to [8 U.S.C. § 1229a] shall be detained in accordance with [8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)]” unless paroled pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5)).

Thus, according to the plain language of 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A), applicants for admission in § 1229a removal proceedings “shall be detained.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A) (emphasis added). “The ‘strong presumption’ that the plain language of the statute expresses congressional intent is rebutted only in ‘rare and exceptional circumstances,’ . . .” Ardestani v. INS, 502 U.S. 129, 135–36 (1991) (quoting Rubin v. United States, 449 U.S. 424, 430 (1981)); see Lamie, 540 U.S. at 534 (“It is well established that when the statute’s language is plain, the sole function of the courts—at least where the disposition required by the text is not absurd—is to enforce it according to its terms.” (internal quotation omitted)). As the Supreme Court observed in Jennings, nothing in 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A) “says anything whatsoever about bond hearings.” 583 U.S. at 297. Further, there is no textual basis for arguing that § 1225(b)(2)(A) applies only to arriving aliens. The distinction the Attorney General drew in the 1997 Interim Rule (addressed in detail below) between “arriving aliens,” see 8 C.F.R. §§ 1.2, 1001.1(q), and “aliens who are present without being admitted or paroled,” Inspection and Expedited Removal of Aliens; Detention and Removal of Aliens; Conduct of Removal Proceedings; Asylum Procedures, 62 Fed. Reg. 10,312, 10,323 (Mar. 6, 1997),² finds no purchase in the statutory text. No provision within § 1225(b)(2) refers to “arriving aliens,” or limits that paragraph to arriving aliens, as Congress intended for it to apply generally “in the case of an alien who is an applicant for admission.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A). Where Congress means for a rule to apply only to “arriving aliens,” it uses that specific term of art or similar phrasing. See, e.g., id. §§ 1182(a)(9)(A)(i), 1225(c)(1).

On September 5, 2025, the BIA issued a published decision in Matter of Yajure Hurtado, 29 I&N Dec. 216 (BIA 2025). In its decision, the BIA affirmed “the Immigration Judge’s determination that he did not have authority over [a] bond request because aliens who are present in the United States without admission are applicants for admission as defined under section

² As discussed more below, the preamble language of the 1997 Interim Rule states that “[d]espite being applicants for admission, aliens who are present without having been admitted or paroled (formerly referred to as aliens who entered without inspection) will be eligible for bond and bond redetermination.” 62 Fed. Reg. at 10,323. However, preambular language is not binding and “should not be considered unless the regulation itself is ambiguous.” El Comite Para El Bienestar de Earlimart v. Warmerdam, 539 F.3d 1062, 1070 (9th Cir. 2008); see also Wards Cove Packing Corp. v. Nat’l Marine Fisheries Serv., 307 F.3d 1214, 1219 (9th Cir. 2002) (“[T]he plain meaning of a regulation governs and deference to an agency’s interpretation of its regulation is warranted only when the regulation’s language is ambiguous.” (citing Christensen v. Harris County, 529 U.S. 576, 588 (2000))).

235(b)(2)(A) of the INA, 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A), and must be detained for the duration of their removal proceedings.” Yajure Hurtado, 29 I&N Dec. at 220.³ The BIA concluded that aliens “who surreptitiously cross into the United States remain applicants for admission until and unless they are lawfully inspected and admitted by an immigration officer. Remaining in the United States for a lengthy period following entry without inspection, by itself, does not constitute an ‘admission.’” Id. at 228. To hold otherwise would lead to an “incongruous result” that rewards aliens who unlawfully enter the United States without inspection and subsequently evade apprehension for number of years. Id. In so concluding, the BIA rejected the alien’s argument that “because he has been residing in the interior of the United States for almost 3 years . . . he cannot be considered as ‘seeking admission.’” Id. at 221. The BIA determined that this argument “is not supported by the plain language of the INA” and creates a “legal conundrum.” Id. If the alien “is not admitted to the United States (as he admits) but he is not ‘seeking admission’ (as he contends), then what is his legal status?” Id. (Parentheticals in original). The BIA’s decision in Matter of Yajure Hurtado is consistent not only with the plain language of 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2), but also with the Supreme Court’s 2018 decision in Jennings and other caselaw issued after Jennings. Specifically, in Jennings, the Supreme Court explained that 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b) applies to all applicants for admission, noting that the language of 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2) is “quite clear” and “unequivocally mandate[s]” detention. 583 U.S. at 300, 303 (explaining that “the word ‘shall’ usually connotes a requirement” (quoting Kingdomware Technologies, Inc. v. United States, 579 U.S. 162, 171 (2016))).

Similarly, relying on Jennings and the plain language of 8 U.S.C. §§ 1225 and 1226(a), the Attorney General, in Matter of M-S, unequivocally recognized that §§ 1225 and 1226(a) do not overlap but describe “different classes of aliens.” 27 I&N Dec. at 516. The Attorney General also held—in an analogous context—that aliens present without admission and placed into expedited removal proceedings are detained under § 1225 even if later placed in § 1229a removal proceedings. 27 I&N Dec. at 518-19. In Matter of Q. Li, the BIA held that an alien who illegally crossed into the United States between POEs and was apprehended without a warrant while arriving is detained under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b). 29 I&N Dec. at 71. This ongoing evolution of the law makes clear that all applicants for admission are subject to detention under § 1225(b). Cf. Niz-Chavez v. Garland, 593 U.S. 155, 171 (2021) (providing that “no amount of policy-talk can overcome a plain statutory command”); see generally Florida v. United States, 660 F. Supp. 3d 1239, 1275 (N.D. Fla. 2023) (explaining that “the 1996 expansion of § 1225(b) to include illegal border crossers would make little sense if DHS retained discretion to apply § 1226(a) and release illegal border crossers whenever the agency saw fit”). Though not binding, the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Florida’s decision is instructive here. Florida held that § 1225(b) mandates detention of applicants for admission throughout removal proceedings, rejecting the assertion that DHS has discretion to choose to detain an applicant for admission under either 8 U.S.C. §§ 1225(b) or 1226(a). 660 F. Supp. 3d at 1275. The court held that such discretion “would render mandatory detention under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b) meaningless.” Id. Florida’s conclusion “that § 1225(b)’s ‘shall be detained’ means what it says and . . . is a mandatory requirement . . . flows directly from Jennings.” Florida, 660 F. Supp. 3d at 1273.

Given § 1225 is the applicable detention authority for all applicants for admission—both arriving aliens and aliens present without admission alike, regardless of whether the alien was initially processed for expedited removal proceedings under § 1225(b)(1) or placed directly into removal proceedings under § 1229a —and “[b]oth mandate detention ... throughout the completion of applicable proceedings[.]” Jennings, 583 U.S. at 301–03. IJs do not have authority to redetermine the custody status of an alien present without admission.

Here, Petitioner is an applicant for admission (specifically, an alien present without admission), placed directly into removal proceedings under 8 U.S.C. § 1229a. He is therefore subject to detention pursuant to § 1225(b)(2)(A) and ineligible for a custody redetermination hearing before an IJ. “It is well established . . . that the Immigration Judges only have the authority to consider matters that are delegated to them by the Attorney General and the [INA].” Matter of A-W-, 25 I&N Dec. 45, 46 (BIA 2009). “In the context of custody proceedings, an Immigration Judge’s authority to redetermine conditions of custody is set forth in 8 C.F.R. § 1236.1(d)” Id. at 46. The regulation clearly states that “the [IJ] is authorized to exercise the authority in [8 U.S.C. § 1226].” 8 C.F.R. § 1236.1(d); see id. § 1003.19(a) (authorizing IJs to review “[c]ustody and bond determinations made by [DHS] pursuant to 8 C.F.R. part 1236”); see id. § 1003.19(h)(2)(i)(B) (“[A]n IJ may not redetermine conditions of custody imposed by [DHS] with respect to . . . [a]rriving aliens in removal proceedings, including aliens paroled after arrival pursuant to [8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5).]”). “An [IJ] is without authority to disregard the regulations, which have the force and effect of law.” Matter of L-M-P-, 27 I&N Dec. 265, 267 (BIA 2018).

Aliens present without admission in 8 U.S.C. § 1229a removal proceedings are both applicants for admission under § 1225(a)(1) and aliens seeking admission under § 1225(b)(2)(A). As discussed above, such aliens placed in removal proceedings under § 1229a are applicants for admission as defined in § 1225(a)(1), subject to detention under § 1225(b)(2)(A), and thus ineligible for a bond redetermination hearing before the IJ. Such aliens are also considered “seeking admission,” as contemplated in § 1225(b)(2)(A). To be sure, “many people who are not actually requesting permission to enter the United States in the ordinary sense are nevertheless deemed to be ‘seeking admission’ under the immigration laws.” Lemus, 25 I&N Dec. at 743; see Yajure Hurtado, 29 I&N Dec. at 221; Q. Li, 29 I&N Dec. at 68 n.3; see also Matter of Valenzuela-Felix, 26 I&N Dec. 53, 56 (BIA 2012) (explaining that “an application for admission [i]s a continuing one”).

In analyzing 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A), the Supreme Court in Jennings equated “applicants for admission” with aliens “seeking admission.” See Jennings, 583 U.S. at 289. As noted above, the Supreme Court stated that § 1225(b)(2) “serves as a catchall provision that applies to all applicants for admission not covered by § 1225(b)(1).” Id. at 287. In doing so, it specifically cited § 1225(b)(2)(A)—and thus did not appear to consider aliens “seeking admission” to be a subcategory of applicants for admission. Id. The Supreme Court also stated that “[a]liens who are instead covered by § 1225(b)(2) are detained pursuant to a different process . . . [and] ‘shall be detained for a [removal] proceeding’ . . .” Id. at 288 (quoting 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A)). The Supreme Court considered all aliens covered by § 1225(b)(2) to be subject to detention under subparagraph (A)—not just a subset of such aliens. Moreover, Jennings found that § 1225(b) “applies primarily to aliens seeking entry into the United States (‘applicants for admission’ in the language of the statute).” Id. at 297 (emphases added). The Court therefore considered aliens seeking admission and applicants for admission to be virtually indistinguishable; it did not consider them to be merely a subcategory of applicants for admission.

The structure of the statutory scheme prior to the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996 (IIRIRA). Pub. L. No. 104-208, div. C, 110 Stat. 3009-546 (1996) bolsters the understanding that under the current statutory scheme, all applicants for admission are subject to detention under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b). The broad definition of applicants for admission was added to the INA in 1996. Before 1996, the INA only contemplated inspection of aliens arriving at POEs. See 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a) (1995) (discussing “aliens arriving at ports of the United States”); id. § 1225(b) (1995) (discussing “the examining immigration officer at the port of arrival”). Relatedly, any alien who was “in the United States” and within certain listed classes of deportable aliens was deportable. Id. § 1231(a) (1995). One such class of deportable aliens included those “who entered the United States without inspection or at any time or place other than as designated by the Attorney General.” Id. § 1231(a)(1)(B) (1995) (former deportation ground relating to entry without inspection). Aliens were excludable if they were “seeking admission” at a port-of-entry or had been paroled into the United States. See id. §§ 1182(a), 1225(a) (1995). Deportation proceedings (conducted pursuant to former 8 U.S.C. § 1252(b) (1995)) and exclusion proceedings (conducted pursuant to former 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a) (1995)) differed and began with different charging documents. See Sale v. Haitian Ctrs. Council, Inc., 509 U.S. 155, 175 (1993) (explaining the “important distinction” between deportation and exclusion); Matter of Casillas, 22 I&N Dec. 154, 156 n.2 (BIA 1998) (noting the various forms commencing deportation, exclusion, or removal proceedings). The placement of an alien in exclusion or deportation proceedings depended on whether the alien had made an “entry” within the meaning of the INA. See 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(13) (1995) (defining “entry” as “any coming of an alien into the United States, from a foreign port or place or from an outlying possession”); see also Rosenberg v. Fleuti, 374 U.S. 449, 462 (1963) (concluding that whether a lawful permanent resident has made an “entry” into the United States depends on whether, pursuant to the statutory definition, he or she has intended to make a “meaningfully interruptive” departure).

Former 8 U.S.C. § 1225 provided that aliens “seeking admission” at a port-of-entry who could not demonstrate entitlement to be admitted (“excludable” aliens) were subject to mandatory detention, with potential release solely by means of parole under 8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5) (1995). 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)-(b) (1995). “Seeking admission” in former § 1225 appears to have been understood to refer to aliens arriving at a port-of-entry.⁴ See id. The legacy Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) regulations implementing former § 1225(b) provided that such aliens arriving at a port-of-entry had to be detained without parole if they had “no documentation or false documentation,” 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(b) (1995), but could be paroled if they had valid documentation but were otherwise excludable, id. § 235.3(c) (1995). Regarding aliens who entered without inspection and were deportable under former 8 U.S.C. § 1231, such aliens were taken into custody under the authority of an arrest warrant, and like other deportable aliens, could request bond. See 8 U.S.C. §§ 1231(a)(1)(B), 1252(a)(1) (1995); 8 C.F.R. § 242.2(c)(1) (1995).

As a result, “[aliens] who had entered without inspection could take advantage of the greater procedural and substantive rights afforded in deportation proceedings,’ while [aliens] who actually presented themselves to authorities for inspection were restrained by ‘more summary exclusion proceedings.” Martinez v. Att’y Gen., 693 F.3d 408, 413 n.5 (3d Cir. 2012) (quoting Hing Sum v. Holder, 602 F.3d 1092, 1100 (9th Cir. 2010)). “To remedy this unintended and undesirable consequence, the IIRIRA substituted ‘admission’ for ‘entry,’ and replaced deportation and exclusion proceedings with the more general ‘removal’ proceeding.” Id. Consistent with this dichotomy, the INA, as amended by IIRIRA, defines all those who have not been admitted to the United States as “applicants for admission.” IIRIRA § 302.

Moreover, Congress’s use of the present participle—seeking—in 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A) should not be ignored. United States v. Wilson, 503 U.S. 329, 333 (1992) (“Congress’ use of a verb tense is significant in construing statutes.”). By using the present participle “seeking,” § 1225(b)(2)(A) “signal[s] present and continuing action.” Westchester Gen. Hosp., Inc. v. Evanston Ins. Co., 48 F.4th 1298, 1307 (11th Cir. 2022). The phrase “seeking admission” “does not include something in the past that has ended or something yet to come.” Shell v. Burlington N. Santa Fe Ry. Co., 941 F.3d 331, 336 (7th Cir. 2019) (concluding that “having” is a present participle, which is “used to form a progressive tense” that “means presently and continuously” (citing Bryan A. Garner, Garner’s Modern American Usage 1020 (4th ed. 2016))). The present participle “expresses present action in relation to the time expressed by the finite verb in its clause,” Present Participle, MerriamWebster, <http://www.merriamwebster.com/dictionary/present%20participle> (last visited Aug. 7, 2025), with the finite verb in the same clause of 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A) being “determines.” Thus, when pursuant to § 1225(b)(2)(A) an “examining immigration officer determines” that an alien “is not clearly and beyond a doubt entitled to be admitted” the officer does so contemporaneously with the alien’s present and ongoing action of seeking admission. Interpreting the present participle “seeking” as denoting an ongoing process is consistent with its ordinary usage. See, e.g., Samayoa v. Bondi, 146 F.4th 128, 134 (1st Cir. 2025)

(alien inadmissible under 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(6)(A)(i) but “seeking to remain in the country lawfully” applied for relief in removal proceedings); Garcia v. USCIS, 146 F.4th 743, 746 (9th Cir. 2025) (“USCIS requires all U visa holders seeking permanent resident status under 8 U.S.C. § 1255(m) to undergo a medical examination . . .”). Accordingly, just as the alien in Samayoa is not only an alien present without admission but also seeking to remain in the United States, Petitioner in this case is not only an alien present without admission, and therefore an applicant for admission as defined in 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1), but also an alien seeking admission under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A).

