CASE NO.:

PETITIONER’S AMENDED MOTION FOR ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE, AND FOR PRODUCTION OF EVIDENCE
ON AN EMERGENCY BASIS

Undersigned counsel sincerely apologizes for her error including attorney Sharma’s information inadvertently in the signature block in the original motion filed with the Court and hereby refiles an Amended motion for Order to Show Cause.

The Petitioner, Javier De Jesús Aguilar, has been unlawfully detained in civil immigration detention. As such, Petitioner, by and through the undersigned, moves the Court to issue an order to show cause on an emergency basis:

- (1) Requiring the Respondents to file a return to demonstrate the “true cause of the [Petitioner’s] detention,” 28 U. S. C. § 2243, “within three days,” id., of service on an expedited basis, why Petitioner should not be released and allowing Petitioner to file a traverse within the same period of time; and

- (2) Requiring the Respondents to produce all evidence supporting Petitioner's detention, specifically all evidence pertaining to the reasons of his detention and all other records bearing upon the "true cause of the [Petitioner's] detention," 28 U.S.C. § 2243, in support of their return.

Argument

I. Sitting in habeas, the Court may proceed via a summary show cause procedure notwithstanding the Rules of Civil Procedure.

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure expressly contemplate that they only "apply to proceedings for habeas corpus . . . to the extent that the practice in those proceedings" "is not specified in a federal statute." Fed. R. Civ. P. 81(a)(4)(A); U. S. ex rel. Goldsby v. Harpole, 249 F.2d 417, 421 (5th Cir. 1957) ("The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure have no application, other than by analogy, to habeas corpus proceedings unless by express statutory requirement.") (citations omitted) (precedential under Bonner v. City of Prichard, Ala., 661 F.2d 1206, 1207 (11th Cir. 1981)). The practice in § 2241 habeas proceedings is governed by the provisions of chapter 153 of title 28 of the U. S. Code, and by federal case law.

"In a habeas corpus proceeding the court sits as a court of law to determine 'in a summary way' whether the petitioner is unlawfully restrained of his liberty." Overholser v. Treibly, 147 F.2d 705, 708 (D.C. Cir. 1945) (footnotes and citations omitted); accord Walker v. Johnston, 312 U.S. 275, 283–84 (1941) ("The court or judge 'shall proceed in a summary way to determine the facts of the case, by hearing the testimony and arguments, and thereupon to dispose of the party as law and justice require.'") (citation omitted). Given this summary nature, 28 U.S.C. § 1657(a) provides that “court[s] shall expedite the consideration of any action brought under chapter 153 . . . of this title.”

The petitioner is seeking a general writ of habeas corpus under 28 U.S.C. § 2241, as opposed to one filed under § 2254, or § 2255. As per § 2243, when a court “entertain[s] an application for a writ of habeas corpus,” it “shall forthwith award the writ or issue an order directing the respondent to show cause why the writ should not be granted.”<sup>1</sup> “The person to whom the writ or order is directed shall make a return certifying the true cause of the detention.” § 2243.

“The writ, or order to show cause . . . shall be returned within three days unless for good cause additional time, not exceeding twenty days, is allowed.” § 2243. “Granted that dispatch is the keynote in all phases of habeas corpus and that the statutory limitation of time is clearly directed to that end,” it is still true that the “court possess[e] th[e] inherent power” to “gran[t] respondent additional time.” Wallace v. Heinze, 351 F.2d 39, 40 (9th Cir. 1965).

In response, a petitioner may “traverse[.]” “[t]he allegation of a return to the writ of habeas corpus or of an answer to an order to show cause,” § 2248, and may “deny any of the facts set forth in the return or allege any other material facts” and file “suggestions made against” the return, § 2243. Once fully briefed, a “convenient” “practice has long been followed” where “the petition and traverse are treated, as [the Supreme Court] think[s] they should be, as together constituting the application for the writ, and the return to the rule as setting up the facts thought to warrant its denial.” Walker, 312 U.S., at 284. “[O]n the facts admitted, it may appear that, as matter of law, the prisoner is entitled to the writ and to a discharge.” Id.; accord Tijerina v. Thornburgh, 884 F.2d 861, 866 (5th Cir. 1989) (“Where the petitioner raises only questions of law, or questions regarding the legal implications of undisputed facts, a hearing becomes duplicative and unnecessary.”)

