1 INTRODUCTION

2 The facts of the matter are not in dispute. Petitioner is being held by ICE without bond due
3 to ICE and the Board of Immigration Appeals' ("BIA") interpretation of "applicants for admission"
4 that was rejected by this court in J.A.M. v. Streeval, No. 4:25-cv-342-CDL-AGH (M.D. Ga. Nov.
5 1, 2025) and P.R.S. v. Streeval, No. 4:25-cv-330-CDL, 2025 WL 3269947 (M.D. Ga. Nov. 24,
6 2025), and most recently, Lazaro Maldonado Bautista et al v. Ernesto SantaLopez Garcia Jr et al,
7 No. 5:25-cv-01873-SSS-BFM (C.D. Cal. 2025). The Court should continue to reject this line of 8 reasoning and order the Petitioner released or that he is entitled to a bond hearing under 8 U.S.C.
9 § 1226(a).

10 ARGUMENT

11 I. THE COURT HAS JURISDICTION TO HEAR PETITIONER'S CLAIM

12 Under 28 U.S.C. § 2241(c), habeas relief may be extended to a prisoner only when he "is in 13 custody in violation of the Constitution or laws or treaties of the United States." 28 U.S.C. §
14 2241(c)(3). A federal court has jurisdiction over such a petition if the petitioner is "in custody"
15 and the custody is allegedly "in violation of the Constitution or laws or treaties of the United States."
16 28 U.S.C. § 2241(c)(3); Maleng v. Cook, 490 U.S. 488, 490 (1989).

17 Petitioner was detained within the Southern District when he filed the Petition, and he asserts 18 that his continued detention violates due process. Therefore, the Court has jurisdiction over his 19 claims. Trump v. J. G. G., 604 U.S. 670, 3 672 (2025) (per curiam) (noting jurisdiction for "core 20 habeas petitions" lies in the district of confinement).

21 Moreover, Respondents' arguments about the effect of 8 U.S.C. § 1252(g) are irrelevant to 22 petitioner's claim. Respondents' cite to Gupta v. McGahey, 709 F.3d 1062 (11th Cir. 2013) and 23 to Alvarez v. U.S. Immigr. & Customs Enf't, 818 F.3d 1194 (11th Cir. 2016) for the proposition
24 that § 1252(g) bars review of ICE's decision to take a noncitizen into custody and detain them in

1 the first instance. Petitioner is not challenging Respondents' ability to take him into custody. He
2 is challenging under what authority he is being held. In other words, Petitioner concedes that ICE
3 can detain him, but what is relevant to his claim is whether that detention comes with a right to a
4 bond hearing per § 1226 or not. Petitioner contends that he does have a right to a bond hearing and 5 the denial of that right per Matter of Yajure Hurtado is what gives rise to his claim.

6 In an event, this Court previously heard these arguments from Respondent's and found them
7 unpersuasive. Relying on Camarena v. Dir., Immigr. & Customs Enf't, 988 F.3d 1268, 1273 (11th
8 Cir. 2021) and Madu v. U.S. Attny. Gen., 479 F.3d 1362 (11th Cir. 2006), the Court in Vill v.
9 Normand, 2025 WL 3095969 (S.D. Georgia 2025) held, "jurisdiction is appropriate over a claim 10 that instead challenges the legal bases of a detention decision."

11 Thus, this Court has jurisdiction to hear petitioner's claims for relief and his claim is not barred 12 by statute.

13 II. PLAINTIFF IS DETAINED UNDER § 1226(a) NOT UNDER § 1225(b)(2)

14 The deprivation of petitioner's liberty springs from new and novel interpretations of the 15 Immigration and Nationality Act ("INA") that have come to the fore over the past few months.
16 Despite the language of the statute, Congressional intent in enacting Illegal Immigration Reform
17 and Immigrant Responsibility Act ("IIRIRA"), agency regulations, and longstanding agency
18 practice, on July 8, 2025, DHS issued a memo to all employees of Immigration and Customs 19 Enforcement ("ICE") stating that "[t]his message serves as notice that DHS, in coordination with 20 the Department of Justice (DOJ), has revisited its legal position on detention and release authorities.

21 See https://www.aila.org/ice-memo-interim-guidance-regarding-detention-authority-for-
22 applications-for-admission (last accessed August 4, 2025). DHS has determined that section 1225
23 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA), rather than section 1226, is the applicable
24 immigration detention authority for all applicants for admission.

