PETITIONER'S AMENDED MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY
INJUNCTION

EMERGENCY MOTION

21 Petitioner seeks a preliminary injunction that requires Respondents to release
22 him on parole under 8 USC §1226 (a)(2)(B) or, in the alternative, to provide Mr.
23 Rodas a bond hearing under 8 USC §1226 (a)(2)(A) within three (3) days,
24 enjoining Respondents from applying Matter of YAJURE HURTADO, 29 I&N
25 Dec. 216 (BIA 2025) to his bond proceedings.

1 Although Petitioner has lived in the United States for over 20 years,
2 Respondents are attempting to have Petitioner treated as an applicant for admission
3 to the U.S., requiring mandatory detention under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2). But § 4 1226(a)'s discretionary detention scheme—and not § 1225(b)(2)'s detention
5 authority—governs Petitioner's detention.
6

7 Section 1226's plain language makes this clear. Under that statute, the 8 Department of Homeland Security (DHS) may detain a noncitizen pending a 9 hearing on that person's admissibility. In fact, the statute explicitly extends to 10 people who are inadmissible because they entered unlawfully.
11

12 The statutory language is unambiguous; § 1225(b)(2)'s mandatory detention
13 scheme applies “at the Nation’s borders and ports of entry, where the Government 14 must determine whether a[] [noncitizen] seeking to enter the country is 15 admissible.” Jennings v. Rodriguez, 583 U.S. 281, 287 (2018). Indeed, in contrast 16 to § 1226(a), the whole purpose of § 1225 is to define how DHS should inspect,
17 process, and detain various classes of people arriving at the border or who have 18 just entered the country. Section 1225(b)(2) thus does not apply to people like 19 Petitioner, who are “already in the country” and are detained “pending
20 the outcome of removal proceedings.” Id. at 289.
21

22 The Court should not require administrative exhaustion.
23 Appeals to the Board of Immigration Appeals (BIA or the Board) inflict the very 24 harm Petitioner seeks to avoid, where appeals take six months or more to resolve.

1 STATEMENT OF FACTS

2 This case concerns the detention authority for people who entered the United 3 States without inspection, are not apprehended upon arrival, and are not subject to 4 some other detention authority, like the detention authority for people in expedited
5 removal, 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1), or withholding-only proceedings, see id. §
6 1231(a)(6). For decades, people who have been residing in the United States, often 7
8 for years had bond determinations based on the merits of their cases

9
10 Prior to passage of the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant 11 Responsibility Act of 1996 (IIRIRA), the statutory authority for such hearings was 12 found at 8 U.S.C. § 1252(a). That statute provided for a noncitizen’s detention 13 during deportation proceedings, as well as authority to release the noncitizen on 14 bond. Such proceedings governed the detention of anyone in the United States,
15 regardless of manner of entry. IIRIRA maintained the same basic detention
16 authority in the new § 1226(a). Indeed, when passing IIRIRA, Congress explained
17 that the new § 1226(a) merely “restates the current provisions in [8 U.S.C. §
18 1252(a)] regarding the authority of the Attorney General to arrest, detain, and 19 release on bond a[] [noncitizen] who is not lawfully in the United States.” H.R.
20 Rep. No. 104-469, pt. 1, at 229 (1996); see also H.R. Rep. No. 104-828, at 210
21 (1996) (Conf. Rep.) (same). Separately, Congress enacted new detention
22 authorities for people arriving in or who recently entered the United States,
23 including a new expedited removal scheme for those arriving or who recently
24
26
27
28

1 entered. See 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)–(2). In implementing this new detention
2 authority, the former Immigration and Naturalization Service clarified that people
3 who entered the United States without inspection and who were not in expedited
4 removal would continue to be detained. Separately, “exclusion” proceedings
5 covered those who arrived at U.S. ports of entries and had never entered the United 6 States. See 8 U.S.C. § 1225 (1994) (providing for inspection and detention of 7 noncitizens “arriving at ports of the United States”); id. § 1226 (1994) (providing 8 for exclusion proceedings of “arriving” noncitizens detained for further inquiry).

9
11
12 The distinction between § 1226(a) detention and § 1225(b) detention is 13 important.