Lastly, Congress’s significant amendments to the immigration laws in IIRIRA support DHS’s position that such aliens are properly detained pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)—specifically, § 1225(b)(2)(A). Congress, for example, eliminated certain anomalous provisions that favored aliens who illegally entered without inspection over aliens arriving at port-of-entries. A rule that treated an alien who enters the country illegally, such as Petitioner, more favorably than an alien detained after arriving at a port-of-entry would “create a perverse incentive to enter at an unlawful rather than a lawful location.” Gambino-Ruiz, 91 F.4th at 990 (quoting Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. at 140) (rejecting such a rule as propounded by the defendant). Such a rule reflects “the precise situation that Congress intended to do away with by enacting” IIRIRA. Id. “Congress intended to eliminate the anomaly ‘under which illegal aliens who have entered the United States without inspection gain equities and privileges in immigration proceedings that are not available to aliens who present themselves for inspection at a port-of-entry’” by enacting IIRIRA. Ortega-Lopez v. Barr, 978 F.3d 680, 682 (9th Cir. 2020) (quoting Torres, 976 F.3d at 928); see also H.R. Rep. No. 104-469, pt. 1, at 225–29 (1996).

As discussed by the BIA in Matter of Yajure Hurtado, 29 I&N Dec. at 222-24, during IIRIRA's legislative drafting process, Congress asserted the importance of controlling illegal immigration and securing the land borders of the United States. See H.R. Rep. 104-469, pt. 1, at 107 (noting a "crisis at the land border" allowing aliens to illegally enter the United States). As alluded to above, one goal of IIRIRA was to "reform the legal immigration system and facilitate legal entries into the United States" H.R. Rep. No. 104-828, at 1 (1996). Nevertheless, after the enactment of IIRIRA, DOJ took the position—consistent with pre-IIRIRA law—that "despite being applicants for admission, aliens who are present without being admitted or paroled . . . will be eligible for bond and bond redetermination." 62 Fed. Reg. at 10,323. Affording aliens present without admission, who have evaded immigration authorities and illegally entered the United States bond hearings before an IJ, but not affording such hearings to arriving aliens, who are attempting to comply with U.S. immigration law, is anomalous with and runs counter to that goal. Cf. H.R. Rep. No. 104-469, pt. 1, at 225 (noting that IIRIRA replaced the concept of "entry" with "admission," as aliens who illegally enter the United States "gain equities and privileges in immigration proceedings that are not available to aliens who present themselves for inspection at a [POE]").

Accordingly, for the reasons discussed above, Petitioner, as an alien present without admission in 8 U.S.C. § 1229a removal proceedings, is an applicant for admission and an alien seeking admission and is therefore subject to detention under § 1225(b)(2)(A) and ineligible for a bond redetermination hearing before an IJ.

D. Applicants for admission may only be released from detention on § 1182(d)(5) parole.

Importantly, applicants for admission may only be released from detention if DHS invokes its discretionary parole authority under 8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5). DHS has the exclusive authority to temporarily release on parole “any alien applying for admission to the United States” on a “case-by-case basis for urgent humanitarian reasons or significant public benefit.” 8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5); see 8 C.F.R. § 212.5(b). In Jennings, the Supreme Court placed significance on the fact that § 1182(d)(5) is the specific provision that authorizes release from detention under § 1225(b), at DHS’s discretion. Jennings, 583 U.S. at 300. Specifically, the Supreme Court emphasized that “[r]egardless of which of those two sections authorizes . . . detention, [8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1) or (b)(2)(A)], applicants for admission may be temporarily released on parole” Id. at 288.

