3 PLEASE TAKE NOTICE as soon as it may be heard in the United States District Court

4 for the District of Arizona, that Petitioner Marlo Pastor Cabrera hereby moves the Court for 5 emergency relief in the form of a temporary restraining order (“TRO”) and preliminary injunction

6 enjoying Respondents from removing Petitioner from the United States or relocating Petitioner

7 outside of the District of Arizona pending further Order of the Court, and ordering their release

8 during the pendency of this action. Because Petitioner’s detention violates the Due Process

9 Clause of the Fifth Amendment to the United States, Petitioner respectfully requests that this

10 Court order Petitioner’s immediate release from Respondents’ custody pending these 11 proceedings, without requiring bond or electronic monitoring, or, in the alternative. This motion 12 is based on this Notice of Motion and the accompanying Memorandum of Points and Authorities.

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES INTRODUCTION AND FACTUAL BACKGROUND

On August 26, 2025, Petitioner was encountered at Phoenix Police Department after ICE hold was placed. Upon his release for subsequently dismissed charged, ICE detained Petitioner without notice or cause. Respondent arrested and detained Petitioner without notice or cause. Petitioner is currently held in Florence Processing Center in Florence, Arizona where he has been placed in removal proceedings and is scheduled for an Individual Hearing

Nothing about Petitioner's encounter justified their arrest and detention. Mr. Marlon Pastor Cabrera was subjected to detention by ICE agents without reasonable suspicion, arrested without a warrant or probable cause, and subjected to Removal Proceedings. Petitioner's summary arrest and indefinite detention flout the Constitution. The only legitimate interests that civil immigration detention serves are mitigating flight risk and preventing danger to the community. When those interests are absent, the Fifth Amendment's Due Process Clause squarely prohibits detention.

As a result of their arrest and detention, Petitioner is suffering irreparable and ongoing harm. The unconstitutional deprivation of "physical liberty" "unquestionably constitutes irreparable injury." Hernandez v. Sessions, 872 F.3d 976, 994-95 (9th Cir. 2017). Indeed, "[f]reedom from imprisonment—from government custody, detention, or other forms of physical restraint—lies at the heart of the liberty that [the Due Process] Clause protects." Zadvydas v. Davis, 533 U.S. 678, 690 (2001). Petitioner therefore seeks a TRO and preliminary injunction enjoining Respondents from removing them from the United States, from relocating them out of the District of Arizona pending this litigation and ordering their release. A TRO is necessary to avoid irreparable harm and to ensure that this Court is not deprived of jurisdiction over their claims should they be removed from the United States or relocated outside of this District.

LEGAL STANDARD

Mr. Marlon Pastor Cabrera is entitled to a temporary restraining order if they establish that they are "likely to succeed on the merits, . . . likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief, that the balance of equities tip in [her] favor, and that an injunction is in the public interest.” Winter v. Nat. Res. Def. Council, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 20 (2008); Stuhlbarg Int’l Sales Co. v. John D. Brush & Co., 240 F.3d 832, 839 n.7 (9th Cir. 2001) (noting that the preliminary injunction and temporary restraining order standards are “substantially identical”). Even if Petitioner does not show a likelihood of success on the merits, the Court may still grant a temporary restraining order if they raise “serious questions” as to the merits of their claims, the balance of hardships tips “sharply” in their favor, and the remaining equitable factors are satisfied. Alliance for the Wild Rockies v. Cottrell, 632 F.3d 1127, 1135 (9th Cir. 2011). All factors here weigh decisively in Petitioner’s favor.

ARGUMENT

I. PETITIONER IS LIKELY TO SUCCEED ON THE MERITS.

A. Petitioner’s detention violates substantive due process because she is neither a flight risk nor a danger to the community.