14
15 Detention under § 1226(a) includes the right to a bond hearing before a 16 neutral decisionmaker— specifically, an IJ. See 8 C.F.R. § 1236.1(d). At that 17 hearing, the noncitizen may present evidence of their ties to the United States, lack 18 of criminal history, and other factors that show they are not a flight risk or danger
19 to the community. Matter of Guerra, 24 I. & N. Dec. 37, 40 (BIA 2006). By 20 contrast, people determined to be detained under § 1225(b) are 21 subject to mandatory detention and receive no bond hearing. 8 U.S.C. §
22 1225(b)(1)(B)(ii), (iii)(IV), (b)(2). They may only be released at the discretion of 23 the arresting agency via humanitarian parole. Jennings, 583 U.S. at 288; see also 8
24 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5)(A).

25
26
27
28 For the first 25 years after IIRIRA was enacted, immigration courts across

1 “sharply” in his favor, and the remaining equitable factors are satisfied.

2 Wild Rockies v. Cottrell, 632 F.3d 1127, 1135 (9th Cir. 2011).

3
4 I. Petitioner satisfies all the factors required for a preliminary injunction.

5 A. Petitioner is likely to succeed on the merits of their argument that
6 ICE and EOIR are violating his Due Process.

7
8 Matter of Hurtado is a poorly reasoned decision that ignores the applicable
9 law and is not binding on this Court.

10 First, the plain text of § 1226 demonstrates that its subsection (a) applies to 11 Petitioner. By its own terms, § 1226(a) applies to anyone who is detained “pending
12 a decision on whether the [noncitizen] is to be removed from the United States.” 8
13 U.S.C. § 1226(a).

15 Section 1226 goes on to explicitly confirm that this authority includes not 16 just persons who are deportable, but also noncitizens who are inadmissible. While 17 § 1226(a) provides the right to seek release, § 1226(c) carves out specific 18 categories of noncitizens from being released— including certain categories of 19 inadmissible noncitizens—and subjects them instead to mandatory detention. See,
20 e.g., id. § 1226(c)(1)(A), (C). Clearly, if § 1226(a) did not cover inadmissible
21 noncitizens there would be no reason to specify that § 1226(c) governs certain 22 persons who are inadmissible; instead, it would have only needed to address people
23 who are deportable for certain offenses.

26
27
28 Generally speaking, grounds of deportability (found in 8 U.S.C. § 1227)

1 apply to people who have previously been admitted, such as lawful permanent
2 residents and certain visa holders, while grounds of inadmissibility (found in §
3 1182) apply to those who have not been admitted to the United States. See, e.g.,
4 Barton v. Barr, 590 U.S. 222, 234 (2020).

6 Notably, recent amendments to § 1226 dramatically reinforce that this
7 section covers people such as Petitioner, whom DHS alleges to have entered
8 without inspection. The Laken Riley Act added language to § 1226 that directly 9 references people who have entered without inspection or who are present without 10 authorization. See Laken Riley Act (LRA), Pub. L. No. 119-1, 139 Stat. 3 (2025).
11 Specifically, pursuant to the LRA amendments, people charged as 12 inadmissible pursuant to § 1182(a)(6) (the inadmissibility ground for entry without 13 inspection) or (a)(7) (the inadmissibility ground for lacking valid documentation to 14 enter the United States) and who have been arrested, charged with, or convicted of 15 certain crimes are subject to § 1226(c)'s mandatory detention provisions. See 8
16 U.S.C. § 1226(c)(1)(E). By including such individuals under § 1226(c), Congress
17 further clarified that, by default, § 1226(a) covers persons charged 18 under § 1182(a)(6) or (a)(7). In other words, if someone is only charged as 19 inadmissible under § 1182(a)(6) or (a)(7) and the additional crime-related 20 provisions of § 1226(c)(1)(E) do not apply, then § 1226(a) governs that person's 21 detention. Shady Grove Orthopedic Assocs., P.A. v. Allstate Ins. Co., 559 U.S. 393, 22 400 (2010) (observing that a statutory exception would be 23
25
26
27
28

1 unnecessary if the statute at issue did not otherwise cover the excepted conduct).

2 In sum § 1226's plain text demonstrates that § 1225(b)(2) should not be read to
3 apply to everyone who is in the United States "who has not been admitted," 8
4 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1).
5

6 Section 1226(a) covers those who are not now seeking admission but instead
7 are already residing in the United States—including those who are charged with 8 inadmissibility—while § 1225(b)(2) covers only those "seeking admission," i.e., 9 those who are apprehended upon arrival in the United States (and who are not 10 subject to the procedures of § 1225(b)(1)). A contrary interpretation would ignore
11 § 1226(a)'s plain text and structure and render meaningless § 1226's 12 language that specifically addresses individuals who have entered without 13 inspection.
14

17 The text of § 1225 reinforces this interpretation. As the Supreme Court has 18 recognized, § 1225 is concerned "primarily [with those] seeking entry," Jennings, 19 583 U.S. at 297, i.e., cases "at the Nation's borders and ports of entry, where the 20 Government must determine whether a[] [noncitizen] seeking to enter the country
21 is admissible," id. at 287. Paragraphs (b)(1) and (b)(2) in § 1225 reflect this 22 understanding. To begin, paragraph (b)(1)—which concerns "expedited removal of 23 inadmissible arriving [noncitizens]"—encompasses only the "inspection" of certain 24 "arriving" noncitizens and other recent entrants the Attorney General designates, 25 and only those who are "inadmissible under section 1182(a)(6)(C) or § 26
27
28

1 1182(a)(7).” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1), (A)(i). These grounds of inadmissibility are for 2 those who misrepresent information to an examining immigration officer or do not
3 have adequate documents to enter the United States.
4

5 Thus, subsection (b)(1)’s text demonstrates that it is focused only on people
6 arriving at a port of entry or who have recently entered the United States and not 7 those already residing here.
8

9 Paragraph (b)(2) is similarly limited to people applying for admission when 10 they arrive in the United States. The title explains that this paragraph addresses the 11 “[i]nspection of other [noncitizens],” i.e., those noncitizens who are “seeking 12 admission,” but who (b)(1) does not address. Id. § 1225(b)(2), (b)(2)(A). By 13 limiting (b)(2) to those “seeking admission,” Congress confirmed that it did not 14 intend to sweep into this section individuals such as Petitioner, who has already 15 entered and are now residing in the United States. An individual submits an 16 “application for admission” only at “the moment in time when the immigrant 17 actually applies for admission into the United States.” Torres v. Barr, 976 F.3d
18 918, 927 (9th Cir. 2020) (en banc).

22 Indeed, in Torres, the en banc Court of Appeals rejected the idea that § 23 1225(a)(1) means that anyone who is presently in the United States without 24 admission or parole is someone “deemed to have made an actual application for 25 admission.” Id. (emphasis omitted). That holding is instructive here too, as only 26 those who take affirmative acts, like submitting an “application for admission,” are 27
28

1 those that can be said to be “seeking admission” within § 1225(b)(2)(A).

2 Otherwise, that language would serve no purpose, violating a key rule of statutory
3 construction. Shulman, 58 F.4th at 410–11.

4
5 Furthermore, subparagraph (b)(2)(C) addresses the “[t]reatment of 6 [noncitizens] arriving from contiguous territory,” i.e. those who are “arriving on 7 land.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(C) (emphasis added). This language further 8 underscores Congress’s focus in § 1225 on those who are arriving into the United 9 States—not those already residing here. Similarly, the title of § 1225 refers to the 10 “inspection” of “inadmissible arriving” noncitizens. Dubin v. United States, 599
11 U.S. 110, 120–21 (2023) (emphasis added) (relying on section title to help construe 12 statute).

13
15
16 Finally, the entire statute is premised on the idea that an inspection occurs 17 near the border and shortly after arrival, as the statute repeatedly refers to 18 “examining immigration officer[s],” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A), (b)(4), or officers
19 conducting “inspection[s]” of people “arriving in the United States,” id. §
20 1225(a)(3), (b)(1), (b)(2), (d); see also King v. Burwell, 576 U.S. 473, 492 (2015)
21 (looking to an Act’s “broader structure . . . to determine [the statute’s] meaning”).
22

24 1. The legislative history further supports the application of § 1226(a) to 25 Petitioner.