But, “if the petition, the return, and the traverse raise substantial issues of fact it is the petitioner’s right to have those issues heard and determined in the manner the statute prescribes.” Walker, 312 U.S., at 286; see also Stewart v. Overholser, 186 F.2d 339, 342 (D.C. Cir. 1950) (“[T]he denial by an answer or return of factual allegations set forth in a petition for the writ would not require a traverse to raise the issue.”); Walton v. Hill, 652 F. Supp. 2d 1148, 1171 (D. Or. 2009) (same); Whitehead v. Richardson, 580 F. Supp. 44, 46 n. 3 (N.D. Ind. 1984) (same).

In such cases, “documentary evidence” “shall be admissible in evidence.” 28 U.S.C. § 2247. “[E]vidence may be taken orally or by deposition, or, in the discretion of the judge, by affidavit.” § 2246. “If affidavits are admitted any party shall have the right to propound written interrogatories to the affiants, or to file answering affidavits.” Id. Further, “the power of inquiry on federal habeas corpus is plenary.” Harris v. Nelson, 394 U.S. 286, 292 (1969) (punctuation and citation omitted).

But “the Federal Rules’ discovery rules do not apply completely and automatically” to habeas proceedings, as those rules are “ill-suited to the special problems and character of such proceedings” because “their literal application would be to invoke a procedure which is circuitous, burdensome, and time consuming.” Id., at 296–98. For example, with regard to “Rule 26(b),” its “broad-ranging preliminary inquiry is neither necessary nor appropriate in the context of a habeas corpus proceeding.” Id., at 297.

Rather, “a district court may, in an appropriate case, arrange for procedures which will allow development, for purposes of the hearing, of the facts relevant to disposition of a habeas corpus petition.” Id., at 298. “[I]f the court concludes that the petitioner is entitled to an evidentiary hearing,” “it shall order one to be held promptly,” using the statutes’ “[f]lexible provision . . . for taking evidence,” and may do so by “fashion[ing] appropriate modes of procedure, by analogy to existing rules or otherwise in conformity with judicial usage.” Id., at 299; id., at 300 (“[I]n exercising this power, the court may utilize familiar procedures, as appropriate, whether these are found in the civil or criminal rules or elsewhere in the ‘usages and principles of law.’”) (footnote omitted). Thus, on a case-by-case basis “where specific allegations before the court show reason,” the “courts in the exercise of their discretion” may “require discovery when essential to render a habeas corpus proceeding effective.” Id., at 300 & 300 n. 7.

II. The Court should order the Respondent to show cause within three days and to produce documents showing the true cause of the Petitioner’s continued detention, with leave for the petitioner to file a traverse within an equal time period.

To begin with, Petitioner moves the Court to treat his petition (ECF D.E. 1) and supporting documentation as his opening brief for summary disposition of his application for a writ of habeas corpus. See Walker, 312 U. S., at 284. In his petition, the Petitioner explains how he has been held in civil immigration custody without a meaningful opportunity to be heard.

Upon information and belief, Petitioner is being held by Respondents as an “arriving alien” or “applicant for admission” pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b) subject to mandatory detention instead of detained pursuant to a warrant under 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a). Since Respondents already have standards briefs and responses prepared on the issue, and since undersigned counsel also argued those issues before multiple federal courts around the country, among which are the Southern District of Indiana, this case can be resolved quickly. Notwithstanding the government shutdown and lapse in appropriations, habeas cases are continuing as normal as a “rocket docket” expedited scheduling in the courts where undersigned counsel has been practicing.

As the Petitioner’s claims are already set forth in detail, and in light of the statutory requirement for expedited treatment of habeas petitions, 28 U. S. C. § 1657(a), and since the U. S. Attorney’s Office is already aware of this Petition, Petitioner requests the Court to order the Respondents to show cause via the submission of a return within three days, see 28 U. S. C. § 2243, of the Court’s order. And, the Petitioner in turn moves the Court to grant him leave to file a traverse to the respondents’ return within a time equal to the time given to the Respondents to file their return.

With respect to the Respondents need to show cause why the Petitioner should not be released, and to show “the true cause of the [petitioner’s] detention,” 28 U. S. C. § 2243, the petitioner moves the Court to order the production of evidence. Specifically, this includes all other records bearing upon the “true cause of the [petitioner’s] detention,” 28 U. S. C. § 2243. Last, the Petitioner requests further production of all other records bearing upon the “true cause of [his] detention.” Since Petitioner was just detained and immigration proceedings are at their infancy, there should not be many documents required. 28 U. S. C. § 2243. Last, the Petitioner preserves his right to propound interrogatories under 28 U. S. C. § 2246, or to request any other discovery by motion that would help “to render [this] habeas corpus proceeding effective,” Harris, 394 U. S., at 300, 300 n. 7.

Respectfully Submitted,