The Due Process Clause applies to “all ‘persons’ within the United States, including [noncitizens], whether their presence here is lawful, unlawful, temporary, or permanent.” Zadvydas, 533 U.S. at 693. “The touchstone of due process is protection of the individual against arbitrary action of government.” Wolff v. McDonnell, 418 U.S. 539, 558 (1974), including “the exercise of power without any reasonable justification in the service of a legitimate government objective,” Cnty. of Sacramento v. Lewis, 523 U.S. 833, 846 (1998). “Freedom from imprisonment—from government custody, detention, or other forms of physical restraint—lies at the heart of the liberty that Clause protects.” Zadvydas, 533 U.S. at 690.

To comply with substantive due process, the government’s deprivation of an individual’s liberty must be justified by a sufficient purpose. Therefore, immigration detention, which is “civil, not criminal,” and “nonpunitive in purpose and effect,” must be justified by either (1) dangerousness or (2) flight risk. Zadvydas, 533 U.S. at 690; see Hernandez, 872 F.3d at 994 (“[T]he government has no legitimate interest in detaining individuals who have been determined

1 not to be a danger to the community and whose appearance at future immigration proceedings 2 can be reasonably ensured by a lesser bond or alternative conditions.”). When these rationales are 3 absent, immigration detention serves no legitimate government purpose and becomes 4 impermissibly punitive, violating a person’s substantive due process rights. See Jackson v.
5 Indiana, 406 U.S. 715, 738 (1972) (detention must have a “reasonable relation” to the 6 government’s interests in preventing flight and danger); see also Mahdawi v. Trump, No. 2:25-7 CV-389, 2025 WL 1243135, at *11 (D. Vt. Apr. 30, 2025) (ordering release from custody after 8 finding petitioner may “succeed on his Fifth Amendment claim if he demonstrates either that the 9 government acted with a punitive purpose or that it lacks any legitimate reason to detain him”).

10 The Supreme Court has recognized that noncitizens may bring as-applied challenges 11 to detention, including so-called “mandatory” detention. Demore v. Kim, 538 U.S. 510, 532-33 12 (2003) (Kennedy, J., concurring) (“Were there to be an unreasonable delay by the INS in pursuing 13 and completing deportation proceedings, it could become necessary then to inquire whether the 14 detention is not to facilitate deportation, or to protect against risk of flight or dangerousness, but 15 to incarcerate for other reasons.”); Nielsen v. Preap, 586 U.S. 392, 420 (2019) (“Our decision 16 today on the meaning of [§ 1226(c)] does not foreclose as-applied challenges—that is, 17 constitutional challenges to applications of the statute as we have now read it.”). Petitioner, who 18 has no criminal record, has strong community ties with three United States children is neither a 19 danger nor a flight risk. Therefore, their detention is both punitive and not justified by a legitimate 20 purpose, violating their substantive due process rights.

21 First, because Petitioner had no criminal history, and has had no intervening criminal 22 history or arrests since coming to the United States nearly 7 years ago, there is no credible 23 argument that they are a danger to the community.

24 Second, as to flight risk, the question is whether custody is reasonably necessary to 25 secure a person’s appearance at immigration court hearings and related check-ins. See Hernandez, 26 872 F.3d at 990-91. There is no basis to argue that Petitioner, who was arrested by Respondents 27 while he was broken down at the side of the road, did not resist arrest, did not attempt the flee, is 28 a flight risk. Petitioner has no criminal history or history of failing to appear at hearings and strong

1 family ties with a wife, two children in the United States. Moreover, Petitioner has a filed 2 application for relief, asylum application, before the immigration court and a pathway to lawful 3 permanent residence, further mitigating any risk of flight. See Padilla v. U.S. Immigr. and 4 Customs Enf't, 704 F. Supp. 3d 1163, 1173 (W.D. Wash. 2023) (holding that there is not a 5 legitimate concern of flight risk where plaintiffs have bona fide asylum claims and desire to 6 remain in the United States). In sum, Petitioner's compliance with the laws and community ties 7 demonstrate they are neither a danger nor flight risk. Accordingly, Petitioner's ongoing detention 8 is unconstitutional, and substantive due process principles require her immediate release.