26
27 The legislative history of IIRIRA also supports a limited construction of § 28 1225 and instead concluding that § 1226(a) applies to Petitioner. In passing the

1 Act, Congress was focused on the perceived problem of recent arrivals to the 2 United States who do not have documents to remain. See H.R. Rep. No. 104-469,
3 pt. 1, at 157–58, 228–29; H.R. Rep. No. 104- 828, at 209. Notably, Congress did
4 not say anything about subjecting all people present in the United States after an 5 unlawful entry to mandatory detention if arrested. This is important, as 6 prior to IIRIRA, people like Petitioner was not subject to mandatory detention. See
7 8 U.S.C. § 1252(a)(1) (1994) (authorizing Attorney General to arrest noncitizens
8 for deportability proceedings, which applied to all persons within the United 9 States). Had Congress intended to make such a monumental shift in immigration 10 law (potentially subjecting millions of people to mandatory detention), it would 11 have explained so or spoken more clearly. See Whitman v. Am. Trucking Ass'ns,
12 531 U.S. 457, 468–69 (2001). But to the extent it addressed the matter, Congress 13 explained precisely the opposite, noting that the new § 1226(a) merely “restates the 14 current provisions in section 242(a)(1) regarding the authority of the Attorney
15 General to arrest, detain, and release on bond a[] [noncitizen] who is not lawfully
16 in the United States.” H.R. Rep. No. 104-469, pt. 1, at 229 (emphasis added); see 17 also H.R. Rep. No. 104-828, at 210 (same).

18
20
21
22
23
24 2. The record and longstanding practice reflect that § 1226 governs
25 Petitioner’s detention.

26 DHS’s long practice of considering people like Petitioner as detained under 27 § 1226(a) prior to July of 2025 further supports this reading of the statute.
28

1 Typically, in cases like that of Petitioner, DHS issues a Form I-286, Notice of 2 Custody Determination or Form I-200 stating that the person is detained under § 3 1226(a) or has been arrested under that statute. This decision to invoke § 1226(a) is 4 consistent with longstanding practice. For decades, and across administrations,
5 DHS has acknowledged that § 1226(a) applies to individuals who entered the 6 United States unlawfully, but who were later apprehended within the borders of the 7 United States long after their entry. Such a longstanding and consistent 8 interpretation “is powerful evidence that interpreting the Act in [this] way is 9 natural and reasonable.” Abramski v. United States, 573 U.S. 169, 203 (2014)
10 (Scalia, J., dissenting); see also Bankamerica Corp. v. United States, 462 U.S. 122, 11 130 (1983) (relying in part on “over 60 years” of government interpretation and 12 practice to reject government’s new proposed interpretation of the law at issue).

13 Indeed, agency regulations have long recognized that people like Petitioner are 14 subject to detention under § 1226(a). Nothing in 8 C.F.R. § 1003.19(h)—the 15 regulatory basis for the immigration court’s jurisdiction—provides otherwise. In 16 fact, the Executive Office for Immigration Review (EOIR) confirmed that § 17 1226(a) applies to Petitioner and proposed class members’ cases when it 18 promulgated the regulations governing immigration courts and 19 implementing § 1226 decades ago. Specifically, EOIR explained that “[d]espite 20 being applicants for admission, [noncitizens] who are present without having been 21 admitted or paroled (formerly referred to as [noncitizens] who entered without 22
24
25
26
27
28

1 inspection) will be eligible for bond and bond redetermination.” 62 Fed. Reg. at 2 10323.3

4 In sum, § 1226 governs this case. Section 1225 applies only to individuals
5 arriving in the United States as specified in the statute, while § 1226 applies to 6 those who have previously entered without admission and are now residing in the 7 United States. The BIA’s attempt to bootstrap individuals who have resided in the 8 U.S. for years into expedited removal runs afoul of the law.

9
10 B. Petitioner will suffer irreparable harm absent an injunction.

11
12 Parties seeking preliminary injunctive relief must also show they are “likely 13 to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief.” Winter, 555 U.S. at 14 20. Irreparable harm is the type of harm for which there is “no adequate legal 15 remedy, such as an award of damages.” Ariz. Dream Act Coal. v. Brewer, 757 F.3d
16 1053, 1068 (9th Cir. 2014).

18 Detention constitutes “a loss of liberty that is . . . irreparable.” Moreno
19 Galvez v. Cuccinelli, 492 F. Supp. 3d 1169, 1181 (W.D. Wash. 2020) (Moreno II), 20 aff’d in part, vacated in part on other grounds, remanded sub nom. Moreno Galvez
21 v. Jaddou, 52 F.4th 821 (9th Cir. 2022); see also Rodriguez v. Robbins, 715 F.3d
22 1127, 1145 (9th Cir. 2013).