1 As a result, DHS began to consider all noncitizens who have entered the United States
2 without inspection and are subject to the grounds of inadmissibility, including long-time U.S.
3 residents, subject to mandatory detention under § 1225(b) and ineligible for release on bond. Thus,
4 according to DHS “[t]he only aliens eligible for a custody determination and release on 5 recognizance, bond, or other conditions under [§ 1226(a)] during removal proceedings are aliens
6 admitted to the United States and chargeable with deportability under [8 U.S.C. § 1227], with the 7 exception of those subject to mandatory detention under [§ 1226(c)].” Id.

8 Because DHS’s position lacked a precedential basis at that time, some bond proceedings
9 continued for those, like petitioner, who entered the United States without inspection. However, on 10 September 5, 2025, the BIA decided that their new “plain language” reading of the statute
11 confirmed DHS’s position in its July 8th memo that all of those who entered the United States 12 without inspection were applicants for admission, and, so, their detention was mandatory under § 13 1225(b)(2). See Matter of Yajure Hurtado, 29 I&N Dec. 216 (BIA 2025).

14 However, this Court need not and should not give deference to the BIA’s novel and 15 erroneous interpretation of the INA’s detention statutes. See Loper Bright Enterprises v. Raimondo, 16 603 U.S. 369 (2024) (observing that while “agencies have special competence in resolving 17 statutory ambiguities,” “[c]ourts do”); see also Skidmore v. Swift & Co., 323 U.S. 134, 140 (1944) 18 (explaining that the “weight of such a judgment in a particular case will depend upon the 19 thoroughness evident in its consideration, the validity of its reasoning, its consistency with earlier
20 and later pronouncements, and all those factors which give it power to persuade, if lacking power
21 to control”). As explained by the District Court in Salcedo Aceros v. Kaiser, et al., the BIA’s
22 “current position is inconsistent with its earlier pronouncements” which took the opposite position, 23 and under Loper, “the Court has no obligation to defer to the BIA’s view, particularly when that 24

1 view has not ‘remained consistent over time.’” 2025 WL 2637503, at *9 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 12, 2025)
2 (quoting Loper, 603 U.S. at 386; citing Skidmore, 323 U.S. at 140).

3 Thus, this Court can and should reject the BIA’s interpretation of the INA in Matter of 4 Yajure Hurtado as the BIA’s interpretation is inconsistent with the text of § 1226 and § 1225,
5 Congress’s intent in enacting the IIRIRA in 1996, agency regulations, and long-standing agency
6 practice.

7
8 a. Legislative History, EOIR Regulations, and DHS Practice

9 The detention provisions at § 1226(a) and § 1225(b)(2) were enacted as part of the Illegal
10 Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act (“IIRIRA”) of 1996, Pub. L. No. 104—
11 208, Div. C, §§ 302–03, 110 Stat. 3009-546, 3009–582 to 3009–583, 3009–585. Section 1226(c)
12 as most recently amended earlier this year by the Laken Riley Act (“LRA”), Pub. L. No. 119-1, 13 139 Stat. 3 (2025). The legislative history of IIRIRA also supports a limited construction of § 1225
14 and the conclusion that § 1226(a) applies to petitioner.

15 In passing IIRIRA, Congress was focused on the perceived problem of recent arrivals to the 16 United States who do not have documents to remain. See H.R. Rep. No. 104-469, pt. 1, at 157–58, 17 228–29; H.R. Rep. No. 104-828, at 209. Notably, Congress did not say anything about 18 subjecting all people present in the United States after an unlawful entry to mandatory detention if 19 arrested. This is important, as prior to IIRIRA, people like Ms. Lopez Garcia were not subject
20 to mandatory detention. See 8 U.S.C. § 1252(a)(1) (1994) (authorizing Attorney General to arrest 21 noncitizens for deportability proceedings, which applied to all persons within the United States).
22 Had Congress intended to make such a monumental shift in immigration law (potentially 23 subjecting millions of people to mandatory detention), it would have explained so or spoken more 24 clearly. See Whitman v. Am. Trucking Ass’ns, 531 U.S. 457, 468–69 (2001). But to the extent it

1 addressed the matter, Congress explained precisely the opposite, noting that the new § 1226(a)
2 merely “restates the current provisions in section 242(a)(1) regarding the authority of the Attorney
3 General to arrest, detain, and release on bond a[] [noncitizen] who is not lawfully in the United
4 States.” H.R. Rep. No. 104-469, pt. 1, at 229 (emphasis added); see also H.R. Rep. No. 104-828, 5 at 210 (same).