9 B. The government violated procedural due process by depriving Petitioner of the 10 opportunity to contest her arrest and detention before a neutral decisionmaker.

11 Noncitizens living in the United States like Petitioner have a protected liberty interest 12 in their ongoing freedom from confinement. See Zadvydas, 533 U.S. at 690. The Supreme Court 13 "usually has held that the Constitution requires some kind of a hearing before the State deprives 14 a person of liberty or property." Zinermon v. Burch, 494 U.S. 113, 127 (1990). This is so even in 15 cases where that freedom is lawfully revocable. See Hurd v. D.C., Gov't, 864 F.3d 671, 683 (D.C.
 16 Cir. 2017) (citing Young v. Harper, 520 U.S. 143, 152 (1997) (holding that re-detention after pre-17 parole conditional supervision requires pre-deprivation hearing)); Gagnon v. Scarpelli, 411 U.S.
 18 778, 782 (1973) (holding the same, in probation context); Morrissey v. Brewer, 408 U.S. 471, 482 19 (1972) (same, in parole context).

20 Accordingly, the Supreme Court has repeatedly held that individuals released from 21 custody on bond, parole, or other forms of conditional release have a protected interest in their 22 ongoing liberty, because "[t]he parolee has relied on at least an implicit promise that parole will 23 be revoked only if he fails to live up to the parole conditions." Morrissey, 408 U.S. at 482. "By 24 whatever name, the[ir] liberty is valuable and must be seen within the protection of the [Due 25 Process Clause]." Id. This liberty interest also applies to noncitizens, including those who have 26 been conditionally released from immigration custody. See Ortega v. Bonnar, 415 F. Supp. 3d 27 963, 970 (N.D. Cal. 2019). Petitioner thus has a protected liberty interest in her freedom from 28 physical custody. | Once a petitioner has established a protected liberty interest, as Petitioner has

1 done here, courts in this circuit apply the Mathews test to determine what procedural protections
 2 are due. See Johnson v. Ryan, 55 F.4th 1167, 1179-80 (9th Cir. 2022) (citing Mathews v. Eldridge, 3 424 U.S. 319, 335 (1976)). Under that test, the court weighs: (1) the private interest affected; (2) 4 the risk of erroneous deprivation and probable value of procedural safeguards; and (3) the 5 governments interest. Id. In this case, the factors weigh heavily in favor of releasing Petitioner 6 and prohibiting her re-detention without a custody hearing at which the government bears the 7 burden of proof.

8 First, the private interest affected in this case is profound. When considering this factor, 9 courts look to “the degree of potential deprivation.” Nozzi v. Hous. Auth. of City of Los Angeles, 10 806 F.3d 1178, 1193 (9th Cir. 2015) (citing Mathews, 424 U.S. at 341). The degree of deprivation 11 here is high. Petitioner, who is detained at a facility that is on lockdown as result measles outbreak 12 is medically vulnerable, has been completely deprived of their physical liberty. Petitioner’s 13 detention has ripped from their “free[dom] to be with family and friends and to form the .. .
 14 enduring attachments of normal life.” Morrissey, 408 U.S. at 482. Cutting someone off from the 15 “core values of unqualified liberty”—for Petitioner, who is a Christian and regularly attends 16 church —creates a “grievous loss.” Id. Moreover, because Petitioner faces civil detention, “h[er] 17 liberty interest is arguably greater than the interest of the parolees in Morrissey.” See Ortega, 415 18 F. Supp. 3d at 970. As someone in civil detention, therefore, “it stands to reason that [Petitioner] 19 is entitled to protections at least as great as those afforded to a[n]... individual . . . accused but not 20 convicted of a crime.” See Jones v. Blanas, 393 F.3d 918, 932 (9th Cir. 2004).

21 Second, “the risk of an erroneous deprivation [of liberty] is high” where, as here, “[the 22 petitioner] has not received any bond or custody redetermination hearing.” A.E. v. Andrews, No.
 23 1:25-cv-00107, 2025 WL 1424382, at *5 (E.D. Cal. May 16, 2025) (quoting Jimenez v. Wolf, No.
 24 19-cv-07996-NC, 2020 WL 510347, at *3 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 30, 2020)); see also Diep v. Wofford, 25 No. 1:24-cv-01238, 2025 WL 6047444, at *5 (E.D. Cal. Feb. 25, 2025). Respondents detained 26 Petitioner as their vehicle broke down on the side of the road detaining them with no notice and 27 no opportunity to contest their detention before a neutral arbiter. In such circumstances, when 28 Respondents have provided no procedural safeguards, “the probable value of additional 1 procedural safeguards, i.e., a bond hearing, is high.” A.E., 2025 WL 1424382, at *5. This is 2 especially true here, where there is no criminal history and strong community suggesting that 3 Petitioner poses a flight risk or danger to the community. Their detention instead appears to be 4 motivated instead by Respondents’ new arrest quotas and practice of leveraging detention to 5 secure dismissal of ongoing proceedings under Section 240 of the Immigration and Nationality 6 Act, to initiate expedited removal. Neither constitutes a lawful justification to detain a person who 7 does not pose a flight risk or danger to the community.

8 Because the private interest in freedom from immigration detention is substantial, due 9 process also requires that in cases like this one, the government bears the burden of proving “by 10 clear and convincing evidence that the [noncitizen] is a flight risk or danger to the community.”
11 Singh v. Holder, 638 F.3d 1196, 1203-04 (9th Cir. 2011); see Martinez v. Clark, 124 F.4th 775, 12 785-86 (9th Cir. 2024) (holding that government properly bore burden by clear and convincing 13 evidence in court-ordered bond hearing); Doe v. Becerra, No. 2:25-CV-00647-DJC-DMC, 2025 14 WL 691664, at *8 (E.D. Cal. Mar. 3, 2025) (ordering pre-deprivation bond hearing in which 15 government bears burden by clear and convincing evidence).

16 Third, the government’s interest in detaining Petitioner without first providing notice and 17 submitting to a custody hearing is minimal. Immigration courts routinely conduct custody 18 hearings, which impose a “minimal” cost to the government. See Doe, 2025 WL 691664, at *6; 19 A.E., 2025 WL 1424382, at *5. Petitioner has an impeccable record of no criminal history; there 20 is no reason to believe that between the date of their release and their court date that will change.

21 In short, Respondents violated Petitioner’s due process rights when they detained them 22 without notice and without a custody hearing before a neutral arbiter. For the foregoing reasons, 23 Petitioner is likely to succeed on the merits of her claims. But even if the Court disagrees, 24 Petitioner presents at least “serious question[s] going to the merits,” alongside a “balance of 25 hardships” tipping decidedly in their favor. All. for the Wild Rockies, 632 F.3d at 1135. Indeed, 26 the constitutional concerns delineated above are of the weightiest order and beyond colorable.
27 This Court should therefore enter the requested TRO.

1 II. PETITIONER WILL CONTINUE TO SUFFER SERIOUS AND IRREPARABLE 2 INJURY ABSENT A TRO.

3 Without a temporary restraining order, Petitioner will suffer immense irreparable injury.
4 Indeed, he faces such injury every day he remains in detention in violation of their Fifth 5 Amendment rights. “It is well established that the deprivation of constitutional rights 6 ‘unquestionably constitutes irreparable injury.’” Hernandez, 872 F.3d at 994-95 (citing 7 Melendres v. Arpaio, 695 F.3d 990, 1002 (9th Cir. 2012)). “When an alleged deprivation of a 8 constitutional right is involved, most courts hold that no further showing of irreparable injury is 9 necessary.” Warsoldier v. Woodford, 418 F.3d 989, 1001-02 (9th Cir. 2005) (internal quotation 10 marks omitted). And the unlawful deprivation of physical liberty is the quintessential irreparable 11 harm. See Hernandez, 872 F.3d at 994 (holding that plaintiffs were irreparably harmed “by virtue 12 of the fact that they [we]re likely to be unconstitutionally detained for an indeterminate period of 13 time”), see also, e.g., Rosales-Mireles v. United States, 585 U.S. 129, 139 (2018) (recognizing 14 that “[a]ny amount of actual jail time is significant, and has exceptionally severe consequences 15 for the incarcerated individual” (cleaned up)).