Parole, like an admission, is a factual occurrence. See Hing Sum, 602 F.3d at 1098; Matter of Roque-Izada, 29 I&N Dec. 106 (BIA 2025) (treating whether an alien was paroled as a question of fact). The parole authority under § 1182(d)(5) is “delegated solely to the Secretary of Homeland Security.” Matter of Castillo-Padilla, 25 I&N Dec. 257, 261 (BIA 2010); see 8 C.F.R. § 212.5(a). Thus, neither the BIA nor IJs have authority to parole an alien into the United States under § 1182(d)(5). Castillo-Padilla, 25 I&N Dec. at 261; see also Matter of Arrabally and Yerrabelly, 25 I&N Dec. 771, 777 n.5 (BIA 2002) (indicating that “parole authority [under 8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5)] is now exercised exclusively by the DHS” and “reference to the Attorney General in [8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5)] is thus deemed to refer to the Secretary of Homeland Security”); Matter of Singh, 21 I&N Dec. 427, 434 (BIA 1996) (providing that “neither the [IJ] nor th[e] Board has jurisdiction to exercise parole power”). Further, because DHS has exclusive jurisdiction to parole an alien into the United States, the manner in which DHS exercises its parole authority may not be reviewed by an IJ or the BIA. Castillo-Padilla, 25 I&N Dec. at 261; see Matter of Castellon, 17 I&N Dec. 616, 620 (BIA 1981) (noting that the BIA does not have authority to review the way DHS exercises its parole authority).

Importantly, parole does not constitute a lawful admission or a determination of admissibility, and an alien granted parole remains an applicant for admission, 8 U.S.C. §§ 1101(a)(13)(B), 1182(d)(5)(A); see 8 C.F.R. §§ 1.2 (providing that “[a]n arriving alien remains an arriving alien even if paroled pursuant to [8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5)], and even after any such parole is terminated or revoked”), 1001.1(q) (same). Parole does not place the alien “within the United States.” Leng May Ma, 357 U.S. at 190. An alien who has been paroled into the United States under § 1182(d)(5) “is not . . . ‘in’ this country for purposes of immigration law” Abebe, 16 I&N Dec. at 173 (citing, inter alia, Leng May Ma, 357 U.S. at 185; Kaplan, 267 U.S. at 228). Following parole, the alien “shall continue to be dealt with in the same manner as that of any other applicant for admission to the United States,” including that they remain subject to detention pursuant to § 1225(b)(2). 8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5)(A), E. Section 1226 does not impact the detention authority for applicants for admission.

Section 1226(a) is the applicable detention authority for aliens who have been admitted and are deportable who are subject to removal proceedings under 8 U.S.C. § 1229a, §§ 1226, 1227(a), and 1229a, and does not impact the directive in § 1225(b)(2)(A) that “if the examining immigration officer determines that an alien seeking admission is not clearly and beyond a doubt entitled to be admitted, the alien shall be detained for a proceedings under [§ 1229a].” Id. § 1225(b)(2)(A).⁵ As the Supreme Court explained, 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a) “applies to aliens already present in the United States” and “creates a default rule for those aliens by permitting—but not requiring—the [Secretary] to issue warrants for their arrest and detention pending removal proceedings.” Jennings, 583 U.S. at 289, 303; Q. Li, 29 I&N Dec. at 70; see also M-S-, 27 I&N Dec. at 516 (describing § 1226(a) as a “permissive” detention authority separate from the “mandatory” detention authority under § 1225).⁶

Generally, such aliens may be released on bond or their own recognizance, also known as “conditional parole.” 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a); Jennings, 583 U.S. at 303, 306. Section 1226(a) does not, however, confer the right to release on bond; rather, both DHS and IJs have broad discretion in determining whether to release an alien on bond if the alien establishes that he or she is not a flight risk or a danger to the community. See 8 C.F.R. §§ 236.1(c)(8), 1236.1(c)(8); Matter of Guerra, 24 I&N Dec. 37, 39 (BIA 2006); Matter of Adeniji, 22 I&N Dec. 1102 (BIA 1999). Further, ICE must detain certain aliens due to their criminal history or national security concerns context of asylum eligibility for aliens subject to reinstated removal orders, this canon and explaining that “[w]hen two statutes come into conflict, courts assume Congress intended specific provisions to prevail over more general ones”). Here, § 1225(b)(2)(A) “does not negate [8 U.S.C. § 1226(a)] entirely,” which still applies to admitted aliens who are deportable, “but only in its application to the situation that [8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A)] covers.” A. Scalia & B. Garner, Reading Law: The Interpretation of Legal Texts 185 (2012).

⁶ Importantly, a warrant of arrest is not required in all cases. See 8 U.S.C. § 1357(a). For example, an immigration officer has the authority “to arrest any alien who in his presence or view is entering or attempting to enter the United States in violation of any law or regulation” or “to arrest any alien in the United States, if he has reason to believe that the alien so arrested is in the United States in violation of any such law or regulation and is likely to escape before a warrant can be obtained for his arrest” Id. § 1357(a)(2); 8 C.F.R. § 287.3(a), (b) (recognizing the availability of warrantless arrests); see Q. Li, 29 I&N Dec. at 70 n.5. Moreover, DHS may issue a warrant of arrest within 48 hours (or an “additional reasonable period of time” given any emergency or other extraordinary circumstances), 8 C.F.R. § 287.3(d); doing so does not constitute “post-hoc issuance of a warrant,” Q. Li, 29 I&N Dec. at 69 n.4. While the presence of an arrest warrant is a threshold consideration in determining whether an alien is subject to 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a) detention authority under a plain reading of 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a), there is nothing in Jennings that stands for the assertion that aliens processed for arrest under 8 U.S.C. § 1225 cannot have been arrested pursuant to a warrant. See Jennings, 583 U.S. at 302.

under § 1226(c). See 8 U.S.C. § 1226(c)(1), (c)(2); 8 C.F.R. §§ 236.1(c)(1)(i), 1236.1(c)(1)(i); see also id. § 1003.19(h)(2)(i)(D). Release of such aliens is permitted only in very specific circumstances. See 8 U.S.C. § 1226(c)(2).

Notably, 8 U.S.C. § 1226(c) references certain grounds of inadmissibility, 8 U.S.C. § 1226(c)(1)(A), (D)-(E), and the Supreme Court in Barton v. Barr—after issuing its decision in Jennings—recognized the possibility that aliens charged with certain grounds of inadmissibility could be detained pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1226. 590 U.S. 222, 235 (2020); see also Nielsen v. Preap, 586 U.S. 392, 416-19 (2019) (recognizing that aliens who are inadmissible for engaging in terrorist activity are subject to 8 U.S.C. § 1226(c)). However, in interpreting provisions of the INA, the Board does not view the language of statutory provisions in isolation but instead “interpret[s] the statute as a symmetrical and coherent regulatory scheme and fit[s], if possible, all parts into an harmonious whole.” Matter of C-T-L-, 25 I&N Dec. 341, 345 (BIA 2010) (internal quotation marks omitted) (quoting FDA v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 529 U.S. 120, 133 (2000)). As the Supreme Court in Barton also noted, “redundancies are common in statutory drafting—sometimes in a congressional effort to be doubly sure, sometimes because of congressional inadvertence or lack of foresight, or sometimes simply because of the shortcomings of human communication.” Barton, 590 U.S. at 239. “Redundancy in one portion of a statute is not a license to rewrite or eviscerate another portion of the statute contrary to its text” Id.; see also Matter of Yajure Hurtado, 29 I&N Dec. at 222 (“Interpreting the provisions of section [1226(c)] as rendering null and void the provisions of section 1225(2)(A) (or even the provisions of section... 1225(b)(1)), would be in contravention of the ‘cardinal principle of statutory construction,’ which is that courts are to give effect, if possible, to every clause and word of a statute, rather than to emasculate an entire section.”) (quoting United States v. Menasche, 348 U.S. 528, 538–39 (1955)). The statutory language of 8 U.S.C. § 1226(c)—including the most recent amendment pursuant to the Laken Riley Act, see 8 U.S.C. § 1226(c)(1)(E), merely reflects a “congressional effort to be doubly sure” that certain aliens are detained, Barton, 590 U.S. at 239.

To interpret § 1225(b)(2)(A) as not applying to all applicants for admission would render it meaningless. As explained above, Congress expanded § 1225(b) in 1996 to apply to a broader category of aliens, including those aliens who crossed the border illegally. IIRIRA § 302. There would have been no need for Congress to make such a change if § 1226 was meant to apply to aliens present without admission. Thus, § 1226 does not have any controlling impact on the directive in § 1225(b)(2)(A) that “if the examining immigration officer determines that an alien seeking admission is not clearly and beyond a doubt entitled to be admitted, the alien shall be detained for a proceeding under [§ 1229a].” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A).

IV. Petitioner’s detention comports with due process.

The Fifth Amendment’s Due Process Clause protects against the deprivation of life, liberty, or property “without due process of law.” U.S. const. amend. V. That includes freedom from government detention unless “adequate procedural protections” are applied. Zadvydas, 533 U.S. at 690.

In the immigration context, the Supreme Court has held that the process due under the constitution is coextensive with the removal procedures provided by Congress. Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. at 138-40. See also United States ex rel. Knauff v. Shaughnessy, 338 U.S. 537, 544 (1950) (“Whatever the procedure authorized by Congress is, it is due process[.]”). It has confirmed that statutory provisions denying bond during administrative removal proceedings do not violate the due process clause. Demore v. Kim, 538 U.S. 510, 531 (2003) (“Detention during removal proceedings is a constitutionally permissible part of that process.”). And it has held that even after a noncitizen is ordered removed, detention for up to six months is presumptively valid under the due process clause. Zadvydas, 533 U.S. at 701.

To this end, the Supreme Court has also long applied the so-called “entry fiction” that all “aliens who arrive at ports of entry . . . are treated for due process purposes as if stopped at the border.” Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. at 139 (internal quotation and citation omitted). Indeed, that is so “even [for] those paroled elsewhere in the country for years pending removal.” Id. The Supreme Court has applied the entry fiction to foreign nationals with highly sympathetic claims to having “entered” and developed significant ties to this country. See, e.g., Kaplan v. Tod, 267 U.S. 228, 230 (1925) (holding that a mentally disabled girl paroled into the care of U.S. citizen relatives for nine years should be “regarded as stopped at the boundary line” and “had gained no foothold in the United States”); Shaughnessy v. United States ex rel. Mezei, 345 U.S. 206, 214–215 (1953) (holding that a foreign national with 25 years of lawful residence who sought to reenter enjoyed “no additional rights” beyond those granted by “legislative grace”). With these cases in mind, it follows that Congress intended for an unlawful entrant who violates immigration laws and evades detection must, once found, be “treated as if stopped at the border.” See Mezei, 345 U.S. at 215.

Indeed, Supreme Court precedents indicate that foreign nationals who entered illegally by evading detection while crossing the border should be treated the same as those who were stopped at the border in the first place. See Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. at 138–40. While foreign nationals who have been admitted may claim due-process protections beyond what Congress has provided even when their legal status changes (such as a foreign national who overstays a visa, or is later determined to have been admitted in error), see Wong Yang Sung v. McGrath, 339 U.S. 33, 49–50 (1950), the Supreme Court has never held that foreign nationals who have “entered the country clandestinely” are entitled to such additional rights, see Yamataya v. Fishim, 189 U.S. 86, 100

(1903). Congress has instead codified this distinction by treating all foreign nationals who have not been admitted—including unlawful entrants who have evaded detection for years—as “applicant[s] for admission.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1). In line with these cases, Congress created a detention system where applicants for admission, including those who entered the country unlawfully, are detained for removal proceedings under § 1225 and foreign nationals who have been admitted to the country are detained under § 1226.

Considering this precedent, Petitioner does not present a plausible due process claim. He admits that he entered the country without inspection in 2023 and evaded detection since then. (Pet. ¶ 23, PageID.4.) Petitioner received notice of the charges against him, has access to counsel, may attend hearings with an immigration judge, can request bond at that time, has the right to appeal the denial of any request for bond, and has been detained by ICE for a short time. Petitioner already appeared for a master hearing in immigration court (Ex. A, Cooper Decl. ¶ 8.) No further due process is due to him at this time. Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. at 138-40.

Because Petitioner has received the due process to which he is entitled, he cannot assert a viable claim under the Due Process Clause.

CONCLUSION

Respondents respectfully request that the Court deny Jose Antonio Rivero’s petition for a writ of habeas corpus because he is not detained in violation of federal law or the Constitution.

Respectfully submitted,
