I. INTRODUCTION

1. Petitioner respectfully moves for a Temporary Restraining Order (“TRO”) pending adjudication of his Petition for a Writ of Habeas Corpus. Petitioner requests the Court to order Respondents to cease any ongoing action and refrain from taking any additional actions toward effectuating Petitioner’s removal from the United States, until the Court has adjudicated his petition and complaint. Absent immediate injunctive relief, Respondents will likely remove or transfer Petitioner, causing irreparable harm. The removal or transfer of Petitioner would permanently deprive Petitioner of access to this Court and violate Due Process protections.

II. Statement of Facts

- 2. Petitioner is currently detained at Imperial Regional Detention Center in Calexico, CA.
- 3. Petitioner is a citizen and national of India. He entered the United States in or about January 30, 2018 at or near Calexico, California, fleeing persecution and fearing for his life due to his political opinions in India. Petitioner sought refuge in the United States for the purpose of requesting asylum and related humanitarian protection.
- 4. Petitioner has no criminal history, does not pose a danger to the community, and has demonstrated no flight risk. His detention is based solely on his immigration status and not on any individualized finding of dangerousness or risk.
- 5. Respondents now seek to remove Petitioner from the United States without affording him the procedural protections guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment, including a full and fair hearing, meaningful consideration of his evidence, and access to judicial review sufficient to test the legality of his detention and removal.

6. Petitioner remains detained while removal is imminent, despite Respondents’ failure to provide constitutionally adequate procedures to ensure that his fear-based claims were lawfully and fairly adjudicated.

7. These circumstances necessitate emergency injunctive relief.

8. On February 1, 2026, Petitioner filed a Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus challenging the legality of his detention.

9. Petitioner continues to face an imminent threat of removal.

III. ARGUMENT

10. Where a party requests a TRO that enjoins governmental action, the party must demonstrate that “he is likely to succeed on the merits, that he is likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of the preliminary relief, that the balance of equities tip in his favor, and that an injunction is in the public interest.” Winter v. Natural Resources Def. Council, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 20 (2008). Here, because Petitioner meets both the irreparable harm and likelihood of success prongs, and because the requested relief is not overly burdensome on Respondents, he merits such relief.

PETITIONER IS LIKELY TO SUCCEED ON THE MERITS

11. To satisfy that he is likely to succeed on the merits, Petitioner need demonstrate only a reasonable probability or that “serious questions” going to the merits are raised. Alliance for the Wild Rockies v. Cottrell, 632 F.3d 1127, 1134–35 (9th Cir. 2011). Petitioner meets this standard.

12. Petitioner’s habeas petition challenges the legality of his continued detention under 8 U.S.C 1226(a) and the Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment. He has only a no criminal history with no current charges or custodial sentencing, is seeking asylum, and

1 has demonstrated compliance with all immigration proceedings. These facts support the
2 finding that Petitioner's continued detention without due process is unlawful.

3 13. Civil immigration detention must be reasonably related to its purpose and accompanied by
4 sufficient procedural protections. Zadvydas v. Davis, 533 U.S. 678, 690 (2001).
5 Constitutional due process limits remain fully applicable in such cases.
6

7 14. Here, Petitioner has raised serious constitutional questions regarding prolonged detention
8 without having any criminal record and no flight risk. These claims are sufficient to show
9 that there is a likelihood of success in Petitioner's claim, or serious questions going to the 10 merits of Petitioner's claim.

12 PETITIONER WILL SUFFER IRREPARABLE HARM IF HE IS REMOVED

13 15. Under the four-factor test, "a showing of irreparable harm is the single most important
14 prerequisite for the issuance of preliminary injunction. Faiveley Transport Malmö AB v.
15 Wabtec Corp., 559 F.3d 110, 118 (2d Cir. 2009). Under this prong, Petitioner must show
16 that "but for the grant of equitable relief, there is a substantial chance that upon final
17 resolution of the action the parties cannot be returned to the position they previously
18 occupied." Brenntag Int'l Chems., Inc. v. Bank of India, 175 F.3d 245, 249 (2d Cir. 1999).
19 The harm must be "neither remote nor speculative, but actual and imminent." Freedom
20 Holdings, Inc. v. Spitzer, 408 F.3d 112, 114 (2d Cir. 2005).
21

22 A. Removal Would Permanently Deprive Petitioner of Meaningful Habeas Review

23 Petitioner's removal from the United States would effectively moot this Court's
24 jurisdiction over the pending habeas petition. Courts have recognized that removal or transfer
25 during the pendency of a habeas action constitutes irreparable harm where it would prevent
26 meaningful judicial review. See Leiva-Perez v. Holder, 640 F.3d 962, 969–70 (9th Cir. 2011).
27
28

1 If Petitioner is removed from the United States by Respondents, Petitioner's ability to obtain
2 habeas relief would be irreparably impaired, if not entirely extinguished. Once removed,
3 Petitioner's ability to obtain habeas relief will be terminated.