6 Following enactment of the IIRIRA, the Executive Office of Immigration Review drafted new 7 regulations explaining that, in general, people who entered the country without inspection were 8 not considered detained under § 1225 and that they were instead detained under § 1226(a). See 9 Inspection and Expedited Removal of Aliens; Detention and Removal of Aliens; Conduct of 10 Removal Proceedings; Asylum Procedures, 62 Fed. Reg. 10312, 10323 (Mar. 6, 1997).
11 Specifically, EOIR explained that “[d]espite being applicants for admission, [noncitizens] who are 12 present without having been admitted or paroled (formerly referred to as [noncitizens] who entered 13 without inspection) will be eligible for bond and bond redetermination.” 62 Fed. Reg. at 10323.

14 In the decades that followed, most noncitizens who entered without inspection—unless 15 they were subject to some other detention authority—received bond hearings. This practice was 16 also consistent with the practice prior to the enactment of IIRIRA, in which noncitizens who were 17 not deemed “arriving” were entitled to a custody hearing before an IJ or other hearing officer. See 18 8 U.S.C. § 1252(a) (1994); see also H.R. Rep. No. 104-469, pt. 1, at 229 (1996) (noting that § 19 1226(a) simply “restates” the detention authority previously found at § 1252(a)). Such a 20 longstanding and consistent interpretation “is powerful evidence that interpreting the Act in [this] 21 way is natural and reasonable.” Abramski v. United States, 573 U.S. 169, 203 (2014) (Scalia, J., 22 dissenting); see also Bankamerica Corp. v. United States, 462 U.S. 122, 130 (1983) (relying in 23 part on “over 60 years” of government interpretation and practice to reject government’s new 24

1 proposed interpretation of the law at issue). Thus, the legislative history, agency regulations
2 enacted at the time of IIRIRA's passage, and long-standing agency practice demonstrate that § 3 1226(a) detention was meant to apply and did in fact, apply to people who were present in the 4 interior of the United States after entering the country without inspection both prior to IIRIRA and 5 in the past thirty years after its enactment.

6 b. The Statute

7 The INA prescribes three basic forms of detention for noncitizens in removal proceedings. First,
8 8 U.S.C. §1226 authorizes the detention of noncitizens in standard non-expedited removal
9 proceedings before an IJ. See 8 U.S.C. §1226(a). Individuals in § 1226(a) detention are entitled to 10 a bond hearing at the outset of their detention, see 8 C.F.R. §§ 1003.19(a), 11226.1(d), while 11 noncitizens who have been arrested, charged with, or convicted of certain crimes are subject to 12 mandatory detention, see 8 U.S.C. §1226(c). Second, the INA provides for mandatory detention 13 of noncitizens subject to expedited removal under 8 U.S.C. §1225(b)(1) and for other recent 14 arrivals seeking admission referred to under 8 U.S.C. §1225(b)(2). Finally, the Act also provides 15 for detention of noncitizens who have been previously ordered removed, including individuals in 16 withholding-only proceedings, see 8 U.S.C. § 1231(a)–(b).

17 The plain text of § 1226 demonstrates that it, not § 1225(b), applies to Petitioner's
18 detention. Section 1226(a), "provides the general process for arresting and detaining [noncitizens]
19 who are present in the United States and eligible for removal." Diaz v. Garland, 53 F.4th 1189, 20 1196 (9th Cir. 2022) (citation omitted). As the Supreme Court has remarked, § 1226(a), "sets out
21 the default rule: The Attorney General may issue a warrant for the arrest and detention of a[]
22 [noncitizen] 'pending a decision on whether the [noncitizen] is to be removed from the United 23 States.'" Jennings v. Rodriguez, 583 U.S. 281, 288 (2018) (quoting 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a)). Section 24

1 1226(c) carves out a statutory category of noncitizens for whom detention is mandatory, consisting
2 of individuals who have committed certain “enumerated . . . criminal offenses [or] terrorist
3 activities.” 8 U.S.C. § 1226(c). Among the individuals carved out and subject to mandatory
4 detention are certain categories of “inadmissible” noncitizens. See 8 U.S.C. § 1226(c)(1)(A), (D),
5 (E). This is in stark contrast with mandatory detention provision under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2), 6 which “supplement[s] § [1226’s] detention scheme.” Diaz, 53 F.4th at 1197. Section 1225(b)
7 “applies primarily to [noncitizens] seeking entry into the United States (‘applicants for admission’
8 in the language of the statute).” Jennings, 583 U.S. at 297; see 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b) (entitled 9 “Inspection of applicants for admission”).

10 Thus, the plain text of § 1226(a) applies to noncitizens like petitioner. The fact that § 1226(a) 11 is the default rule for arrest and detention and that section (c) carves out exceptions for 12 inadmissible noncitizens further demonstrates that the discretionary bond procedures apply to 13 noncitizens like petitioner who are present without being admitted or paroled and have not 14 been implicated in any crimes set forth in subsection (c). The Supreme Court has held that when 15 Congress creates “specific exceptions” to a statute’s applicability, it “proves” that absent those 16 exceptions, the statute generally applies. See Shady Grove Orthopedic Assocs., P.A. v. Allstate Ins.
17 Co., 559 U.S. 393, 400 (2010).

18 The recent enactment of Laken Riley Act (“LRA”) further supports this finding. The Act
19 added language to § 1226(c) that directly references people who have entered without inspection
20 or who are present without authorization. See Laken Riley Act, Pub. L. No. 119-1, 139 Stat. 3
21 (2025). Pursuant to these amendments, noncitizens charged as inadmissible under 8 U.S.C. §
22 1182(a)(6)(A) (the inadmissibility ground for entry without inspection) or 8 U.S.C. § 23 1182(a)(7)(A) (the inadmissibility ground for lacking valid documentation to enter the United 24

1 States) and who have been arrested, charged with, or convicted of new certain crimes (not
2 previously covered by INA § 1226(c)) are now subject to § 1226(c)'s mandatory detention
3 provisions. See 8 U.S.C. § 1226(c)(1)(E). By including such individuals under § 1226(c), Congress 4 reaffirmed that § 1226(a) covers noncitizens who are not subject to section (c) but are charged as 5 removable under § 1182(a)(6)(A) or 1182(a)(7). Gieg v. Howarth, 244 F.3d 775, 776 (9th Cir.
6 2001) (“[w]hen Congress acts to amend a statute, [courts] presume it intends its amendment
7 to have real and substantial effect.”).

8 If § 1226(a) did not apply to petitioner—like the BIA contends—vast portions of the § 1226
9 would be rendered meaningless. This is because the BIA contends that noncitizens like petitioner 10 who entered without inspection are really “applicants for admission” and therefore subject to 11 mandatory detention under § 1225(b)(2). Matter of Yajure Hurtado, 29 I&N Dec. 216, 220 (BIA 12 2025). Courts have made it clear that statutes must be interpreted as a whole, “giving effect to 13 each word and making every effort not to interpret a provision in a manner that renders other 14 provisions of the same statute inconsistent, meaningless or superfluous.” Shulman v. Kaplan, 58
15 F.4th 404, 410–11 (9th Cir. 2023) (quoting Rodriguez v. Sony Computer Ent. Am., LLC, 801 F.3d 16 1045, 1051 (9th Cir. 2015)).

17 It is noteworthy that “[w]hen Congress adopts a new law against the backdrop of a 18 longstanding administrative construction,” courts “generally presume[] the new provision should 19 be understood to work in harmony with what has come before.” Monsalvo Velazquez v. Bondi, 145
20 S. Ct. 1232, 1242 (2025) (internal quotation marks omitted). Here, the BIA’s sudden reversal,
21 particularly after Congress just recently amended § 1226 to include the LRA provisions—further 22 undermines the argument that the detention authority for noncitizens like petitioner lies under § 23 1225(b) instead of § 1226(a).
24

1 Furthermore, § 1225(b)(A) concerns a completely different category of noncitizens. In 2 Jennings, the Supreme Court discussed § 1225 as part of a process that “generally begins at the 3 Nation’s borders and ports of entry, where the Government must determine whether a [noncitizen]
4 seeking to enter the country is admissible.” 583 U.S. at 287. As for § 1226, Jennings described it
5 as governing “the process of arresting and detaining” noncitizens who are living “inside the United 6 States” but “may still be removed,” including noncitizens “who were inadmissible at the time of 7 entry.” Id. at 288. The Court then summarized the distinction as follows: “In sum, U.S.
8 immigration law authorizes the Government to detain certain [noncitizens] seeking admission into 9 the country under §§ 1225(1) and (b)(2). It also authorizes the Government to detain certain 10 [noncitizens] already in the country pending the outcome of removal proceedings under §§ 11 1226 and (c).” Id. at 289 (emphasis added); see also Dep’t of Homeland Sec. v. Thuraissigiam, 12 591 U.S. 103, 140 (2020) (a noncitizen “who tries to enter the country illegally is treated as an 13 applicant for admission . . . and a [noncitizen] who is detained shortly after unlawful entry cannot 14 be said to have effected an entry”) (emphasis added) (cleaned up).