24
25 Petitioner’s detention constitutes such a harm, as “civil commitment for any 26 purpose constitutes a significant deprivation of liberty that requires due process
27 protection.” Addington v. Texas, 441 U.S. 418, 425 (1979). Indeed, “[f]reedom
28

1 from imprisonment—from government custody, detention, or other forms of
2 physical restraint—lies at the heart of the liberty” that the Due Process Clause
3 protects. Zadvydas v. Davis, 533 U.S. 678, 690 (2001). For this reason, the 4 Supreme Court has repeatedly made clear that prolonged deprivations of liberty—
5 like those that noncitizens regularly experience—require a timely hearing to test
6 the legality of detention before a “neutral and detached magistrate.” Gerstein v.
7 Pugh, 420 U.S. 103, 112 (1975); see also Cnty. of Riverside v. McLaughlin, 500
8 U.S. 44, 55–56 (1991) (similar); Gonzalez v. United States Immigr. & Customs 9 Enft., 975 F.3d 788, 823–26 (9th Cir. 2020) (holding that Gerstein applies to the 10 detention of noncitizens on a detainer); Zadvydas, 533 U.S. at 690 (detention 11 requires a hearing before an independent decisionmaker to assess whether the 12 detention “bear[s] [a] reasonable relation” to a valid government purpose, such as 13 preventing flight or protecting the community against dangerous individuals
14 (alterations in original) (quoting Jackson v. Indiana, 406 U.S. 715, 738 (1972));
15 United States v. Salerno, 481 U.S. 739, 750 (1987) (upholding Bail Reform Act’s 16 pre-trial civil detention scheme precisely because it required the government to 17 justify detention in a “full-blown adversary hearing” before a “neutral 18 decisionmaker”—a federal judge).

19
21
22
23
24
25
26
27
28
Petitioner’s claims raise constitutional concerns, for civil detention “violates due process outside of ‘certain special and narrow nonpunitive circumstances.’” Rodriguez v. Marin, 909 F.3d 252, 257 (9th Cir. 2018) (citation omitted). These

1 constitutional concerns reflect irreparable harm, with strong likelihood of success
2 on his claim that he is being held under § 1226(a) and not § 1225(b)(2). See Baird
3 v. Bonta, 81 F.4th 1036, 1048 (9th Cir. 2023) (declaring that “in cases involving a
4 constitutional claim, a likelihood of success on the merits usually establishes 5 irreparable harm”).
6

8 Detention has also taken an emotional and mental toll on Petitioner, who 9 reports significant emotional trauma and physical struggles. Such “emotional 10 stress, depression and reduced sense of well-being” further support a finding of 11 irreparable harm. Chalk v. U.S. Dist. Ct., 840 F.2d 701, 709 (9th Cir. 1988); see 12 also Moreno II, 492 F. Supp. 3d at 1181–82 (“[S]tress, devastation, fear, and 13 depression” arising from unlawful immigration policy are the type of “harms [that] 14 will not be remedied by an award of damages.”).
15

17 C. The balance of hardships and public interest weigh heavily in Petitioner’s
18 favor.
19

20 The final two factors for a preliminary injunction—the balance of hardships
21 and public interest—“merge when the Government is the opposing party.” Nken v.
22 Holder, 556 U.S. 418, 435 (2009). Here, Petitioner face weighty hardships: loss of 23 liberty, separation from family, significant stress and anxiety, and difficulty in 24 obtaining an attorney.
25

26 The government, by contrast, faces minimal hardship: the administrative 27 costs associated with bond hearings. “[T]he balance of hardships tips decidedly in 28

1 Petitioner’s favor” when “[f]aced with such a conflict between financial concerns
2 and preventable human suffering.” Hernandez, 872 F.3d at 996 (quoting Lopez v.
3 Heckler, 713 F.2d 1432, 1437 (9th Cir. 1983)).

5 What is more, because the policy preventing Petitioner from posting their bond “is 6 inconsistent with federal law, . . . the balance of hardships and public interest
7 factors weigh in favor of a preliminary injunction.” Moreno Galvez v. Cuccinelli,
8 387 F. Supp. 3d 1208, 1218 (W.D. Wash. 2019) (Moreno I); see also Moreno
9 Galvez, 52 F.4th at 832 (affirming in part permanent injunction issued in Moreno II
10 and quoting approvingly district judge’s declaration that “it is clear that neither 11 equity nor the public’s interest are furthered by allowing violations of 12 federal law to continue”). This is because “it would not be equitable or in the 13 public’s interest to allow the [government] . . . to violate the requirements of 14 federal law, especially when there are no adequate remedies available.” Valle del 15 Sol Inc. v. Whiting, 732 F.3d 1006, 1029 (9th Cir. 2013) (second alteration in 16 original) (citation omitted). Indeed, Respondents “cannot suffer harm 17 from an injunction that merely ends an unlawful practice.” Rodriguez, 715 F.3d at 18 1145. “The public interest benefits from an injunction that ensures that individuals
19 are not deprived of their liberty and held in immigration detention because of . . . a 20 likely [illegal bond] process.” Hernandez, 872 F.3d at 996.

21
22 Accordingly, the balance of hardships and the public interest
23
24 overwhelmingly favor injunctive relief to ensure that Respondents comply with 25
26
27
28

1 federal law and afford Petitioner release on bond.

2 II. Prudential exhaustion is not required.

3
4 “[T]here are a number of exceptions to the general rule requiring exhaustion,
5 covering situations such as where administrative remedies are inadequate or not
6 efficacious, . . . [or] irreparable injury will result” Laing v. Ashcroft, 370 F.3d
7 994, 1000 (9th Cir. 2004) (citation omitted). In addition, a court
8 may waive an exhaustion requirement when “requiring resort to the administrative 9 remedy may occasion undue prejudice to subsequent assertion of a court action.”
10 McCarthy v. Madigan, 503 U.S. 140, 146–47 (1992), superseded by statute on 11 other grounds as stated in Booth v. Churner, 532 U.S. 731, 739–41 (2001). “Such 12 prejudice may result . . . from an unreasonable or indefinite
13 timeframe for administrative action.” Id. at 147 (citing cases). Here, the exceptions 14 regarding irreparable injury and agency delay apply and warrant waiving any 15 prudential exhaustion requirement.
16
18
19

20 As with the irreparable harm analysis, “in cases involving a constitutional
21 claim, a likelihood of success on the merits . . . strongly tips the balance of equities
22 and public interest in favor of granting a preliminary injunction.” Baird, 81 F.4th at 23 1048.

25 A. Irreparable Injury

26 The first exception to any prudential exhaustion requirement that applies 27 here is that of irreparable injury. Each day Petitioner remains in detention is one in 28

1 which their statutory rights have been violated and they could be free. Similarly 2 situated district courts have repeatedly recognized this fact. As one court has 3 explained, “because of delays inherent in the administrative process, BIA review
4 would result in the very harm that the bond hearing was designed to prevent:
5 prolonged detention without due process.” Hechavarria v. Whitaker, 358 F. Supp.
6 3d 227, 237 (W.D.N.Y. 2019) (internal quotation marks omitted). Indeed, “if 7
8 Petitioner is correct on the merits of his habeas petition, then Petitioner has already 9 been unlawfully deprived of a [lawful] bond hearing[,] [and] . . . each additional 10 day that Petitioner is detained without a [lawful] bond hearing would cause
11 him harm that cannot be repaired.” Villalta v. Sessions, No. 17-CV-05390-LHK, 12 2017 WL 4355182, at *3 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 2, 2017) (internal quotation marks and 13 brackets omitted); see also Cortez v. Sessions, 318 F. Supp. 3d 1134, 1139 (N.D.
14 Cal. 2018) (similar). Other district courts have echoed these points.
15
16 The district courts that have recognized that irreparable harm exists here are well-
17 supported by Ninth Circuit case law. At issue in this case is civil detention, which 18 “violates due process outside of ‘certain special and narrow nonpunitive
19 circumstances.’” Rodriguez, 909 F.3d 5 See, e.g., Perez v. Wolf, 445 F. Supp. 3d
20 275, 286 (N.D. Cal. 2020); Blandon v. Barr, 434 F. Supp. 3d 30, 37 (W.D.N.Y.
21 2020); Marroquin Ambriz v. Barr, 420 F. Supp. 3d 953, 961 (N.D.
22 Cal. 2019); Ortega-Rangel v. Sessions, 313 F. Supp. 3d 993, 1003–04 (N.D. Cal.
23 2018); Montoya Echeverria v. Barr, No. 20-CV-02917-JSC, 2020 WL 2759731, at

1 *6 (N.D. Cal. May 27, 2020); Rodriguez Diaz v. Barr, No. 4:20-CV-01806-YGR,
2 2020 WL 1984301, at *5 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 27, 2020); Birru v. Barr, No. 20-CV-
3 01285-LHK, 2020 WL 1905581, at *4 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 17, 2020); Lopez Reyes v.
4 Bonnar, No. 18-CV-07429-SK, 2018 WL 7474861, at *7 (N.D.

5 Cal. Dec. 24, 2018). at 257 (quoting Zadvydas, 533 U.S. at 690). Petitioner has a
6
7 “fundamental” interest in such a hearing, as “as “freedom from imprisonment is at 8 the ‘core of the liberty protected by the Due Process Clause.’”

9
10 Hernandez, 872 F.3d at 993 (quoting Foucha v. Louisiana, 504 U.S. 71, 80 11 (1992)). This point is “beyond dispute.” Id.; see also Marin, 909 F.3d at 256–57.

12 Moreover, the irreparable injury Petitioner faces extends beyond a chance at 13 physical liberty. These are several “irreparable harms imposed on anyone subject to 14 immigration detention[.]” Hernandez, 872 F.3d at 995. These include “subpar
15 medical and psychiatric care in ICE detention facilities,” as well as the “collateral 16 harms to children of detainees whose parents are detained.” Id.

17 B. Agency Delay

18
20
21 Second, the BIA’s delays in adjudicating bond appeals warrant excusing any 22 exhaustion requirement. The court’s ability to waive exhaustion based on delay is 23 especially broad here given the interests at stake. As the Ninth Circuit has 24 explained, Supreme Court precedent “permits a court under certain prescribed
25 circumstances to excuse exhaustion where ‘a claimant’s interest in having a 26 particular issue resolved promptly is so great that deference to the agency’s 27
28

1 judgment [of a lack of finality] is inappropriate.’ ” Klein v. Sullivan, 978 F.2d 520,
2 523 (9th Cir. 2002).

4 Moreover, the Supreme Court has explained that “[r]elief [when seeking 5 review of detention] must be speedy if it is to be effective.” Stack v. Boyle, 342
6 U.S. 1, 4 (1951).

8 Despite this fundamental interest and the Supreme Court’s admonition that 9 only speedy relief is meaningful, the BIA takes over half a year in most cases to 10 adjudicate an appeal of a decision denying bond. Its own data demonstrates this 11 fact.

12
13 Waiting several months, half a year, or even a year to review a custody 14 determination is not reasonable; to the contrary, it exhibits significant disregard for 15 the “fundamental” interests at stake. The Ninth Circuit has signaled that the 16 protections afforded to criminal Respondents in pre-trial civil detention should 17 apply in the civil immigration context. In Gonzales v. U.S. Immigration & Customs
18 Enforcement, the Court of Appeals held that the Fourth Amendment “requires a 19 prompt probable cause determination by a neutral and detached magistrate to 20 justify continued detention” of a noncitizen facing removal. 975 F.3d at 798; see
21 also id. at 823–26. Similar principles demonstrate why the BIA’s review here is so
22 patently unreasonable. The protections and quick review of detention orders
23 afforded criminal Respondents are rooted in the Fifth Amendment’s
24 Due Process Clause, see Salerno, 481 U.S. at 746–47, and many of those principles

1 unquestionably apply to noncitizens, see, e.g., Zadvydas, 533 U.S. at 690–91
2 (repeatedly citing Salerno and other Fifth Amendment civil detention caselaw).
3
4 Thus, as with the rights at issue in Gonzalez, the rights of federal criminal
5 Respondents facing pretrial civil detention demonstrate that the BIA’s months- or 6 even years-long review of a noncitizen’s civil detention is an
7 “unreasonable . . . timeframe for administrative action.” McCarthy, 503 U.S. at 8 147.

10 Finally, Petitioner notes that under either basis for waiving exhaustion, the 11 history of appeals related to this issue supports him. Respondents have unclean
12 hands and should not benefit from their failure to abide by appellate authority. This 13 reality only further underscores the need for immediate relief and the propriety of 14 waving any exhaustion requirement.
15

17 CONCLUSION

18 For the foregoing reasons, Petitioner respectfully requests the Court grant his 19 motion for a preliminary injunction and:
20

- 21 1. Issue an order as to Petitioner, requiring that Respondents release Mr. Rodas on 22 parole under 8 USC §1226 (a)(2)(B) or, in the alternative, to provide Mr. Rodas a
23 bond hearing under 8 USC §1226 (a)(2)(A) within three (3) days, 24
- 25 2. Issue an injunction that enjoins Respondents from denying his bond based on 26 Matter of Hurtado.
