RESPONDENTS' RESPONSE IN OPPOSITION TO THE PETITION FOR WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS

Respondents[1], by and through the undersigned Assistant United States Attorney, submit the following response in opposition to the Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [DE 1], (Petition),

[1] A writ of habeas corpus must "be directed to the person having custody of the person detained." 28 USC § 2243. In cases involving present physical confinement, the Supreme Court reaffirmed in Rumsfeld v. Padilla, 542 U.S. 426 (2004), that "the immediate custodian, not a supervisory official who exercises legal control, is the proper respondent." Rumsfeld v. Padilla, 542 U.S. 426, 439 (2004). Petitioner is currently detained at the Krome Service Processing Center. Therefore, the Proper Respondent is Assistant Field Office Director Charles Parra at the Krome North Service Processing Center and immediate custodian. See Rumsfeld v. Padilla. All other respondents should be dismissed.

response to the Court's Order to Show Cause [DE 5] and request that it be denied stating in support thereof as follows:

I. INTRODUCTION

By way of the Petition, Argenis Ulises Teran Toro, ("Petitioner"), in relevant part, asks this Court to "[i]ssue a writ of habeas corpus clarifying that the statutory basis for petitioner's detention is 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a) and that 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A) does not apply to Petitioner. Petition [DE 1, ¶¶ 5.] Petitioner argues that the authority for his detention instead arises under § 1226(a) because it applies to "people charged as being inadmissible, including those who entered without inspection." See [DE 1, ¶¶ 43]. Accordingly, this case comes down to a question of statutory interpretation. Specifically, what statutory provision controls Petitioner's detention.

Petitioner's argument overlooks that he falls squarely within the statutory definition of aliens subject to detention under § 1225(b)(2)(A), which is also consistent with the Board of Immigration Appeal's ("BIA") decision in Matter of Yajure Hurtado, 29 I&N Dec. 216 (BIA 2025).[2] Section 1225(b)(2)(A) mandates detention for "an alien who is an applicant for admission." 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A). Pursuant to § 1225(a), "[a]n alien present in the United States who has not been admitted … shall be deemed for purposes of this chapter an applicant for admission." 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1). Petitioner admits that he entered the U.S. without inspection or admission on or about December 23, 2021, and was apprehended at the border, but then released on an order of recognizance with alternative-to-detention reporting ("ATD") conditions. Petition DE 1, ¶¶ 1. Subsequently, Petitioner pursued protection through the affirmative asylum process. Petition DE 1, ¶¶ 1, 24. Accordingly, under a plain language reading of § 1225, Petitioner is an applicant for admission and is subject to mandatory detention pursuant to § 1225(b)(2)(A). For the reasons explained more fully below, the Petition should be denied.

Oct. 10, 2025) rejecting similar argument. However, Respondents maintain and preserve this argument for the record in light of evolving precedent on this issue.

II. FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

The Petitioner, Argenis Ulises Teran Toro (Petitioner), is a native and citizen of Venezuela. See Exh. A, Form I-213, Record of Deportable/Inadmissible Alien (Form I-213), dated October 15, 2025; see also Exh. B, Declaration. Petitioner illegally entered the United States from Mexico on or about December 23, 2021, at or near San Luis, Arizona. See Exh. A, Form I-213, dated October 15, 2025; see also Exh. B, Declaration. On December 23, 2021, Petitioner was encountered by Customs and Border Protection (CBP), who then determined Petitioner was inadmissible to the United States. See Exh. A, Form I-213, dated October 15, 2025; see also Exh. B, Declaration.

Petitioner was taken into custody and, on December 27, 2021, DHS served him a Notice to Appear (NTA), charging Petitioner with inadmissibility under INA § 212(a)(6)(A)(i), as an alien present in the United States without being admitted or paroled, or who arrived in the United States at any time or place other than as designated by the Attorney General. See Exh. C, Form I-862, Notice to Appear, dated December 27, 2021. On December 28, 2021, Petitioner was released on his own recognizance and ICE Enforcement and Removal Operations (ERO) enrolled him in the Alternative to Detention (ATD) program. See Exh. D, Form I-220A, Release on Recognizance, dated December 28, 2021.

On April 22, 2022, DHS filed the NTA with Executive Office for Immigration Review (EOIR). S*ee* Exh. B, Declaration. On July 16, 2025, Petitioner attended his initial master calendar with EOIR Miami Immigration Court, during which he admitted the allegations and conceded the charge of removability. S*ee* Exh. B, Declaration.

On October 15, 2025, ICE ERO encountered Petitioner during an ATD check in and detained him. See Exh. A, Form I-213, dated October 15, 2025; see also Exh. E, Form I-200, Warrant for Arrest of Alien, dated October 15, 2025.

Petitioner is scheduled to appear for his master calendar hearing on March 3, 2026. See Exh. F, Notice of Hearing, dated December 29, 2025. The Petitioner is currently detained at the Krome North Service Processing Center as an applicant for admission who is seeking admission, under INA § 235(b)(2)(A). See Exh. G, Detention History. Petitioner never requested a bond redetermination hearing before EOIR. S*ee* Exh. B, Declaration. On November 21, 2025, Petitioner filed a parole request with ERO, which was denied by ERO on that same date.

III. ARGUMENT

Section 1225(b)(2) Mandates Detention of Aliens, Like Petitioner, Who Are Present in the United States Without Having Been Lawfully Admitted.

Under the plain language of § 1225(b)(2), the Government is required to detain all aliens, like Petitioner, who are present in the United States without admission and are subject to removal proceedings—regardless of how long the alien has been in the United States or how far from the border they ventured. That unambiguous language resolves this case. See Little Sisters of the Poor Saints Peter & Paul Home v. Pennsylvania, 591 U.S. 657, 676 (2020) ("Our analysis begins and ends with the text.").

A. Petitioner is an Applicant for Admission subject to Detention pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A).

"As with any question of statutory interpretation, [the] analysis begins with the plain language of the statute. It is well established that, when the statutory language is plain, [courts] must enforce it according to its terms." Jimenez v. Quarterman, 555 U.S. 113, 118 (2009). Section 1225(a) deems all aliens who either "arrive[] in the United States" or who are "present in the United States [and] who ha[ve] not been admitted" to be "applicant[s] for admission." 8 U.S.C.

§ 1225(a)(1). And "admission" under the Immigration and Nationality Act ("INA") means lawful entry after inspection by immigration authorities, and not mere physical entry. 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(13)(A). Thus, an alien who enters the country without permission is and remains an applicant for admission, regardless of the duration of the alien's presence in the United States or the alien's distance from the border.

By its very definition, the term "applicant for admission" includes two categories of aliens: (1) arriving aliens, and (2) aliens present without admission. See Dep't of Homeland Sec. v. Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. 103, 140 (2020) (explaining that "an alien who tries to enter the country illegally is treated as an 'applicant for admission'"); Matter of Lemus, 25 I&N Dec. 734, 743 (BIA 2012) ("Congress has defined the concept of an 'applicant for admission' in an unconventional sense, to include not just those who are expressly seeking permission to enter, but also those who are present in this country without having formally requested or received such permission . . . ."); Matter of E-R-M- & L-R-M-, 25 I&N Dec. 520, 523 (BIA 2011) (stating that "the broad category of applicants for admission . . . includes, inter alia, any alien present in the United States who has not been admitted"). An arriving alien is defined, in pertinent part, as "an applicant for admission coming or attempting to come into the United States at a port-of-entry [("POE")] . . . ." 8 C.F.R. §§ 1.2, 1001.1(q).

In turn, § 1225(b)(2) provides that "an alien who is an applicant for admission" "shall be detained" pending removal proceedings if the "alien seeking admission is not clearly and beyond a doubt entitled to be admitted." 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A) (emphasis added). The statute's use of the term "shall" make clear that detention is mandatory, see Lexecon Inc. v. Milberg Weiss Bershad Hynes & Lerach, 523 U.S. 26, 35 (1998), and the statute makes no exception based upon the duration of the alien's presence in the country or where in the country the alien is located.

Therefore, the statute's plain text mandates that the Government detain all "applicants for admission" who are not clearly and beyond a doubt entitled to be admitted.

Petitioner falls squarely within the statutory definition. He was "present in the United States," and there is no dispute that he has "not been admitted." 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a); Petition DE 1, ¶¶ 1. Moreover, Petitioner cannot establish—and has not even alleged that he can establish—that he is "clearly and beyond a doubt entitled to be admitted." 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A). Therefore, § 1225(b)(2)(A) mandates Petitioner "be detained for a proceeding under [8 U.S.C. § 1229a]." 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A).

B. Applicants for Admission under § 1225(b)(2) are seeking to be legally admitted into the United States.

As explained above, Petitioner is an "applicant[] for admission" under § 1225(b)(2) and is, therefore, seeking to be legally admitted into the United States. The statute itself makes clear that an alien who is an "applicant for admission" is necessarily "seeking admission." Moreover, an alien like Petitioner, who is identified by immigration authorities as unlawfully present, and who does not choose to withdraw their application for admission under section 1225(a)(4) and to depart from the United States voluntarily, is "seeking admission," i.e., seeking legal authority to remain in the United States.

1. The "seeking admission" clause does not negate or otherwise limit the statutorily defined term "applicant for admission".

Section 1225(b)(2) requires the detention of an "applicant for admission, if the examining officer determines that [the] alien seeking admission is not clearly and beyond a doubt entitled to be admitted." 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A) (emphasis added). The statutory text and context show that being an "applicant for admission" is a means of "seeking admission"—no additional affirmative step is necessary. In other words, every "applicant for admission" is inherently and necessarily "seeking admission," at least absent a choice to pursue voluntary withdrawal of the application for admission.

For example, § 1225(a) provides that "[a]ll aliens … who are applicants for admission or otherwise seeking admission or readmission … shall be inspected." 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(3) (emphasis added). The word "[o]therwise' means 'in a different way or manner[.]'" Texas Dep't of Hous. & Cmty. Affs. v. Inclusive Communities Project, Inc., 576 U.S. 519, 535 (2015) (quoting Webster's Third New International Dictionary 1598 (1971)); see also Villarreal v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 839 F.3d 958, 963-64 (11th Cir. 2016) (en banc) ("or otherwise" means "the first action is a subset of the second action"). Being an "applicant for admission" is thus a particular "way or manner" of seeking admission, such that an alien who is an "applicant for admission" is "seeking admission" for purposes of § 1225(b)(2)(A).[3] No separate affirmative act is necessary. See Matter of Lemus-Losa, 25 I & N. Dec. 734, 743 (BIA 2012) ("[M]any people who are not actually requesting permission to enter the United States in the ordinary sense are nevertheless deemed to be 'seeking admission' under the immigration laws"). Accordingly, § 1225(b) unambiguously provides that an alien who is an "applicant for admission" is "seeking admission," even if the alien is not engaged in some separate, affirmative act to obtain lawful admission.

2. Any perceived redundancy in the statute cannot serve as a basis to avoid the clear language of the statute.

As explained above, an "applicant for admission" is "seeking admission" under § 1225. To the extent this reading results in some redundancy in § 1225(b)(2)(A), that "is not a license to

[3] As § 1225 shows, being an "applicant for admission" is only one "way or manner" of "seeking admission," not the exclusive way. 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(3). For example, lawful permanent residents returning to the United States are not "applicants for admission" because they are already admitted, but they still may be deemed to be "seeking admission" in some circumstances. See 8 U.S.C. § 1103(A)(13)(C).

rewrite" § 1225 "contrary to its text." Barton v. Barr, 590 U.S. 222, 239 (2020); see Heyman v. Cooper, 31 F.4th 1315, 1322 (11th Cir. 2022) ("sometimes drafters do repeat themselves and do include words that add nothing of substance" especially when "the arguably redundant words that the drafters employed … are functional synonyms" (alterations accepted and emphasis in original)).

"The canon against surplusage is not an absolute rule." Marx v. Gen. Revenue Corp., 568 U.S. 371, 385 (2013). "Redundancies are common in statutory drafting—sometimes in a congressional effort to be doubly sure, sometimes because of congressional inadvertence or lack of foresight, or sometimes simply because of the shortcomings of human communication." Barton, 590 U.S. at 239. "[R]edundancy in one portion of a statute is not a license to rewrite or eviscerate another portion of the statute contrary to its text." Id. Thus, as the Supreme Court explained in Barton, "[s]ometimes the better overall reading of a statute contains some redundancy." Id.

Moreover, "the surplusage canon … must be applied with statutory context in mind" and should not be employed to undermine congressional intent. United States v. Bronstein, 849 F.3d 1101, 1110 (D.C. Cir. 2017). As explained in greater detail below, in 1996, Congress passed the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigration Responsibility Act ("IIRIRA"), Pub. L. 104-208, 110 Stat. 3009 (Sept. 30, 1996), with the goal of ensuring that aliens who enter the United States unlawfully do not receive greater privileges and benefits than aliens who lawfully present themselves for inspection at a port of entry. The canon against surplusage should not be employed to re-write the statute in contravention of this statutory context.

C. Section 1226 Does Not Support Petitioner's Argument.

Petitioner's reliance upon, and reference to, 8 U.S.C. § 1226 is unavailing. Petitioner's detention is controlled by § 1225(b)(2), not § 1226. Sections 1225 and 1226 are separate statutory provisions that provide independent bases for detention and, generally, apply to different groups of aliens. While, as explained below, there is some overlap between the aliens subject to detention under the two detention provisions, that overlap does not create a redundance because the two statutes provide for different bases for release.

Section 1226(a) authorizes the Executive to "arrest[] and detain[]" any "alien" pending removal proceedings. Section 1226(a) provides the detention authority for the significant group of aliens who are not deemed "applicants for admission" subject to § 1225(b)(2)(A)—specifically, aliens who have been admitted to the United States but are now removable, like those who overstay a visa or lawful permanent residents who engage in conduct that renders them removable.[4] Thus, section 1225(b)(2) is the more specific detention provision. See RadLAX Gateway Hotel, LLC v. Amalgamated Bank, 566 U.S. 639, 645 (2012) ("the specific governs the general"). Accordingly, § 1226(a) does not control Petitioner's detention.

In early 2025, Congress passed the Laken Riley Act, Pub. L. No. 119-1, 139 Stat. 2 (2025), which amended portions of § 1226(c). While that amendment adds some overlap between aliens subject to detention under § 1225(b)(2) and § 1226(c), that overlap does not apply to Petitioner, and as explained below, it does not create a redundancy as the amendment does independent work. Accordingly, Petitioner is not being detained under Section 1226.

D. The Government's Reading Comports with Congressional Intent.

Before 1996, federal immigration laws required the detention of aliens who presented at a port of entry but allowed aliens who were already unlawfully present in the United States to obtain release pending removal proceedings. In 1996, Congress passed the IIRIRA specifically to stop conferring greater privileges and benefits on aliens who enter the United States unlawfully as compared to those who lawfully present themselves for inspection at a port of entry. Accordingly, the Government's reading of the statute is not only supported by the express language of § 1225, but it also comports with congressional intent. See King v. Burwell, 576 U.S. 473, 492 (2015) (rejecting interpretation that would lead to a result "that Congress designed the Act to avoid"); New York State Dep't of Soc. Servs. v. Dublino, 413 U.S. 405, 419-20 (1973) ("We cannot interpret federal statutes to negate their own stated purposes.").

[4] The detention of any of the millions of aliens who have overstayed their visas is governed by § 1226(a), because those aliens (unlike Petitioner) were lawfully admitted to the United States.

The INA, as amended, contains a comprehensive framework governing the regulation of aliens, including the creation of proceedings for the removal of aliens unlawfully in the United States and requirements for when the Executive is obligated to detain aliens pending removal.

Prior to 1996, the INA treated aliens differently based on whether the alien had physically "entered" the United States. Matter of Yajure Hurtado, 29 I. & N. Dec. 216, 222-223 (BIA 2025) (citing 8 U.S.C. §§ 1225(a), 1251 (1994)); see Hing Sum v. Holder, 602 F.3d 1092, 1099-1100 (9th Cir. 2010) (same). "Entry" referred to "any coming of an alien into the United States," 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(13) (1994), and whether an alien had physically entered the United States (or not) "dictated what type of [removal] proceeding applied" and whether the alien would be detained pending those proceedings, Hing Sum, 602 F.3d at 1099. Accordingly, the INA's prior framework, which distinguished between aliens based on physical "entry," had > the 'unintended and undesirable consequence' of having created a statutory scheme where aliens who entered without inspection 'could take advantage of the greater procedural and substantive rights afforded in deportation proceedings,' including the right to request release on bond, while aliens who had 'actually presented themselves to authorities for inspection … were subject to mandatory custody.

Hurtado, 29 I. & N. Dec. at 223 (emphasis added) (quoting Martinez v. Att'y General of U.S., 693 F.3d 408, 413 n.5 (2012)); see also Hing Sum, 602 F.3d at 1100 (similar); H.R. Rep. No. 104-469, pt. 1, at 225 (1996) ("House Rep.") ("illegal aliens who have entered the United States without inspection gain equities and privileges in immigration proceedings that are not available to aliens who present themselves for inspection").

Congress discarded that regime through enactment of IIRIRA. Among other things, that law had the goal of "ensur[ing] that all immigrants who have not been lawfully admitted, regardless of their legal presence in the country, are placed on equal footing in removal proceedings under the INA." Torres v. Barr, 976 F.3d 918, 928 (9th Cir. 2020) (en banc). To that end, IIRIRA replaced the prior focus on physical "entry" and instead made lawful "admission" the governing touchstone. IIRIRA defined "admission" to mean "the lawful entry of the alien into the United States after inspection and authorization by an immigration officer." 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(13)(A) (emphasis added). In other words, the immigration laws would no longer distinguish aliens based on whether they had managed to evade detection and enter the country without permission. Instead, the "pivotal factor in determining an alien's status" would be "whether or not the alien has been lawfully admitted." House Rep., supra, at 226 (emphasis added); Hing Sum, 602 F.3d at 1100 (similar).

Petitioner's interpretation would restore the regime Congress sought to discard: It would require detention for those who present themselves for inspection at the border in compliance with law yet grant bond hearings to aliens who evade immigration authorities, enter the United States unlawfully, and remain here unlawfully for years, or even decades, until an involuntary encounter with immigration authorities. That is exactly the perverse preferential treatment for illegal entrants that IIRIRA sought to eradicate. Accordingly, this Court should reject Petitioner's interpretation. King, 576 U.S. at 492 (rejecting "petitioners' interpretation because it would … create the very [thing] that Congress designed the Act to avoid").

The Government's reading, on the other hand, is true to Congress's intent and should be adopted.

E. Under Loper Bright, the Statute Controls, Not Prior Agency Practice

Any argument that prior agency practice applying § 1226(a) to Petitioner is unavailing because under Loper Bright Enters. v. Raimondo, 603 U.S. 369, 411 (2024) (overturning Chevron, U.S.A., Inc. v. Nat. Res. Def. Council, Inc., 467 U.S. 837 (1984)), the plain language of the statute, and not prior practice, controls. Hurtado, 29 I. & N. Dec. at 225–26. In overturning Chevron, the Supreme Court recognized that courts often change precedents and "correct[] our own mistakes." Loper Bright, 603 U.S. at 411. Loper Bright overturned a decades old agency interpretation of the Magnuson-Stevens Fishery Conservation and Management Act that itself predated IIRIRA by twenty years. Id. at 380. Thus, longstanding agency practice carries little, if any, weight under Loper Bright.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons set forth above, the Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus should be denied.