15 The BIA’s newfound position misconstrues the phrase “applicant for admission” to suggest that 16 every person, other than those who have been admitted, are subject to mandatory detention.
17 Section 1225(a)(1) defines an “applicant for admission” as a person who is “present in the United 18 States who has not been admitted or who arrives in the United States.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1).
19 According to the BIA, § 1225(b)(1) generally applies to arriving aliens and § 1225(b)(2) serves as 20 a broader catchall provision for all applicants for admission not covered by § 1225(b)(1). See
21 Matter of Yajure Hurtado at 218. In other words, that every noncitizen who entered without parole
22 or inspection is an “applicant for admission” per § 1225(a)(1) and is therefore subject to mandatory
23 detention. However, § 1225(b)(2)(A) states in full that:
24

1 Subject to subparagraphs (B) and (C), in the case of an alien who is an applicant
2 for admission, if the examining immigration officer determines that an alien seeking 3 admission is not clearly and beyond a doubt entitled to be admitted, the alien shall 4 be detained for a proceeding under section 1229a of this title. Id. (emphasis added).

5 Thus, for § 1225(b)(2)(A) to apply, several conditions must be met—in particular, an 6 "examining immigration officer" must determine that the individual is: (1) an "applicant for 7 admission"; (2) "seeking admission"; and (3) "not clearly and beyond a doubt entitled to be 8 admitted." The BIA's position conveniently overlooks these conditions and treats "applicants for 9 admission" the same as those "seeking admission." The phrase "seeking admission" is undefined
10 in the statute but necessarily implies some sort of present-tense action. See Matter of M-D-C-V-, 11 28 I. & N. Dec. 18, 23 (BIA 2020) ("The 'use of the present progressive, like use of the present
12 participle, denotes an ongoing process.'" (quoting Al Otro Lado v. Wolf, 952 F.3d 999, 1011-12 13 (9th Cir. 2020))). Indeed, only those who take affirmative acts, like submitting an "application for 14 admission," or presenting themselves at a port of entry asking to enter the country, are those that 15 can be said to be "seeking admission" within § 1225(b)(2)(A).

16 By limiting (b)(2) to those "seeking admission," Congress confirmed that it did not intend to 17 sweep into this section individuals like petitioner who have already entered and are now residing 18 in the United States. See Torres v. Barr, 976 F.3d 918, 927 (9th Cir. 2020) (en banc) (holding 19 that an individual submits an "application for admission" only at "the moment in time when the 20 immigrant actually applies for admission into the United States.")¹ Accordingly, § 1225(b)(2)'s 21 reference to "applicants for admission" must be read in their context and a view to their place in 22 the overall statutory scheme." San Carlos Apache Tribe v. Becerra, 53 F.4th 11226, 1240 (9th Cir.

23 ¹ In Torres, the en banc Court of Appeals rejected the idea that § 1225(a)(1) means that 24 anyone who is presently in the United States without admission or parole is someone "deemed to have made an actual application for admission." Id. (emphasis omitted).

1 2022) (citation omitted); see also King v. Burwell, 576 U.S. 473, 492 (2015) (looking to an
2 act’s “broader structure . . . to determine [the statute’s] meaning”).

3 The Board’s recent decision in Matter of Q. Li, 29 I. & N. Dec. 66 (BIA 2025) reinforces this 4 position. The Board held that a noncitizen who was apprehended “approximately 5.4 miles away
5 from a designated port of entry and 100 yards north of the border” was detained under § 1225(b)
6 and not § 1226(a). Id. at 67. In other words, the noncitizen was apprehended upon arrival. The Board
7 then explained that such persons are properly treated as “arriv[ing] in the United States,” given that 8 they are “detained shortly after unlawful entry,” and “[are] apprehended’ just inside’ the 9 southern border, and not at a point of entry, on the same day [they] crossed into the United 10 States.” Id. at 68 (quoting Matter of M-D-C-V-, 28 I. & N. Dec. 18, 23 (BIA 2020)). Notably, the 11 Board’s decision supports the argument that § 1226(a) “applies to [noncitizens] already present in 12 the United States,” while § 1225(b) “applies primarily to [noncitizens] seeking entry into the 13 United States and authorizes DHS to detain a[] [noncitizen] without a warrant at the border.” Id.
14 at 70 (internal quotation marks omitted).

15 The broader statutory structure of immigration detention authority also demonstrates the 16 inapplicability of § 1225(b) to petitioner’s case. See King, 576 U.S. at 492 (explaining that an act’s 17 “broader structure” can be a useful tool “to determine [a statute’s] meaning.”); see also Biden v.
18 Texas, 597 U.S. 785, 799–800 (2022) (looking to statutory structure to inform interpretation of 19 INA provision). This is particularly true where “a provision . . . may seem ambiguous in isolation.”
20 United Sav. Ass’n of Tex. v. Timbers of Inwood Forest Associates, Ltd., 484 U.S. 365, 371 (1988).
21 In such situations, the statute’s meaning “is often clarified by the remainder of the statutory 22 scheme . . . because only one of the permissible meanings produces a substantive effect that is 23 compatible with the rest of the law.” Id.
24

1 The broader text of § 1225 reinforces this understanding of the two sections’ structure and
2 application. § 1225 concerns “expedited removal of inadmissible arriving [noncitizens].” 8 U.S.C.
3 § 1225 (emphasis added). Paragraph (b)(1) encompasses only the “inspection” of certain “arriving”
4 noncitizens and other recent entrants the Attorney General designates, and only those who are 5 “inadmissible” for having misrepresented information to an inspecting officer or for lacking
6 documents to enter the United States. Paragraph (b)(2) is similarly limited to people applying for 7 admission when they arrive in the United States. The title explains that this paragraph addresses 8 the “[i]nspection of other [noncitizens],” i.e., those noncitizens who are “seeking admission,” but 9 whom (b)(1) does not address. Id. § 1225(b)(2), (b)(2)(A).

10 By limiting (b)(2) to those “seeking admission,” Congress confirmed that it did not intend to 11 sweep into this section individuals like petitioner who have already entered and are now residing 12 in the United States. Otherwise, the language “seeking admission” in § 1225(b)(2) would serve no 13 purpose, as the statute specifies that it is addressing a person who is both an “applicant for 14 admission” and who is determined to be “seeking admission.” Id.

15 Furthermore, subparagraph (b)(2)(C) addresses the “[t]reatment of [noncitizens] arriving 16 from contiguous territory,” i.e., “the case of [a noncitizen] . . . who is arriving on land.” 8 U.S.C.
17 § 1225(b)(2)(C). This language further underscores Congress’s temporal requirements in § 1225
18 and focus on those who are arriving into the United States. Similarly, the title of § 1225 refers to 19 the “inspection” of “inadmissible arriving” noncitizens. See, e.g., Dubin v. United States, 599 U.S.
20 110, 120–21 (2023) (relying on section title to help construe statute).

22 Finally, the entire statute is premised on the idea that an inspection occurs near the border and 23 shortly after arrival, as the statute repeatedly refers to “examining immigration officer[s],” 8 U.S.C.
24 § 1225(b)(2)(A), (b)(4), and sets out procedures for “inspection[s]” of people “arriving in the 1 United States,” Id. § 1225(a)(3), (b)(1), (b)(2), (d). Thus, the text of the § 1226 and § 1225 when 2 construed in isolation and together within the broader statutory scheme demonstrate 3 definitively that petitioner can only be detained under § 1226(a).

4 In sum, the Immigration Court’s refusal to hear petitioner’s bond motion pursuant to the 5 BIA’s novel and erroneous interpretation of the INA’s detention statutes cannot be squared with 6 the legislative history of IIRIRA, the LRA amendments, EOIR regulations enacted soon after 7 IIRIRA’s passage, DHS and the BIA’s own positions on the INA’s detention authorities for the 8 past thirty years, and the language of § 1226 and § 1225 of the INA.

9 The vast majority of courts who have confronted this issue, including this one, have found the BIA’s
10 interpretation to contradict the plain text of § 1225. See, e.g., Ayala Amaya v. Bondi et. al., No. 25-16428

10 Because of the BIA’s mistaken interpretation, petitioner has been deprived of his statutory 11 rights resulting in a deprivation of her physical liberty. This Court should either order his release or 12 that the Immigration Court must hold a bond hearing.

13
14 CONCLUSION

15 Petitioner’s detention under § 1225(b)(2)(A) violates his rights under the Immigration and 16 Nationality Act and his due process rights. The Court should remedy this violation by either 17 ordering his immediate release or an order holding that Petitioner is detained under § 1226(a) and 18 require that the Immigration Court hold a bond hearing.