4 B. Removal Would Terminate Petitioner's Pending Asylum Application and
5 Statutory Right to Seek Protection
6

7 Petitioner has an active and pending asylum application, and removal would result in the 8 immediate and irrevocable loss of his ability to pursue his claim for refuge and asylum. An
9 applicant for asylum must be physically present in the United States to seek relief. See 8
10 U.S.C. § 1158(a)(1).
11

12 The loss of the opportunity to pursue statutory relief, particularly humanitarian protection
13 such as asylum, constitutes irreparable harm. If removed, Petitioner would be permanently
14 deprived of the opportunity to have his asylum claim adjudicated on the merits, a loss that 15 cannot be remedied by later judicial proceedings.

16 C. Ongoing Detention Despite No Criminal History Constitutes Irreparable Liberty
17 Harm
18

19 Petitioner is suffering irreparable harm through continued detention despite having no
20 criminal record and no current criminal charges or custodial sentence. He does not pose a
21 danger to the community nor a risk of flight. The loss of physical liberty, even for brief
22 periods, constitutes irreparable harm. Rodriguez v. Robbins, 715 F.3d 1127, 1144 (9th Cir.
23 2013). The deprivation of constitutional rights itself constitutes irreparable injury for purposes
24 of preliminary injunction analysis. Melendres v. Arpaio, 695 F.3d 990, 1002 (9th Cir. 2012).
25

26 Petitioner's detention is civil, not punitive, yet it continues to deprive him of liberty
27 without adequate procedural safeguards. Where a noncitizen with no criminal history is 28

1 subjected to prolonged civil detention while pursuing relief such as asylum, the resulting
2 deprivation of liberty constitutes irreparable harm.

3 D. Constitutional Violation Independently Establish Irreparable Harm

4
5 Petitioner's habeas petition raises serious constitutional claims, including violations of his
6 Fifth Amendment right to Due Process. Alleged violation of constitutional rights, by itself,
7 constitutes irreparable harm. Melendres v. Arpaio, 695 F.3d 990, 1002 (9th Cir. 2012).

8 THE BALANCE OF EQUITIES FAVOR PETITIONER

9
10 16. The balance of equities weights in favor of the Petitioner. The Petitioner seeks narrowly
11 tailored relief to ensure meaningful judicial review. The Petitioner seeks protection
12 against removal or transfer that would undermine this Court's jurisdiction.

13 17. Respondent's face little to no burden in temporarily refraining from removing or 14 transferring the Petitioner. Maintaining the Petitioner's current custodial status while the 15 decision of his Petition for a Writ of Habeas Corpus is pending imposes no undue
16 hardship on the government and does not interfere with their duties.

17
18 18. Where the Petitioner faces loss of liberty and permanent deprivation of statutory and 19 constitutional rights, while the government faces only administrative inconvenience, the 20 equities favor injunctive relief. Hernandez v. Sessions, 872 F.3d 976, 996 (9th Cir. 2017).

21 THE PUBLIC INTEREST FAVORS PRESERVING JUDICIAL REVIEW

22 19. The public interest favors ensuring that detention complies with constitutional and 23 statutory limitations and requirements. Courts have recognized that it is always in the 24 public interest to prevent the violation of a party's constitutional rights. Melendres v.
25 Arpaio, 695 F.3d 990, 1002 (9th Cir. 2012). The public has a compelling interest in
26 ensuring that asylum seekers are afforded vital access to the legal process Congress
27

1 established. The public also has an interest in courts retraining the ability to review
2 executive actions. Preserving judicial review and oversight promotes the public's
3 confidence in the rule of law, as well as the integrity of the governmental agencies
4 involved in the immigration system. Granting this TRO would advance the public interest
5 by ensuring that Petitioner's claims are adjudicated fairly and lawfully.
6

8 IV. CONCLUSION

9
10 20. Petitioner satisfies all four factors required for emergency injunctive relief. First, he faces
11 irreparable harm absent relief. Removal or transfer would moot his habeas claims,
12 terminate his pending asylum application, and result in ongoing deprivation of liberty
13 without meaningful process, harms that cannot be undone after the fact.

14 21. Petitioner has demonstrated a likelihood of success on the merits, or at minimum, serious
15 questions going to the merits. His detention raises substantial constitutional concerns
16 under the Fifth Amendment, particularly given his lack of criminal history, pending
17 asylum claim, and the absence of individualized findings of dangerousness or flight risk.

18 22. Third, the balance of equities weighs heavily in Petitioner's favor, he seeks only narrow 19 relief to preserve jurisdiction and maintain existing custodial conditions. By contrast,
20 Respondents face minimal burden in temporarily refraining from removal or transfer.

22 23. Finally, the public interest favors ensuring that asylum seekers receive meaningful access 23 to the judicial process, and that executive detention complies with constitutional and 24 statutory requirements and limitations.

25 24. For those reasons, Petitioner respectfully requests that the Court:
