PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

Respondents, by their attorney, Joseph Nocella, Jr., United States Attorney for the Eastern District of New York, Geoffrey M. Stannard, Assistant United States Attorney, of counsel, respectfully submit this return to the Petition for a Writ of Habeas Corpus.

Petitioner, a native and citizen of Mexico, alleges that for over fifteen years he has successfully evaded detection after unlawfully crossing into the United States in 2009. In January 2026, Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) officers encountered Petitioner for the first time. ICE assessed that Petitioner had never been admitted (which he does not dispute), placed him in removal proceedings under 8 U.S.C. § 1229a, and detained him during their pendency under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A). He challenges his detention during the pendency of those removal proceedings. He argues, in effect, that his success in evading ICE's detection for over 15 years somehow accrues to his benefit. He believes this entitles him to discretionary detention and bond hearings under 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a), instead of subjection to mandatory detention required under § 1225(b)(2)(A) for non-admitted aliens in removal proceedings.

His argument flies in the face of the 1996 reforms made by Congress to the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA), 8 U.S.C. § 1101 et seq., which eliminated the dichotomy that had existed between aliens who presented at ports of entry without papers and were subject to mandatory detention, and those who had sneaked in unlawfully and were, upon being encountered, afforded bond hearings. After the reforms, the INA mandated that all aliens not admitted who entered the United States unlawfully—even outside ports of entry—were deemed “applicants for admission” under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1). Such aliens, if not placed in mandatory detention for expedited removal under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(A)(1) (on which Congress placed a two-year limit from initial encounter), were subject to mandatory detention under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A) while removal proceedings under 8 U.S.C. § 1229a were underway. In requiring detention until a removal determination, Congress placed no time limit or geographic limit on § 1225(b)(2)(A).

Indeed, had Petitioner been encountered close to the border and placed in removal proceedings under 8 U.S.C. § 1229a, even Petitioner would presumably not dispute that § 1225(b)(2)(A) would mandate his detention. He thus pins his argument on his ongoing undetected presence for over 15 years after he purportedly first unlawfully entered, but his ability to remain under the radar is not the panacea Petitioner plainly wishes it were. In fact, in Samaashvili v. Flanagan, No. 25-cv-6178, 2026 WL 377574, at *2-3 (E.D.N.Y. Feb. 11, 2026), on appeal, Your Honor noted that when the alien “first crossed the [U.S.] border, he was certainly an applicant for admission” subject to § 1225(b)(2)(A) mandatory detention, and his illicit presence in the United States thereafter while in removal proceedings did not magically transmogrify his status: “[s]ince his unlawful entry, petitioner has been, and continues to be, subject to the mandatory detention requirement.” Id. Other judges within this Circuit have similarly held, as has the only circuit to rule so far on the merits of this issue, the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals.¹

He further alleges that, even assuming § 1225(b)(2)(A) applies to him, his arrest and detention were nevertheless unlawful because Respondents failed to satisfy the prerequisites for making a “warrantless arrest” under 8 U.S.C. § 1357(a), namely, determining that he was likely to flee before a warrant could be obtained. That argument fails at the threshold, because he was arrested pursuant to an administrative civil warrant requiring only probable cause that he lacked immigration status or removal. As discussed below, the Supreme Court has long held administrative civil warrants to be lawful in the immigration removal context.

Petitioner demands immediate release without resort to an immigration judge (IJ), and asserts four claims, each arising from his arrest mandatory detention under § 1225(b)(2)(A), as an applicant for admission, instead of being afforded the IJ bond hearing that applies to those already admitted under 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a). He asserts that this violates the INA and both procedural and substantive due process, and is arbitrary and capricious under § 706(2)(A) of the Administrative Procedure Act (APA), 5 U.S.C. §§ 701-06.

His claims warrant dismissal. His INA construction is defective, as § 1225(b)(2)(A) indeed mandates his detention. His claim that he was arrested without a warrant is factually incorrect. His procedural due process claim lacks merit, as an alien not admitted is afforded only the process Congress provides by statute, which is mandatory detention under § 1225(b)(2)(A). His claim that Respondents violated substantive due process fares no better, because his grievance arises from ICE enforcing the same statute. Finally, the APA claim is not viable because a habeas action provides his only remedy.

In sum, the Petition should be denied.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

I. STATUTORY AND REGULATORY FRAMEWORK

For more than a century, Congress has authorized immigration officials to arrest and detain certain aliens subject to removal until their removal proceedings conclude with admission or removal. See Abel v. United States, 362 U.S. 217, 233-34 (1960). Over time, the aliens those laws cover, the scope of the authority to detain, and the avenues for release have evolved. But it has remained true that “[d]etention during removal proceedings is a constitutionally valid aspect of the deportation process” Velasco Lopez v. Decker, 978 F.3d 842, 848 (2d Cir. 2020) (citing Demore v. Kim, 538 U.S. 510, 523 (2003)).

A. Before 1996, Aliens Who Surreptitiously Entered The Country Had More Rights And Protections Than Aliens Who Presented At A Port Of Entry

Before 1996, aliens at a port of entry who could not demonstrate entitlement to admission were placed in “exclusion proceedings” and were subject to mandatory detention without the possibility of bond. Hing Sum v. Holder, 602 F.3d 1092, 1099-1100 (9th Cir. 2010); Saamishvili, 2026 WL 377574, at *1-2; Buenrostro, 166 F.4th at 498, 508; Matter of Yajure Hurtado, 29 I. & N. Dec. 216, 223 (BIA 2025)²; see 8 U.S.C. §§ 1225(a) (1995)-(b) (1995), 1226(a) (1995). In contrast, aliens who evaded authorities and entered the United States by sneaking across the border were placed in “deportation” proceedings and taken into custody but could request release on bond. See 8 U.S.C. §§ 1231(a)(1)(B), 1252(a)(1) (1995); Hing Sum, 602 F.3d at 1100; Hurtado, 29 I. & N. Dec. at 223. Thus, whether an alien had physically entered the United States or not—defined at that time as “any coming of an alien into the United States,” 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(13) (1994)—“dictated what type of [immigration] proceeding applied” and whether the alien would be detained pending those proceedings. Hing Sum, 602 F.3d at 1099; Buenrostro, 166 F.4th at 498, 508.

The pre-1996 INA framework, however, had “unintended and undesirable consequence[s].” Martinez v. Att’y General of U.S., 693 F.3d 408, 413 n.5 (3d Cir. 2012); see Hing Sum, 602 F.3d at 1100 (similar). “[A]liens who entered without inspection could take advantage

B. Congress Eliminates Preferential Treatment For Aliens Who Unlawfully Entered And Mandates Detention Of All “Applicants For Admission”

In 1996, Congress enacted the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996 (“IIRIRA”), Pub. L. No. 104-208 § 302, div. C, 110 Stat. 3009-546 (1996), that dispensed with the earlier dichotomy. As relevant here, Congress declared “an alien present in the United States who has not been admitted . . . shall be deemed . . . an applicant for admission.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1) (emphasis added). Congress also defined “admission” by adding a new modifier to entry: “the lawful entry of the alien into the United States after inspection and authorization by an immigration officer.” 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(13)(A) (emphasis added).

Thus, whereas the INA had previously separated aliens who had “enter[ed]” unlawfully from aliens who were being inspected at a port of entry but found inadmissible, under IIRIRA, Congress “group[ed] together” as “applicants for admission,” who receive “the same treatment,” including aliens who are already present in the United States but did not enter lawfully.” Chen, 2025 WL 3484855, at *3. This new categorization “ensur[ed] that all immigrants who have not been lawfully admitted, regardless of their physical presence in the country, are placed on equal footing in removal proceedings under the INA.” Torres v. Barr, 976 F.3d 918, 928 (9th Cir. 2020) (en banc); accord Saamishvili, 2026 WL 377574, at *2 (“Post-IRRIRA, ‘both aliens arriving at the border and aliens present in the United States without inspection are deemed ‘applicants for admission’ . . . who must be ‘inspected by immigration officers’ to determine their admissibility’”) (citing Cruz-Miguel v. Holder, 650 F.3d 189, 197 (2d Cir. 2011)); Buenrostro, 166 F.4th at 499, 508 (“It seems strange to suggest that Congress would have preserved bond hearings exclusively for unlawful entrants”).

The INA now defines “applicants for admission” not only as “an alien present in the United States who has not been admitted,” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1), but also as a subset of persons “seeking admission.” See 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(3) (“All aliens . . . who are applicants for admission or otherwise seeking admission . . . shall be inspected by immigration officers”) (emphasis added); Chen, 2026 WL 100761. These applicants for admission “shall be inspected by immigration officers.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(3). If applicants for admission are not deemed admissible upon such inspection, they then fall into one of two categories, “those covered by § 1225(b)(1) and those covered by § 1225(b)(2),” with detention mandated for both. Jennings v. Rodriguez, 583 U.S. 281, 287 (2018).

Section 1225(b)(1) applies only to applicants for admission who are “arriving in the United States” or who have “not been admitted or paroled into the United States,” and also, who have “not affirmatively shown, to the satisfaction of an immigration officer, that the alien has been physically present in the United States continuously for the 2-year period immediately prior to the date of the determination of inadmissibility.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(A)(i)-(iii). As to these aliens, IIRIRA created expedited removal proceedings and required detention during such proceedings. DHS v. Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. 103, 109-13 (2020); 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(A)(i), (b)(1)(B)(iii)(IV); 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(b)(2)(iii), (b)(4)(ii).³

³ The immigration officer must “order the alien removed from the United States without further hearing or review unless the alien indicates either an intention to apply for asylum . . . or a fear of persecution.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(A)(i). An asylum officer offers a credible fear interview, and if unfavorable, further process is afforded via review by an IJ. 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B)(i),(iii)(III); 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(b)(4). In that event, the alien “shall be detained pending a final determination of credible fear of persecution and, if found not to have such fear, until removed.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B)(iii)(IV); see 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(b)(4). An alien processed for expedited removal who does not indicate an intent to apply for asylum or a fear of persecution or who is determined not to have a credible fear is likewise detained until removed. 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(A)(i), (B)(iii)(IV); see 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(b)(2)(iii). However, if an alien arrives at the border and is subject to expedited removal, but expresses an

Section 1225(b)(2) is a “catchall” covering “all applicants for admission not covered by § 1225(b)(1).” Jennings, 583 U.S. at 287. For them, § 1225(b)(2)(A) requires detention, as well:

Subject to Subparagraphs B and C in the case of an alien who is an applicant for admission, if the examining immigration officer determines that an alien seeking admission is not clearly and beyond a doubt entitled to be admitted, the alien shall be detained for a proceeding under [8 U.S.C. §] 1229a.

8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A)⁴; 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(b)(1)(ii); Jennings, 583 U.S. at 302 (§ 1225(b)(2) “mandate[s] detention of aliens throughout the completion of applicable proceedings”); Chen, 2025 WL3484855, at *3 (§ 1225(b)(2)(A) detention is “mandatory”). Aliens may seek relief from removal, including by seeking asylum from the IJ, during removal proceedings.

In sum, § 1225(b)(1) and (2) “unequivocally mandate that aliens falling within their scope ‘shall’ be detained,” and such “detention must continue until immigration officers have finished ‘consider[ing]’ the application for asylum . . . or until removal proceedings have concluded.” Jennings, 583 U.S. at 299-300. Neither provide for a bond hearing.

The only alternative to detention under either 1225(b)(1) or (2) provision is discretionary parole under 8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5)(A). Jennings, 583 U.S. at 288. The Secretary “may . . . in [his] discretion parole into the United States temporarily under such conditions as he may prescribe.” 8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5)(A). However, Congress provided that when an alien is granted such parole, it “shall not be regarded as an admission of the alien.” 8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5)(A) (“shall continue to be dealt with in the same manner as that of any other applicant for admission to the United States”); intention to apply for asylum and subsequently passes a credible fear interview, then that asylum application may be reviewed by an IJ in removal proceedings instituted under 8 U.S.C. § 1229a. See 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B)(ii); 8 C.F.R. § 1208.30(g)(2)(iv)(B); 8 C.F.R. § 208.30(f). The alien remains subject to mandatory detention pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B)(ii): “the alien shall be detained for further consideration of the application for asylum.” See also Jennings, 583 U.S. at 297 (the statute does not authorize bond hearings or release on bond); Matter of M-S-, 27 I&N Dec. 509, 515-19 (2019)) (IJs “lack authority to hear a bond request” arising out of applicants for admission subject to § 1225(b)(1)”).

accord 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(13)(B) (“An alien who is paroled under section 1182(d)(5) of this title ... shall not be considered to have been admitted.”).

A neighboring statute, 8 U.S.C. § 1226(c), also provides for mandatory detention during removal proceedings for certain aliens and lacks this humanitarian parole option. Specifically, 8 U.S.C. § 1226(c), as amended by the Laken Riley Act (“LRA”), Pub. L. 119-1, 139 Stat. 3 (2025), covers aliens with certain criminal history. Jennings, at 287-89. Here, Congress permitted release only if it “is necessary” to protect certain witnesses to criminal activity and if the alien “will not pose a danger” to public safety and is not a flight risk. 8 U.S.C. § 1226(c)(4); Jennings, 583 U.S. at 289 (quoting then-8 U.S.C. § 1226(c)(2), now codified at (c)(4)). To § 1226(c), the LRA added § 1226(c)(1)(E)(i) and (ii), and (c)(2) and (3). Under the LRA, an alien who is inadmissible under 8 U.S.C. §§ 1182(a)(6)(C) or 1182(a)(7), and is charged with, arrested for, or convicted of, specified types of crimes, shall be detained by the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) “if not otherwise detained by Federal, State, or local officials.” Such an alien is ineligible for § 1182(d)(5) parole and may only be released for the limited set of reasons in § 1226(c)(4). Buenrostro, 166 F. 4th 505 & n.12.

II. PETITIONER’S RELEVANT ADMINISTRATIVE HISTORY

A. Petitioner Sneaks Across the Border and Evades Detection for Two Decades

Petitioner is a Mexican national. See Declaration of Timothy J. Nevin dated March 24, 2026 (“Nevin Decl.”) ¶ 3; Petition ¶ 1. Petitioner himself asserts that he entered the United States over fifteen years ago, in May 2009. Petition ¶ 2. However, Respondents do not know how or when Petitioner entered the United States. Neither CBP nor ICE was previously aware of Petitioner, who had remained undetected by both agencies at the border and thereafter, until ICE encountered him on January 28, 2026. See Nevin Decl. ¶¶ 4-5.

On January 28, 2026, ICE officers encountered Petitioner in Mount Vernon, New York, while conducting a vehicle stop targeting another alien. Nevin Decl. ¶ 4. The officers asked Petitioner for his name and for identification. Id. Petitioner was unable to produce any form of identification but voluntarily admitted to illegally entering the United States. Id. Petitioner was arrested pursuant to a Form I-200, Warrant of Arrest of Alien (“I-200”) and transported to the ICE Newburg Sub Office, New York, for processing. Nevin Decl. ¶¶ 4-5; Ex. A (I-200).

During processing that same day, Petitioner admitted that he entered the United States illegally by crossing the Mexico-California border in 2009. Nevin Decl. ¶ 5. ICE served Petitioner with a Form I-862, Notice to Appear (“NTA”) charging Petitioner with removability pursuant to Immigration and Nationality Act (“INA”) § 212(a)(6)(A)(i) (as being an alien present in the United States without being admitted or paroled, or who arrived in the United States at any time or place other than as designated by the Attorney General of the United States of America) and INA § 212(a)(7)(A)(i)(I) (as an alien who at the time of application or admission is not in possession of a valid unexpired immigrant visa, reentry permit, border crossing card, or other valid entry document; valid unexpired passport, or other suitable travel document, or document of identity and nationality). Nevin Decl. ¶ 5. The NTA directed him to appear before an immigration judge on February 10, 2026. Nevin Decl. ¶ 6.

B. Petitioner Is Placed in Removal Proceedings and Detained under § 1225(b)(2)(A)

That same day, DHS filed the NTA with the Executive Office for Immigration Review (EOIR), the federal agency that houses immigration judges and the Board of Immigration Appeals, thereby commencing removal proceedings against Petitioner, and Petitioner was transported to Orange County Jail. Nevin Decl. ¶¶ 6-7. On February 3, 2026, Petitioner was transported to the Metropolitan Detention Complex, Brooklyn where he is currently detained. Nevin Decl. ¶ 8. On February 10, 2026, a master calendar hearing was held and reset for February 24, 2026. Nevin Decl. ¶ 9. On February 24, 2026, a master calendar hearing was held and reset for March 17, 2026, and EOIR set a deadline for written pleadings to be submitted by March 10, 2026. Nevin Decl. ¶ 10. On March 10, 2026, Petitioner submitted written pleadings in which, inter alia, he contested removability. Nevin Decl. ¶ 11. On March 17, 2026, a master calendar hearing was held, and the immigration judge set deadlines for motion practice and reset the matter for April 7, 2026, for a decision on the motion. Nevin Decl. ¶ 12. On March 20, 2026, Petitioner filed a motion to terminate removal proceedings, to which DHS's response is due March 30, 2026. Nevin Decl. ¶ 13. Petitioner has no pending applications before EOIR or the United States Citizenship and Immigration Services, and at no time has Petitioner been admitted to the United States. Nevin Decl. ¶ 14.

ARGUMENT

I. PETITIONER'S DETENTION IS LAWFUL UNDER THE INA

A. Petitioner Is Lawfully Detained Under Section 1225(b)(2)

1. The Text of Section 1225(b)(2) Shows That Statute Covers Petitioner

Petitioner unlawfully entered the country, was apprehended by ICE in January, was placed in removal proceedings, and has never been admitted to the United States. By statute, such undisputed facts make Petitioner an "applicant for admission," as that term covers aliens "present in the United States" who "ha[ve] not been admitted." See 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1); Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. at 109. Under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A), "in the case of an alien who is an applicant for admission," such as Petitioner, "if the examining immigration officer determines that an alien seeking admission is not clearly and beyond a doubt entitled to be admitted, the alien shall be detained" for a removal proceeding under 8 U.S.C. § 1229a. No immigration officer has determined "clearly and beyond a doubt" that Petitioner is "entitled to be admitted." See 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A).

As this Court and others have held, Petitioner's detention under § 1225(b)(2)(A) accords with the "natural reading" of the statute, "consistent with IIRIRA's purpose." See Saamishvili, 2026 WL 377574, at *2. Congress made clear that "applicant for admission" is a subset of those who are "seeking admission" in a provision neighboring § 1225(b). Section 1225(a)(3) provides that "[a]ll aliens . . . who are applicants for admission or otherwise seeking admission or readmission . . . shall be inspected." 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(3) (emphasis added). Being an applicant for admission is thus a particular way of seeking admission, such as the former is a subset of the latter. See also Yinxiao Chen, 2026 WL 100761, at *9.

Neither the length of Petitioner's unlawful presence nor his distance from the border alters that as an "applicant for admission" he is "seeking admission." "Congress knows how to limit the scope" of the INA "geographically and temporally when it wants to," for example, in 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1). Mejia Olalde v. Noem, 2025 WL 3131942, at *4 (E.D. Mo. Nov. 10, 2025). So, "[i]f Congress meant to say" in § 1225(b)(2)(A) "that an alien no longer is 'seeking admission' after some amount of time in the United States, Congress knew how to do so." Mejia Olalde, 2025 WL 3131942, at *4. It did not for § 1225(a)(1). To the contrary, § 1225(a)(1)'s inclusion of aliens "arriving" and those "present in the United States" confirms that all aliens who are not admitted are "applicants for admission," regardless of the length of their presence. 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1). As a result, "many people who are not actually requesting to be admitted to the United States in the ordinary sense are nevertheless deemed to be 'seeking admission' under the immigration laws." Matter of Lemus-Losa, 25 I. & N. Dec. 734, 743 (BIA 2012) (emphasis in original).⁵

⁵ None of this is to say that "seeking admission" has no meaning beyond "applicant for admission." For example, lawful permanent residents returning to the United States are not "applicants for admission" but they still may be "seeking an admission" in some circumstances. See 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(13)(C). Reading § 1225(b)(2)(A) to mandate detention for "applicant[s] for admission," such as Petitioner, accords with the text Congress enacted in IIRIRA. As relevant here, § 1225(b)(2)(A) places Petitioner under its ambit as an "applicant for admission," and requires the alien "shall be detained" pending the outcome of removal proceedings. See Little Sisters of the Poor Saints Peter & Paul Home v. Pennsylvania, 591 U.S. 657, 676 (2020) ("Our analysis begins and ends with the text").

2. Supreme Court, Circuit Court, And District Court Authority Confirm That Petitioner Is Covered By Section 1225(b)(2)

Petitioner's detention under § 1225(b)(2)(A) comports with Supreme Court precedent. As Jennings explains, applicants for admission are covered either by § 1225(b)(1) or (b)(2). See 583 U.S. at 287. Section 1225(b)(1) covers applicants for admission who assert a credible fear of persecution, and it mandates detention. 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B)(ii), (B)(iii)(IV). Section 1225(b)(2)—the provision relevant here—“serves as a catchall provision that applies to all applicants for admission not covered by § 1225(b)(1).” Jennings, 583 U.S. at 287. And it mandates detention for them throughout removal proceedings. Id. at 297, 302.⁶

The Fifth Circuit—the only Circuit Court to decide this issue on the merits to date—confirmed Respondents' reading that § 1225(b)(2)(A) covers applicants for admission, like Petitioner, regardless of when or how they entered the country, which is consistent with “eliminating the exclusion/deportation dichotomy.” See Buenrostro, 166 F.4th at 499, 508. As the Fifth Circuit held, “that prior Administrations decided to use less than their full enforcement authority... does not mean they lacked the authority to do more.” Id. at 507-08. For such aliens not otherwise covered by § 1225(b)(1), § 1225(b)(2)(A) requires detention. Id.

Your Honor's Saamishvili decision is consistent with the Supreme Court and the Fifth ⁶ Jennings did not rule on whether non-admitted or inadmissible aliens fell within § 1226(a) as opposed to § 1225(b)(2)(A). Rather, it held that the duration of detention under either provision is not limited to a six-month time limit as the Ninth Circuit had held. Jennings, 583 U.S. at 292, 296-306. In doing so, it discussed these provisions in a way that is consistent with Respondents' argument.

It is true that in reaching its holding regarding the absence of a need for a six-month time limit, Jennings summarized § 1226 as applying to aliens “already in the country,” 583 U.S. at 289, and elsewhere characterized that provision as applying to aliens “once inside the United States,” id. at 288. But such language does not stand for the proposition that § 1226 is the sole detention authority for every “alien[] already in the country,” inasmuch as in that very section Jennings refers to § 1226(a) as applying to aliens “present in the country” specifically who are removable under 8 U.S.C. § 1227(a), a provision that applies only to previously admitted aliens. 583 U.S. at 288. That characterization, that § 1226(a) applies to admitted aliens, is in fact Respondents' argument. Respondents argue that those not admitted do not become admitted simply by dint of their presence, but also that many aliens present are also admitted, and those are the aliens who are subject to 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a). Buenrostro, 166 F.4th at 500 (1226(a) “covers numerous grounds ... including for admitted aliens who overstay or violate the terms of their visas, engage in conduct that renders them removable or were improperly admitted”).

Circuit. In Saamishvili, Your Honor rejected a habeas petition filed by an alien present without being admitted who was detained under § 1225(b)(2)(A), holding that under the “natural reading” of the statutes, and “consistent with IIRIRA’s purpose,” § 1225(b)(2)(A) “applies to all aliens who entered the United States without inspection.” See 2026 WL 377574 at *2. As Your Honor recognized, “applicants for admission” include “both aliens arriving at the border and aliens already present in the United States without inspection.” See id. *2 (quoting Cruz-Miguel, 650 F.3d at 197). Such aliens “must be inspected by immigration officers to determine their admissibility” under 8 § 1225(a)(3). See id. (quoting Cruz-Miguel, 650 F.3d at 197 (citing 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(3))). And when inspected, “if the examining immigration officer determines that an alien seeking admission is not clearly and beyond a doubt entitled to be admitted, the alien shall be detained.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A). That is the outcome, Your Honor held, regardless of where the alien is encountered or how long he has been here, after his “unlawful entry,” he “continues to be[] subject to the mandatory detention requirement of § 1225(b)(2)(A).” Id. at *2-3.⁷

⁷ Likewise, in Xiaoquan Chen, the Honorable Mary K. Vyskocil rejected a habeas petition filed by an alien present without being admitted who was detained under § 1225(b)(2)(A), holding that “under the plain language” of that statute, he was subject to mandatory detention pending decision on his removal. 2025 WL 3484855, at *4. Xiaoquan Chen further held that “[t]here is no support in statutory text, precedent, or legislative history for the conclusion that Section 1225(b)(2) does not apply to aliens who are ‘already here’ after having illegally entered the country.” Id. at *5-7; accord Yinxiao Chen, 2026 WL 100761 at *8 (§ 1225(a)(1) defines “an alien present in the United States who has not been admitted” as an “applicant for admission,” and mandatory detention under § 1225(b)(2)(A) “reaches situations concerning” such aliens); *Candido v. The conclusion that Petitioner is detained under § 1225(b)(2) is bolstered by recent persuasive precedent from the BIA, which is the highest administrative body for interpreting and applying the INA. In Hurtado, the BIA held that the INA requires that all applicants for admission, including those who entered the United States without admission or inspection and resided here for years without lawful status, be detained under § 1225 for the duration of their removal proceedings and “[r]emaining in the United States for a lengthy period of time following entry without inspection, by itself, does not constitute an “admission.” Id. at 228. (citing INA § 101(a)(13)(A) [8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(13)(A)] (defining “admission”)). Because that alien was subject to mandatory detention, he was “ineligible for a bond hearing.” Id. at 225. Hurtado is consistent with the plain language of the relevant statutes, Supreme Court precedent, and precedent in this Circuit and elsewhere, as discussed above. See Fernandez Arevalo v. Bondi, 130 F.4th 325, 335-36 (2d Cir. 2025) (construing INA that happened to be in the same manner as BIA had done, notwithstanding Loper Bright Enterprises v. Raimondo, 603 U.S. 369, 385-86, 401 (2024)).

Petitioner is subject to mandatory detention under 8 U.S.C. § 1225 (b)(2)(A).

B. Petitioner’s Arguments As To The Applicability of Section 1226 Fail

Petitioner argues he is subject only to the detention authority in 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a), citing DHS's "longstanding immigration detention practices practice" of applying § 1226(a) to aliens arrested within the interior and charged on their NTAs as not having been admitted or paroled. See Pet. ¶ 48. This argument is a red herring. A federal agency may change its position if it offers a reasoned basis for doing so. See, e.g., Encino Motorcars, LLC v. Navarro, 579 U.S. 211, 221 (2016) ("Agencies are free to change their existing policies as long as they provide a reasoned explanation for the change."); Xiaoquan Chen, 2025 WL 3484855, at *7 & n.1 ("failure by the Executive Branch to enforce a statutory provision, or its conclusion that the law does not apply, does not nullify a duly-enacted law"). Indeed, "authority granted by Congress . . . cannot evaporate through lack of administrative exercise." See Bankamerica Corp. v. U.S., 462 U.S. 122, 131 (1983).

In July 2025, DHS began globally applying the reading of § 1225(b)(2)(A) discussed supra at Part I.A, on detention of applicants for admission, and issued interim guidance that brought the Executive's detention practices in line with the text of § 1225(b)(2)(A). See e.g., Memorandum from Rodney S. Scott, U.S. Customs & Border Protection, Detention of Applicants for Admission (July 10, 2025).⁸ Specifically, DHS concluded that all aliens who enter the country without being admitted are "subject to detention under [8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)] and may not be released from [ICE] custody except by [8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5)] parole." Id. As a result, the "only aliens eligible for a custody determination and release on recognizance, bond, or other conditions under [8 U.S.C. § 1226(a)] are aliens admitted to the United States and chargeable with deportability under [8 U.S.C. § 1227]." Id. This change was consistent with DHS's "broad discretion to make enforcement decisions in 'the immigration context'." See Xiaoquan Chen, 2025 WL 3484855 at Setting aside past practices, Petitioner's attempt to disregard the text of § 1225(b)(2)(A), to render § 1226(a) applicable, with its desirable absence of mandatory detention, is without merit. Petitioner's view that he is covered by § 1226(a) would return immigration law to its pre-IIRIRA construct and ignore the purpose of IIRIRA: to ensure that aliens who enter the country illegally are not treated more favorably than those who seek admission through the proper channels. See Chavez, 801 F. Supp. 3d at 1140. Before 1996, the INA incentivized aliens to enter the United States surreptitiously because they had more process and protections (namely, a bond hearing) than aliens "seeking admission" at a port of entry (requiring mandatory detention). See 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)-(b) (1995). Under the pre-IIRIRA regime, Petitioner would have fallen into the category of aliens who could seek bond because he is present here. But through § 1225(a)(1), Congress corrected this "anomaly" to "ensure[] that all immigrants who have not been lawfully admitted, regardless of their physical presence in the country, are placed on equal footing in removal proceedings under the INA." Torres, 976 F.3d at 928; Hing Sum, 602 F.3d at 1100. Hence, the pivotal factor in determining Petitioner's status after IIRIRA is "whether or not [he] has been lawfully admitted," not whether he physically entered the United States. Hurtado, 29 I. & N. Dec. at 223-24

⁹ DHS cannot be estopped from implementing its interpretation. Good Samaritan Hosp. v. Shalala, 508 U.S. 402, 417 (1993) (agency "not estopped from changing a view [it] believes to have been grounded upon a mistaken legal interpretation and "[a]n administrative agency is not disqualified from changing its mind"). The doctrine of equitable estoppel is applied against the Government only "'in the most serious of circumstances' . . . and is applied 'with the utmost caution and restraint.'" Rojas-Hayes v. INS, 235 F.3d 115, 126 (2d Cir. 2000) (quotations omitted). "In order to apply such estoppel against the Government, there must be 'a showing of 'affirmative misconduct' by the [G]overnment.'" Id. (quotation omitted). A party must establish "both that the Government made a misrepresentation upon which the party reasonably and detrimentally relied and that the Government engaged in affirmative misconduct." See Coppola v. United States, 938 F. Supp. 204, 208 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) (citing City of New York v. Shalala, 34 F.3d 1161, 1168 (2d Cir. 1994)); Ahmed v. Holder, 624 F.3d 150, 155 (2d Cir. 2010) (negligence insufficient). Here, past practices and, indeed, use of forms relevant to different statutory provisions cannot estop the government from acting in accordance with § 1225(b)(2)(A), the statute Congress enacted. See Rodriguez Figueroa v. Barr, 442 F. Supp.3d 549 (W.D.N.Y. 2020). Likewise, if Petitioner has been afforded a grace of freedom of moment because of his superior skills at remaining under the radar, that is not a basis to estop application of § 1225(b)(2)(A).

To the extent that Petitioner argues that § 1226(a) is the default, that is wrong. Section 1226(a) applies only to some persons during their removal proceedings: in general, individuals who, unlike applicants for admission subject to § 1225, have already been admitted to the United States, such as those admitted through a work, tourist, student, or other type of visa, but who have overstayed or otherwise violated the terms of that visa, or who have been found later not to have been lawfully admitted. See 8 U.S.C. § 1226(c)(1)(A)-(D); Buenrostro, 166 F.4th at 500 (1226(a) “covers numerous grounds . . . including for admitted aliens who overstay or violate the terms of their visas, engage in conduct that renders them removable or were improperly admitted”). For them, detention during their removal proceedings is generally discretionary, 8 U.S.C. § 1226(a)(1)-(2),¹⁰ and they may also seek custody redetermination (a bond hearing) before an IJ and can appeal an IJ’s custody determination to the BIA. 8 C.F.R. §§ 236.1(c)(8), (d), 1236.1(d)(1), 1003.19.

Petitioner is incorrect that Respondents’ reading of § 1225(b)(2)(A) would render superfluous the LRA, which added inter alia § 1226(c)(1)(E)(i) and (ii), and requires mandatory detention for some categories of those not yet admitted, Petitioner errs. While aliens under § 1225(b)(2)(A) are subject to discretionary parole under 8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5)(A), the LRA ensured that aliens of the sort who killed Laken Riley would not be so easily released; the only release under 8 U.S.C. § 1226 is for the restrictive bases identified in § 1226(c)(4). There may be some overlap between § 1225(b)(2)(A) and § 1226(c), in that the detention authority in either could cover certain “aliens who are deemed inadmissible.” See Weng, 2026 WL 194248, at *5. But “redundancies are common in statutory drafting and may be created in a congressional effort to be doubly sure.” Id. at *6. And here, detention under § 1225(b)(2)(A) and § 1226(c) differ in at least one important respect: the standards by which the covered alien may be released—as noted above—which by including a small subset of not admitted aliens within the LRA, “removed . . . detention discretion for aliens charged with specific—but not all—crimes.” Chavez, 801 F. Supp. at 1141; accord Valencia v. Chestnut, 809 F. Supp. 3d 1064, 1069 (E.D. Cal. 2025); Rojas v. Olson, No. 25-cv-1437, 2025 WL 3033967, at *9 (E.D. Wis. Oct. 30, 2025).

Many courts have held that § 1225(b)(2)(A) covers only aliens “seeking admission,” and that aliens must be taking an affirmative step towards admission to be covered by § 1225(b)(2)(A).¹¹ Respectfully, these holdings are incorrect. They miss how Congress defined and used “applicant for admission” and “seeking admission” throughout § 1225. Section 1225(b)(2)(A) requires the detention of “an alien who is an applicant for admission, if the examining immigration officer determines that an alien seeking admission is not clearly and beyond a doubt entitled to be admitted.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A). Under the “ordinary meaning” of those terms, “[t]here is no material disjunction—by the terms of the statute or the English language—between the concept of ‘applying’ for something and ‘seeking’ something,” so that “[w]hen a person applies for something, they are necessarily seeking it.” See Buenrostro-Mendez, 166 F.4th at 503. Applicants for admission need not take any added step to be “seeking admission”; they already are. Thus, “alien seeking admission” does not restrict the coverage of § 1225(b)(2)(A) narrower than “applicant for admission.”

Other provisions in § 1225 confirm Petitioner is wrong that “aliens seeking admission” is a subset of “applicants for admission,” to wit, that it is an additional element. The opposite is true. An applicant for admission is within the set of “seeking admission”—Congress within the same statute provided in § 1225(a)(3) that “[a]ll aliens . . . who are applicants for admission or otherwise seeking admission or readmission . . . shall be inspected.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(3) (emphasis added). Petitioner’s argument reads the “otherwise” modifier out of § 1225(a)(3), which does the work of confirming that “applicant for admission” is a particular “way or manner” of seeking admission, such that any alien who is an “applicant for admission” is “seeking admission” for purposes of § 1225(b)(2)(A). See Texas Dep’t of Hous. & Cmty. Affs. v. Inclusive Communities Project, Inc., 576 U.S. 519, 535 (2015); Att’y Gen. of United States v. Wynn, 104 F.4th 348, 354 (D.C. Cir. 2024); Villarreal v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 839 F.3d 958, 963–64 (11th Cir. 2016); Kleber v. CareFusion Corp., 914 F.3d 480, 482–83 (7th Cir. 2019). “Applicants for admission” is a subset of aliens who are “seeking admission,” and no added affirmative step towards admission, is necessary to qualify as “seeking admission.”¹²

At bottom, Congress deemed all aliens present in the United States who have not been admitted as “applicants for admission.” Holding, as Petitioner requests, that mandatory detention does not apply to aliens unless they are “seeking admission” “flies in the face of defined statutory text.” See Chen, 2025 WL 3484855, at *4-5. “[N]othing in the text of Section 1225 or the logic of the immigration system supports a ruling that ‘seeking admission’ is an additional requirement for mandatory detention” under § 1225. Id. at *5. Such a ruling creates the “perverse” incentive for an alien present here but not admitted to not “do[] something” towards admission, lest he trigger mandatory detention under § 1225. Id. That, however, “is not the system defined by Section 1225,” which, by Congressional design, “groups together for the same treatment aliens arriving at the border and aliens who are present illegally in the United States.” Id.

Agreeing with Petitioner that § 1225(b)(2)(A) applies only to aliens “seeking [admission] to the United States or [who] have a close nexus to the border” (Pet. ¶ 31) “introduce[s] more questions to the statute than answers.” See Yinxiao Chen, 2026 WL 100761 at 9. Among them: “at what point does an alien who enters unlawfully no longer actively desire admission? Indeed, when is someone already here?” Id. As another judge elaborated:

Is two years of unadmitted residence long enough? Three? How far must an alien travel from the border? 50 miles? 100? If an alien has been in the interior a short time but resides far away from the border, can the distance make up for a short duration? Or, if an alien lives close to the border but resides in the country for decades, can the time period make up for the short distance?

See Montoya, 2025 WL 3733302, at *2. The answers to these questions “sound in the province of an elected Congress rather than an unelected judge.” Id. Here, Congress limited the timeframe for expedited removal in § 1225(b)(1), but not for mandatory detention in removal proceedings in § 1225(b)(2)(A). Indeed, as Judge Cronan concluded, “[t]he answer to these messy questions [] is the one that Congress has already provided throughout Section 1225: an applicant for admission is ‘seeking admission,’ even when that noncitizen is ‘present in the United States’ without having ‘been admitted.’” Yinxiao Chen, 2026 WL 100761 at *9. Neither the duration of Petitioner’s unlawful presence in the United States nor his distance from the border alters the legal reality that an “applicant for admission” is “seeking admission.” Section 1225(a)(1)’s inclusion of both aliens “arriving” and those “present in the United States” confirms that all aliens who are not admitted are “applicants for admission,” regardless of how long they have been present and whether they are taking steps towards admission.

Here, Petitioner falls within the statutory definition of “applicant for admission” as he was “present” in this country and had “not been admitted” and had not “clearly and beyond a doubt” established that he was “entitled to be admitted.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A). Thus, he “shall be detained” during the pendency of his removal proceedings. Id. Any other reading would be inconsistent with the statutory text and the change IRRIRA effectuated, of eliminating the dichotomy that had afforded bond hearings to those who had sneaked across the border. Buenrostro, 166 F.4th at 499, 508 (“It seems strange to suggest that Congress would have preserved bond hearings exclusively for unlawful entrants”).

C. Petitioner Was Lawfully Arrested Pursuant to an Administrative Warrant Petitioner argues that, even assuming § 1225(b)(2)(A) applies to him, “Respondents did not follow the statutory and procedural requirements necessary to invoke that provision[,]” which “contemplates a threshold determination . . . that the individual is properly treated as an applicant for admission subject to inspection.” Pet. ¶¶ 36-37. He further argues that his arrest was “warrantless,” and therefore, under 8 U.S.C. § 1357(a)(2), the officers needed probable cause to believe that Petitioner was “likely to escape before a warrant [could] be obtained.” Pet. ¶¶ 41-42.

Petitioner, again, is incorrect. As a threshold matter, Petitioner’s arrest was not “warrantless.” He was arrested pursuant to a Form I-200, Warrant for Arrest of Alien (“I-200”), an administrative civil warrant authorizing ICE to arrest individuals for whom the arresting officer has probable cause to believe is removable from the United States. See Sample Form I-200, https://www.ice.gov/sites/default/files/documents/Document/2017/I-200_SAMPLE.PDF (last visited March 23, 2026).

As the Supreme Court recognized in Abel v. United States, administrative arrests for deportation have a long-standing statutory history and are distinct from arrests for criminal offenses. See 362 U.S. at 230. The Supreme Court held that that

[s]tatutes authorizing administrative arrest to achieve detention pending deportation proceedings have the sanction of time. It would emphasize the disregard for the presumptive respect the Court owes to the validity of Acts of Congress, especially when confirmed by uncontested historical legitimacy, to bring into question for the first time such a long-sanctioned practice of government at the behest of a party who not only did not challenge the exercise of authority below, but expressly acknowledged its validity.

Abel, 362 U.S. at 230. Petitioner's arrest was not a criminal arrest requiring a judicial warrant or probable cause of a new crime; rather, it was a civil, administrative arrest carried out pursuant to the broad authority granted by Congress to enforce the nation's immigration laws.

Here, the arresting officer determined there was probable cause to believe Petitioner was removable based on Petitioner's voluntary statements that he unlawfully entered the country without inspection or admission. Nevin Decl. ¶¶ 45; Ex. A (I-200) (probable cause based on "statements made voluntarily by the subject . . . that affirmatively indicate that the subject either lacks immigration status or notwithstanding such status is removable under U.S. immigration law."). As Petitioner's I-200 warrant reflects, an ICE officer certified he served the warrant on Petitioner on the date of his arrest, and that the contents were read to him in Spanish. Nevin Decl. ¶ 5; Ex. A (I-200). Therefore, the warrantless arrest authority and concomitant restrictions in 8 U.S.C. § 1357 are inapplicable, and Petitioner's contention that ICE violated his constitutional rights violated by failing to follow the "procedural prerequisites Congress imposed" is baseless.

II. PETITIONER'S DETENTION COMPORTS WITH DUE PROCESS

Petitioner claims that his detention violates his procedural and substantive due process rights because he is subject to mandatory detention, and not a discretionary determination of flight risk and subsequent opportunity for a bond hearing. Pet. Counts I and II. To state a claim for procedural due process, Petitioner must establish: (i) a cognizable liberty or property interest, and (ii) a deprivation of that interest without due process. See Weinstein v. Albright, 261 F.3d 127, 134 (2d. Cir. 2001) (citing Mathews v. Eldridge, 424 U.S. 319, 334 (1976) (process owed is flexible and case-specific)).

Because Petitioner is an applicant for admission and thus treated for constitutional purposes as if stopped at the border,¹³ he is lawfully detained pursuant to § 1225(b)(2)(A), as the Supreme Court has made clear that “[w]hatever the procedure authorized by Congress is, it is due process as far as an alien denied entry is concerned.” Shaughnessy v. United States ex rel. Mezei, 345 U.S. 206, 212 (1953); Guzman v. Tippy, 130 F.3d 64, 66 (2d Cir. 1997) (the rights of excluded aliens “are determined by the procedures established by Congress and not by the due process protections of the Fifth Amendment”).

More than a century of Supreme Court precedent confirms that applicants for admission are treated differently for due process purposes from other categories of detained aliens. See, e.g., Zadvydas v. Davis, 533 U.S. 678, 693 (2001) (“The distinction between an alien who has effected an entry into the United States and one who has never entered runs throughout immigration law.”). In the INA, Congress treated applicants for admission differently by mandating detention during ongoing proceedings to effectuate their removal. Unlike admitted aliens later placed in removal proceedings and detained under § 1226, applicants for admission are “request[ing] a privilege,” Landon v. Plasencia, 459 U.S. 21, 32 (1982), and therefore “stand[] on a different footing,” Mezei, 345 U.S. at 212. The Supreme Court reaffirmed “[its] century-old rule regarding the due process rights of an alien seeking initial entry” in Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. at 139-40. The Court explained, “[w]hen an alien arrives at a port of entry—for example, an international airport—the alien is on U.S. soil, but the alien is not considered to have entered the country.” Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. at 139. Moreover, such aliens “even those paroled elsewhere in the country for years pending removal—are ‘treated’ for due process purposes ‘as if stopped at the border.’” Id. (quoting Mezei, 345 U.S. at 215). The Supreme Court was clear: “the Due Process Clause provides nothing more” than the process in 8 U.S.C. § 1225 that allows an individual to seek protection from removal if he fears return to his home country and to seek from DHS section 1182(d)(5)(A) parole. Id.

Courts have applied this entry fiction to provide only the process set forth in the INA to aliens who have “entered” and who have developed significant ties to this country during this time. See e.g., Mezei, 345 U.S. at 214–215 (an alien with 25 years’ of lawful presence who sought to reenter enjoyed “no additional rights” beyond those granted by “legislative grace”); see also, e.g., Guerrier v. Garland, 18 F.4th 304, 313 (9th Cir. 2021) (“the due process rights of noncitizens who have not ‘effected an entry’ into the country are coextensive with the statutory rights Congress provides.”); Mendez Ramirez v. Decker, 612 F. Supp. 3d 200, 219–21 (S.D.N.Y. 2020) (alien previously released from custody but not lawfully admitted was still considered “at the threshold of initial entry” over one year later); Salim v. Tryon, 2014 WL 1664413, *2 (W.D.N.Y. Apr. 25, 2014) (“The Due Process Clause provides an inadmissible alien no procedural protection beyond the procedure explicitly authorized by Congress, nor any right to be free from detention pending removal proceedings.”); Poonjani v. Shanahan, 319 F. Supp. 3d 644, 648 (S.D.N.Y. 2018) (parolee continuously present for over 15 years, but not lawfully admitted, was “at the threshold of initial entry” such that “due process amounts to whatever the procedure authorized by Congress is”); D.A.V.V. v. Warden, Irwin County Detention Center, 2020 WL 13240240, at *4–6 (M.D. Ga. Dec. 7, 2020) (“arriving aliens’ procedural due process rights entitle them only to the relief provided by the INA”); Gonzales Garcia v. Rosen, 513 F. Supp. 3d 329, 333–36 (W.D.N.Y. 2021) (applicant for admission is not entitled to procedural protections beyond those provided by statute).

Here, “because the immigration statutes at issue [] do not authorize a bond hearing, Mezei dictates that due process does not require one.” Poonjani, 319 F. Supp. 3d at 649; see also Palma v. Arteta, No. 25-cv-9340, 2026 WL 697015, at *7 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 12, 2026) (the Government may “detain any non-entered alien without bond for a prolonged period”). Given that the due process rights of applicants for admission are limited to the process that Congress chooses to provide, and Petitioner’s detention under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A) for the duration of his removal proceedings is statutorily mandated, subject only to the possibility of release on discretionary parole by ICE under 8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5)(A), see Jennings, 583 U.S. at 298-301, Petitioner is not entitled to further process, see Mezei, 345 U.S. at 212. Petitioner cannot show that he is owed process – assessments by ICE or a bond hearing -- beyond mandatory detention.

Petitioner’s detention for the pendency of his removal proceedings also does not run afoul of his substantive due process rights. A substantive due process claim must allege governmental conduct that “is so egregious, so outrageous, that it may fairly be said to shock the contemporary conscience.” Velez v. Levy, 401 F.3d 75, 93 (2d Cir. 2005) (quoting Cty. of Sacramento v. Lewis, 523 U.S. 833, 847 n.8 (1998)). Conduct is conscience-shocking only if it was “intended to injure in some way unjustifiable by any government interest.” Lewis, 523 U.S. at 849. Where no fundamental right is at stake, “governmental regulation need only be reasonably related to a legitimate state objective.” Goe v. Zucker, 43 F.4th 19, 30 (2d Cir. 2022).

No court has ever held that an alien not lawfully admitted to the United States holds a fundamental right to remain at liberty in the United States. To the contrary, “Detention during removal proceedings is a constitutionally valid aspect of the deportation process.” Velasco Lopez, 978 F.3d at 848 (citing Demore, 538 U.S. at 523); see Demore, 538 U.S. at 523 n.7 (“prior to 1907 there was no provision permitting bail for any aliens during the pendency of their deportation proceedings”).¹⁴ Detaining Petitioner is rationally related to the government’s interest in enforcing immigration laws. See Avramenkov v. INS, 99 F. Supp. 2d 210, 217 (D. Conn. 2000) (“[I]t does not shock the conscience that a certain class of aliens subject to almost certain removal are detained pending removal”). Here, Petitioner’s detention under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A) for the duration of his removal proceedings is both rational, and mandated, subject only to discretionary parole under 8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5)(A), see Jennings, 583 U.S. at 298-301. He is owed no more process.

III. THE APA CLAIM IS IMPROPER

Last, Petitioner claims his detention is “arbitrary and capricious” and warrants review under 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A). Pet. ¶¶ 95-98. However, the APA is not a viable vehicle for claims arising out of his detention. In Trump v. J.G.G., 145 S. Ct. 1003 (2025), in which claims including due process claims were brought under the APA, the INA, various habeas provisions, the Supreme Court held that where the claims for relief, as here, “necessarily imply the invalidity of their confinement,” regardless of whether Petitioner requests release from confinement, those claims “fall within the ‘core’ of the writ of habeas corpus and must be brought in habeas.” See id. at 1005. The Supreme Court’s holding is consistent with well-established law that habeas is generally the only possible district court vehicle for challenges brought pursuant to immigration statutes. Id. (citing Heikkila v. Barber, 345 U.S. 229, 234-35 (1953)). All the claims in this suit constitute a core habeas claim—though they fail for the reasons discussed supra—and are not cognizable under the APA. Additionally, by the APA’s terms, it is available only for agency action “for which there is no other adequate remedy in a court.” 5 U.S.C. § 704. Thus, Petitioner’s APA claims are independently barred by this limitation. As noted by Justice Kavanaugh’s concurrence in J.G.G., “[G]iven 5 U.S.C. § 704, which states that claims under the APA are not available when there is another adequate remedy in court, I agree with the Court that habeas corpus, not the APA, is the proper vehicle here.” Id. at 1007 (Kavanaugh, J. concurring). Here, as in J.G.G., habeas is an “adequate remedy” through which Petitioner can challenge his detention.¹⁵

524, 538 (1952) (“Detention is necessarily a part of [the] deportation procedure.”).

CONCLUSION

For the reasons stated herein, the Petition should be denied.
