

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF PENNSYLVANIA

WILLY FRANCOIS,

Petitioner,

v.

KRISTI NOEM,
SECRETARY OF THE DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY (DHS), ET AL.,

Respondents.

No. 25-cv-7334

RESPONSE IN OPPOSITION TO PETITION FOR WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS AND APPLICATION FOR ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE

The factual and legal issues presented in this habeas corpus petition do not differ in a material way from those considered and decided by this Court in Ndiaye v. Jamison, No. 25-cv-6007, 2025 WL 3229307 (E.D. Pa. Pa. Nov. 19, 2025) (Sánchez, J.). Both the instant petition and Ndiaye concern whether an alien who is present in the United States without admission is properly subject to mandatory detention (i.e., detention without the prospect of release on bond) during the pendency of his administrative removal proceedings pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2), and the Court's jurisdiction to consider a petition for release from that custody. The Court decided both issues in favor of the petitioner, ordering the petitioner's immediate release. See 2025 WL 3218243 at *6-8.

The United States responds in opposition to the instant petition on the same grounds that it did in Ndiaye for purposes of appellate preservation, mindful that the Court has found these arguments unpersuasive.

Introduction

Petitioner has filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, challenging the authority of the U.S. Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security (“DHS”) to detain him under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2), rather than 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a).

The petition concerns whether an alien who is present in the United States without admission is properly subject to mandatory detention (i.e., detention without the prospect of release on bond) during the pendency of his administrative removal proceedings pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2), and the Court’s jurisdiction to consider a petition for release.

This legal question has been considered by numerous courts in the wake of the Board of Immigration Appeals’ (“BIA”) decision in Matter of Yajure Hurtado, 29 I. & N. Dec. 216 (B.I.A. 2025). The vast majority – including all the decisions in this district (42 to date) – have rejected the government’s position.¹ The Third Circuit Court of Appeals has not addressed this question. Federal Respondents respectfully remain of the view that their position is correct and therefore present these arguments, despite the vast weight of contrary decisions in the district, to preserve them for appeal (if ultimately authorized by the Solicitor General).

For the reasons set forth below, the Court should dismiss the petition for lack of jurisdiction. In the alternative, should the Court reach the petition's merits, it should adopt the government's interpretation of the scope of § 1225(b)(2), consistent with the plain language of the statute.

Factual and Procedural Background

Petitioner is a noncitizen of the United States and an applicant for admission into the United States. For the purposes of responding to this habeas petition only, the government does not dispute other facts or characterizations thereof stated in the petition (except if the petitioner claims he has been "admitted" to the United States). As the habeas petition acknowledges, ICE recently took Petitioner into custody under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b) and did not set a bond. Petitioner is therefore unable to obtain review of his custody by an immigration judge, pursuant to the BIA's decision in Matter of Yajure Hurtado, 29 I. & N. Dec. 216 (BIA Sept. 5, 2025). Pursuant to the BIA Hurtado decision that is binding on all immigration judges, an immigration judge has no authority to consider a bond request for any person who entered the United States without admission. The BIA determined that such individuals are subject to detention under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A) and therefore ineligible to be released on bond. *Id.*²

At the time of the filing of this petition, Petitioner was detained within the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.

Legal Standard

A writ of habeas corpus is an “extraordinary remedy.” Shinn v. Ramirez, 596 U.S. 366, 377 (2022). The petitioner bears the burden of showing his confinement is unlawful. Hawk v. Olson, 326 U.S. 271, 279 (1945); accord Cullen v. Pinholster, 563 U.S. 170, 181 (2011) (habeas petition “carries the burden of proof”); see 18 U.S.C. § 2241.

Judicial review of immigration matters, including of detention issues, is limited. I.N.S. v. Aguirre-Aguirre, 526 U.S. 415, 425 (1999); Reno v. Am.-Arab Anti-Discrimination Comm. (AADAC), 525 U.S. 471, 489-92 (1999); Miller v. Albright, 523 U.S. 420, 434 n.11 (1998); Fiallo v. Bell, 430 U.S. 787, 792 (1977); Reno v. Flores, 507 U.S. 292, 305 (1993); Hampton v. Mow Sun Wong, 426 U.S. 88, 101 n.21 (1976) (“[T]he power over aliens is of a political character and therefore subject only to narrow judicial review.”). The Supreme Court has “underscore[d] the limited scope of inquiry into immigration legislation,” and “has repeatedly emphasized that over no conceivable subject is the legislative power of Congress more complete than it is over the admission of aliens.” Fiallo, 430 U.S. at 792 (internal quotation omitted); Mathews v. Diaz, 426 U.S. 67, 79-82 (1976); Galvan v. Press, 347 U.S. 522, 531 (1954).

The plenary power of Congress and the Executive Branch over immigration necessarily encompasses immigration detention, because the authority to detain is elemental to the authority to deport and because public safety is at stake. See Shaughnessy v. United States, 345 U.S. 206, 210 (1953) (“Courts have long recognized the power to expel or exclude aliens as a fundamental sovereign attribute exercised by the Government’s political departments largely immune from judicial control.”); Carlson v. Landon, 342 U.S. 524, 538 (1952) (“Detention is necessarily a part of this deportation procedure.”); Demore v. Kim, 538 U.S. 510, 531 (2003) (“Detention during removal proceedings is a constitutionally permissible part of that process.”); Jennings v. Rodriguez, 583 U.S. 281, 286 (2018) (“Congress has authorized immigration officials to detain some classes of aliens during the course of certain immigration proceedings. Detention during those proceedings gives immigration officials time to determine an alien’s status without running the risk of the alien’s either absconding or engaging in criminal activity before a final decision can be made.”).

Petitioner must make a strong showing to demonstrate that his continued detention violates the Constitution or laws of the United States. See United States v. Five Gambling Devices, 346 U.S. 441, 449 (1953) (“This Court does and should accord a strong presumption of constitutionality to Acts of Congress. This is not a mere polite gesture. It is a deference due to deliberate judgment by constitutional majorities of the two Houses of Congress that an Act is within their delegated power or is necessary and proper to execution of that power”).

Argument

The Court should deny the petition because: (1) this Court lacks jurisdiction to intervene in Petitioner’s removal proceedings, (2) Petitioner is lawfully detained pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2), and (3) his detention does not offend due process. In the event Petitioner later brings a motion for preliminary injunctive relief, the Court can deny it for the same reasons discussed below.³

I. The District Court lacks jurisdiction to intervene in removal proceedings.

Petitioner bears the burden of establishing that this Court has subject matter jurisdiction to address his claims. See Erie Ins. Exch. v. Erie Indem. Co., 68 F.4th 815, 818 (3d Cir. 2023), cert. denied, 144 S. Ct. 1007 (2024); Finley v. United States, 490 U.S. 545, 547-48 (1989). He cannot meet this burden because his claims are jurisdictionally barred under 8 U.S.C. §§ 1252(g), 1252(b)(9), and 1252(a).

A. 8 U.S.C. § 1252(g) bars Petitioner’s claim because he challenges the government’s action to commence removal proceedings.

Petitioner challenges the determination by the Secretary of Homeland Security to detain him pursuant to § 1225(b)(2), as opposed to § 1226(a). Pet. ECF No. 1 at ¶¶ 45-49. But Congress has provided that “no court shall have jurisdiction to hear any cause or claim” that arises from “the decision or action” to “commence” removal proceedings or “adjudicate [those] cases.” 8 U.S.C. § 1252(g); AADC, 525 U.S. at 483; Tazu v. AG U.S., 975 F.3d 292, 296 (3d Cir. 2020). The Court lacks jurisdiction to adjudicate Petitioner’s claims insofar as they arise “from the decision or action by the Attorney General [or Secretary of Homeland Security] to commence proceedings [and] adjudicate cases.” § 1252(g); Tazu, 975 F.3d at 296; Valencia-Mejia v. United States, Civ. No. 08-2943, 2008 WL 4286979, at *3 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 15, 2008).

The Secretary’s decision to detain is a “specification of the decision to ‘commence proceedings’ which . . . § 1252 covers.” AADC, 525 U.S. at 474, 485 n. 9; Alvarez v. ICE, 818 F.3d 1194, 1203 (11th Cir. 2016) (“By its plain terms, [§ 1252(g)] bars us from questioning [the government’s] discretionary decisions to commence removal” of a foreign national, including the “decision to take him into custody and to detain him during his removal proceedings” (emphasis added)); Sissoko v. Rocha, 509 F.3d 947, 949 (9th Cir. 2007); S.Q.D.C. v. Bondi, No. 25-cv-3348, 2025 WL 2617973, at *2 (D. Minn. Sept. 9, 2025); see also Linarez v. Garland, No. 24-cv-0488, 2024 WL 4656265, at *4 (M.D. Pa. Sept. 24, 2024), report and recommendation adopted sub nom. Cordón-Linarez v. Garland, No. 24-cv-00488, 2024 WL 4652824 (M.D. Pa. Nov. 1, 2024) (“[I]n our view, the Attorney General’s discretionary decision to place Linarez in expedited removal proceedings is precisely the action this statute refers to.”); Saadulloev v. Garland, No. 23-cv-0106, 2024 WL 1076106, at *3 (W.D. Pa. Mar. 12, 2024) (recognizing there is no judicial review of the threshold detention decision, which flows from the government’s decision to “commence proceedings”); Khorrami v. Rolince, 493 F. Supp. 2d 1061, 1067-68 (N.D. Ill. 2007) (claim challenging arrest and detention during removal proceedings was barred under § 1252(g)).

This Court lacks jurisdiction to adjudicate Petitioner’s claim challenging the Secretary's decision to commence proceedings and hold him under § 1225(b)(2).

B. 8 U.S.C. § 1252(b)(9) deprives this Court of jurisdiction because Petitioner challenges the government's interpretation of a statutory provision arising from actions taken to remove him from the United States.

Even if this claim did not fall within the ambit of § 1252(g), the district court still lacks jurisdiction because Congress has chosen to channel review of immigration proceedings to the courts of appeal. “[N]o court shall have jurisdiction, by habeas corpus . . . or by any other provision of law,” to review any questions of law or fact “arising from any action taken or proceeding brought to remove an alien from the United States”—including interpretation and application of constitutional and statutory provisions—except on a petition for review of a final order of removal to the Court of Appeals. 8 U.S.C. § 1252(b)(9); see also id. § 1252(a)(5) (applying the same jurisdictional bar to “judicial review of an order of removal”).

Congress intended to insulate threshold detention decisions from district court review. The Supreme Court has made clear that § 1252(b)(9) is “the unmistakable ‘zipper’ clause,” channeling “judicial review of all . . . decisions and actions leading up to or consequent upon final orders of deportation,” including “non-final order[s],” into proceedings before a court of appeals. AADC, 525 U.S. at 483, 485; see also J.E.F.M. v. Lynch, 837 F.3d 1026, 1031 (9th Cir. 2016) (observing that § 1252(b)(9) is “breathtaking in its scope and vise-like in grip and therefore swallows up virtually all claims that are tied to removal proceedings”).

While § 1225(b)(9) may not bar claims challenging the conditions or scope of detention of individuals in removal proceedings, it does bar claims “challenging the decision to detain them in the first place.” Jennings v. Rodriguez, 583 U.S. 281, 294

(2018) (plurality opinion); S.Q.D.C., 2025 WL 2617973, at *3. By making such a challenge, the habeas claim here requires a court to answer “legal questions” that arise from “an action taken to remove an alien.” Jennings, 583 U.S. at 295 n. 3 (plurality opinion). Petitioner’s claims “fall within the scope of § 1252(b)(9).” Id.

“Taken together, § 1252(a)(5) and § 1252(b)(9) mean that any issue—whether legal or factual—arising from any removal-related activity can be reviewed only through the PFR [i.e., petition for review] process.” J.E.F.M., 837 F.3d at 1031. (“[W]hile these sections limit how immigrants can challenge their removal proceedings, they are not jurisdiction-stripping statutes that, by their terms, foreclose all judicial review of agency actions. Instead, the provisions channel judicial review over final orders of removal to the courts of appeals.”) (emphasis in original); see id. at 1035 (“§§ 1252(a)(5) and [(b)(9)] channel review of all claims, including policies-and-practices challenges . . . whenever they ‘arise from’ removal proceedings”); Aguilar v. ICE, 510 F.3d 1, 11 (1st Cir. 2007).

Indeed, 8 U.S.C. § 1252(a)(2)(D) provides that “[n]othing . . . in any other provision of this chapter . . . shall be construed as precluding review of constitutional claims or questions of law raised upon a petition for review filed with an appropriate court of appeals in accordance with this section.” See also Ajlani v. Chertoff, 545 F.3d 229, 235 (2d Cir. 2008) (“[J]urisdiction to review such claims is vested exclusively in the courts of appeals”).

The petition-for-review process before courts of appeals ensures that noncitizens have a proper forum for claims arising from their immigration proceedings and “receive their day in court.” J.E.F.M., 837 F.3d at 1031-32 (internal quotations omitted); see also Rosario v. Holder, 627 F.3d 58, 61 (2d Cir. 2010) (“the REAL ID Act of 2005 amended the [INA] to obviate . . . Suspension Clause concerns” by permitting judicial review of “nondiscretionary” BIA determinations and “all constitutional claims or questions of law”). These provisions divest district courts of jurisdiction to review both direct and indirect challenges to removal orders, including decisions to detain for purposes of removal or for proceedings. See Jennings, 583 U.S. at 294-95 (plurality in dicta presuming § 1252(b)(9) includes challenges to the “decision to detain [an alien] in the first place or to seek removal”).

C. 8 U.S.C. § 1252(a)(2)(B)(ii) shields from judicial review discretionary decisions, such as charge determinations regarding inadmissibility.

Furthermore, § 1252(a)(2)(B)(ii) provides that “no court shall have jurisdiction to review . . . any other decision or action of the Attorney General or the Secretary of Homeland Security the authority for which is specified under this subchapter to be in the discretion of the Attorney General or the Secretary of Homeland Security.” 8 U.S.C. § 1252(a)(2)(B).

Thus, even if there were any remaining ambiguity as to whether a foreign national could challenge the decision to detain him during removal proceedings, Congress added this additional jurisdictional bar to clarify that courts may not entertain a challenge to a discretionary decision under the INA.

II. Petitioner is lawfully in detention pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2).

Should the Court determine that it has jurisdiction to consider the habeas petition, it should nevertheless find Petitioner’s argument that his detention is pursuant to the wrong statutory authority fails on the merits.

There is a statutory distinction between aliens who are detained after lawful admission into the United States and those who are present without lawful admission.

An individual who “arrives in the [U.S.],” or is “present” in this country but “has not been admitted,” is considered an “applicant for admission” under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1). Jennings, 583 U.S. at 287; Garibay-Robledo v. Noem, et al., No. 25-cv-0177, slip op. at *1-2 (N.D. Tx. Oct. 24, 2025) (ECF No. 9). Applicants for admission are either covered by § 1225(b)(1) or § 1225(b)(2). See Jennings, 583 U.S. at 287 (§ 1225(b)(2) “serves as a catchall provision that applies to all applicants for admission not covered by § 1225(b)(1)”) (emphasis added).

Pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A), “in the case of an alien who is an applicant for admission, if the examining immigration officer determines that an alien seeking admission is not clearly and beyond a doubt entitled to be admitted, the alien shall be detained for a proceeding under section 1229a [removal proceedings].” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A). The Supreme Court has held that § 1225(b)(2)(A) is a mandatory detention statute and that individuals detained pursuant to that provision are not entitled to bond. Jennings, 583 U.S. at 287 (“Both § 1225(b)(1) and § 1225(b)(2) authorize the detention of certain aliens.”).

Petitioner falls squarely within the ambit of § 1225(b)(2)(A)’s mandatory detention requirement. He is an “applicant for admission” to the United States. See Dep’t of Homeland Sec. v. Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. 103, 140 (2020) (explaining that “an alien who tries to enter the country illegally is treated as an ‘applicant for admission,’ §1225(a)(1), and an alien who is detained shortly after unlawful entry cannot be said to have ‘effected an entry’”); Matter of Lemus, 25 I&N Dec. 734, 743 (BIA 2012) (“Congress has defined the concept of an ‘applicant for admission’ in an unconventional sense, to include not just those who are expressly seeking permission to enter, but also those who are present in this country without having formally requested or received such permission . . .”). Petitioner entered near the United States-Mexico border and was not then admitted. See Pet. at ¶ 2. Consequently, he is an “applicant for admission,” and his detention is mandatory. 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A) (stating applicant for admission “shall be” detained).

The Supreme Court has confirmed an alien present in the country but never admitted is deemed “an applicant for admission” and that “detention must continue” “until removal proceedings have concluded” based on the “plain meaning” of 8 U.S.C. § 1225. Jennings, 583 U.S. at 289, 299. At issue in Jennings was the statutory interpretation of and interplay between § 1225(b) and § 1226. The Supreme Court reversed the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals’ imposition of a six-month time limit to § 1225(b) and § 1226(c). Id. at 297. In reaching that holding, the Court declared that “an alien who ‘arrives in the United States,’ or ‘is present’ in this country but ‘has not been admitted,’ is treated as ‘an applicant for admission.’” Id. at 287 (emphasis added).

As the Court explained, both aliens detained at the border and those without legal status residing within the United States fall under § 1225. Id. at 287-88. This includes Petitioner, who is an alien present in the country but not yet admitted. See Garibay-Robledo, slip op. at *6-7 (explaining the statutory history of the Immigration and Nationality Act (“INA”) which supports reading the term “applicants for admission” to include aliens detained within the United States who have not been admitted).

The BIA confirmed the application of § 1225 to applicants for admission present within the United States, in a published formal decision earlier this year. Matter of Yajure Hurtado, 29 I&N Dec. 216 (BIA 2025). In Hurtado, the BIA affirmed that the Immigration Court lacked jurisdiction to conduct a bond hearing because the alien who was present in the United States for nearly three years but, never admitted, shall be detained under 8 U.S.C. §1225 for the duration of his removal proceedings. Id. The case involved an individual who unlawfully entered the United States in 2022 and was granted temporary protected status in 2024. Id. at 216-17. That status was revoked in 2025, and the alien was subsequently placed in removal proceedings. Id. at 217. When the alien sought a redetermination of his custody status, the immigration judge held the Immigration Court did not have jurisdiction under § 1225. Id. at 216. The alien appealed to the BIA. Id.

In affirming the decision of the immigration judge, the BIA found § 1225 clear and unambiguous: “Based on the plain language of section 235(b)(2)(A) of the [INA], 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A) (2018), Immigration Judges lack authority to hear bond requests or to grant bond to aliens who are present in the United States without admission.” Hurtado, 29 I&N Dec. 216 at 226. Indeed, § 1225 applies to aliens who are present in the country—even for years—who have not been admitted. See id. (“[T]he statutory text of the INA . . . is instead clear and explicit in requiring mandatory detention of all aliens who are applicants for admission, without regard to how many years the alien has been residing in the United States without lawful status.” (citing 8 U.S.C. § 1225)). To hold otherwise, would lead to an “incongruous result” that rewards aliens who unlawfully enter the United States with inspection and possibly evade apprehension for a number of years. Id. at 228.

Next, the BIA rejected the alien’s argument that the mandatory detention scheme under § 1225 rendered the recent amendment to § 1226 under the Laken Riley Act superfluous. Id. The BIA explained, “nothing in the statutory text of section 236(c), including the text of the amendments made by the Laken Riley Act, purports to alter or undermine the provisions of section 235(b)(2)(A) of the INA, 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A), requiring that aliens who fall within the definition of the statute ‘shall be detained for [removal proceedings].’” Id. at 222. According to the BIA, any redundancy between the two statutes does not give license to “rewrite or eviscerate” one of the statutes. See id. (quoting Barton v. Barr, 590 U.S. 222, 239 (2020)).

The BIA mandate is both concise and sweeping. “Under a plain language reading of section 235(b)(2)(A) of the INA, 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A), Immigration Judges lack authority to hear bond requests or to grant bond to aliens who—like the Petitioner here—are present in the United States without admission.” See id., at 225. And the Hurtado decision was unanimous, conducted by a three-appellate judge panel. See id. generally. It is binding on all immigration judges in the United States. 8 C.F.R. § 1003.1(g)(1) (“[D]ecisions of the [BIA] and decisions of the Attorney General are binding on all officers and employees of DHS or immigration judges in the administration of the immigration laws of the United States.”). Hurtado is a “precedential opinion.” Id. at 216; see 8 C.F.R. § 1003.1(g)(2)-(3).

Following Hurtado, several district courts around the country held that § 1225(b) permits the mandatory detention of aliens who had not been previously admitted when entering at the border but were subsequently found within the country. See Vargas Lopez v. Trump, No. 25-cv-0526, 2025 WL 2780351 (D. Neb. Sept. 30, 2025); Chavez v. Noem, No. 25-cv-2325, 2025 WL 2730228, at *5 (S.D. Cal. Sept. 24, 2025); see also C.B. v. Oddo, No. 25-cv-0263, 2025 WL 2977870, at *2 (W.D. Pa. Oct. 22, 2025) (holding petitioner could be held without bond pursuant to § 1225(b), but awarding habeas relief due to the petitioner’s prolonged detention).

In Vargas Lopez, the district court expressly addressed the interplay of § 1225(b)(2) and § 1226(a). The court explained that these two statutory provisions overlap and are not mutually exclusive. Vargas Lopez, 2025 WL 2780351, at *7 (citing Jennings, 583 U.S. at 289). While § 1225(b) provides for detention of alien applicants for admission, § 1226(a) is broader in scope and permits the Secretary to issue warrants for arrest and detention of aliens present in the country pending removal proceedings. Given that these sections are not mutually exclusive, an alien may be subject to both § 1225(b)(2) and § 1226(a) if he is an applicant for admission who is detained within the country. Id.; see Barton v. Barr, 590 U.S. 222, 239 (2020) (recognizing that “redundancies are common in statutory drafting”).

An alien remains an applicant for admission, and subject to § 1225(b)(2), so long as he is “not clearly and beyond doubt entitled to be admitted” to the United States. See 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A). Nothing in either § 1225(b)(2) nor § 1226(a) provides that the government must default to detaining an alien pursuant to § 1226(a) if he is subject to detention under § 1225(b)(2) as well.

While the Third Circuit has not yet ruled on whether an alien like Petitioner may be detained under § 1225(b)(2), district courts in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and elsewhere, have overwhelmingly ruled contrary to the government’s reading of the statute. See cases cited at pp. 1-2, supra. The Secretary of Homeland Security, however contends, that these decisions effectively read into the statute a limitation that is not expressly there—that § 1225(b)(2) only applies to applicants for admission who are actively seeking to enter the United States, typically near the border. See, e.g., Kashranov, 2025 WL 3188399, at *6; see also Bethancourt Soto v. Louis Soto, Civ. No. 25-16200, 2025 WL 2976572 (D. N.J. Oct. 22, 2025).

The statute itself does not expressly contain any such limitation. See 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a) (defining applicant for admission as either “[a]n alien present in the United States who has not been admitted or who arrives in the United States”) (emphasis added). Further, Congress defined all aliens who are present in the United States without being admitted as “applicant[s] for admission,” regardless of when they entered. See 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1).

When an immigration officer encounters and examines an applicant for admission who seeks to remain in the United States, and that alien (like Petitioner) desires to remain in the United States, he is necessarily “seeking admission” within the meaning of 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A). Otherwise, the alien must “withdraw the application for admission and depart immediately from the United States.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(4). An alien continues to be “seeking admission” while in immigration removal proceedings to determine whether he can “be admitted to the United States.” See 8 U.S.C. § 1229a(3); In Re Lemus, 25 I&N Dec. 734, 743 (BIA 2012) (recognizing that “many people who are not actually requesting permission to enter the United States in the ordinary sense are nevertheless deemed to be ‘seeking admission’ under the immigration laws”) (emphasis in original). In other words, an “applicant for admission” is necessarily “seeking admission.” See Rojas v. Olson, No. 25-cv-1437, 2025 WL 3033967, at *8 (E.D. Wis. Oct. 30, 2025); but see Bethancourt Soto v. Soto, No. 25-cv-16200, 2025 WL 2976572, at *6 (D.N.J. Oct. 22, 2025).

Petitioner remains an applicant for admission, as he has not clearly and beyond doubt established that he is entitled to be admitted to the United States. Consequently, he is subject to mandatory detention under § 1225(b)(2) and ineligible for a bond hearing before an immigration judge.

III. Petitioner’s detention does not offend due process.

Congress broadly crafted “applicants for admission” to include undocumented persons, like Petitioner, who are present within the United States. See 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1). In so doing, Congress made a legislative judgment to detain undocumented persons during removal proceedings. 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A); Jennings, 583 U.S. at 297 (“Read most naturally, §§ 1225(b)(1) and (b)(2) thus mandate detention of applicants for admission until certain proceedings have concluded.”).

The Supreme Court has repeatedly recognized this profound interest. Petitioner’s mandatory detention pursuant to §1225(b) will only last the duration of his removal proceedings. Demore, 538 U.S. at 512 (“[B]ecause the statutory provision at issue in this case governs detention of deportable criminal aliens pending their removal proceedings, the detention necessarily serves the purpose of preventing the aliens from fleeing prior to or during such proceedings”); see also Jennings, 583 U.S. at 304. In light of Congress’s interest in regulating immigration, including by keeping specified persons in detention pending the removal period, the Supreme Court dispensed of any due process concerns without engaging in the test set forth in Mathews v. Eldridge, 424 U.S. 319 (1976). See generally Demore, 538 U.S. at 531.

Petitioner’s recent detention pending his removal proceedings does not violate the Due Process Clause. See e.g. Zadvydas v. Davis, 533 U.S. 678, 701 (2001) (detention less than six months presumed constitutional). Congress made the decision to detain him pending removal, which is a “constitutionally permissible part of that process.” See Demore, 538 U.S. at 531.

The Third Circuit has recognized that there may come a time when mandatory civil detention without a bond hearing becomes unreasonable. See German Santos v. Warden Pike Cnty. Corr. Facility, 965 F.3d 203, 211 (3d Cir. 2020) (analyzing detention under § 1226(c)). However, at this time, Petitioner does not challenge the reasonableness of his detention under German Santos.

Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, respondents respectfully request that the petition for writ of habeas corpus be denied.