16 As a result of their arrest and detention, Petitioner is also suffering additional ongoing 17 irreparable harms. Petitioner, was ripped from their life and community. He worries that if 18 something happens to him, he will be leaving his young children unprotected in the world.

19 III. THE BALANCE OF THE EQUITIES AND THE PUBLIC INTEREST WEIGH 20 STRONGLY IN PETITIONER’S FAVOR.

21 When the government is the party opposing the request for emergency relief, the balance 22 of the equities and the public interest merge. Env’t Prot. Info. Ctr. v. Carlson, 968 F.3d 985, 991 23 (9th Cir. 2020) (citing California v. Azar, 911 F.3d 558, 581 (9th Cir. 2018)). Here, the balance 24 of equities overwhelmingly favors Petitioner, who faces irreparable injury in the form of ongoing 25 constitutional violations and continued additional suffering if the TRO is not granted. See Section 26 II, supra; Hernandez, 872 F.3d at 996 (when “[faced with ... preventable human suffering, ... the 27 balance of hardships tips decidedly in plaintiffs’ favor”) (internal citation omitted). The public 28 interest likewise weighs strongly in Petitioner’s favor. A California district court recently

1 concluded, “[t]he public has a strong interest in upholding procedural protections against unlawful 2 detention, and the Ninth Circuit has recognized that the costs to the public of immigration 3 detention are staggering.” Diaz, 2025 WL 1676854, at *3 (citing Jorge M. F., 2021 WL 783561, 4 at *3). More fundamentally, “[i]t is always in the public interest to prevent the violation of a 5 party’s constitutional rights.” Index Newspapers LLC v. U.S. Marshals Serv., 977 F.3d 817, 838 6 (9th Cir. 2020) (citing Padilla v. Immigr. & Customs Enf’t, 953 F.3d 1134, 1147-48 (9th Cir.
7 2020) (internal quotation marks omitted)).

8 SECURITY

9 No security is necessary here. Courts “may dispense with the filing of a bond when,” as 10 here, “there is no realistic likelihood of harm to the defendant from enjoining his or her conduct.” 11 Jorgensen v. Cassidy, 320 F.3d 906, 919 (9th Cir. 2003). It is also proper to waive the bond 12 requirement in cases raising constitutional claims, because “to require a bond would have a 13 negative impact on plaintiff’s constitutional rights, as well as the constitutional rights of other 14 members of the public.” Baca v. Moreno Valley Unified Sch. Dist., 936 F. Supp. 719, 738 (C.D.
15 Cal. 1996). Finally, Plaintiff’s showing of a high likelihood of success on the merits supports the
17 Tahoe Reg’l Plan. Agency, 766 F.2d 1319, 1326 (9th Cir.), amended, 775 F.2d 998 (9th Cir. 1985).

19 CONCLUSION

20 For the foregoing reasons, Petitioner respectfully requests the Court grant a TRO to 21 restore the status quo ante that (1) immediately releases her from Respondents’ custody without 22 electronic monitoring and enjoins Respondents from re-detaining them absent further order of 23 this Court; (2) in the alternative, immediately releases them from Respondents’ custody and 24 enjoins Respondents from re-detaining unless they demonstrate at a pre-deprivation bond hearing, 25 by clear and convincing evidence, that Petitioner is a flight risk or danger to the community such 26 that their physical custody is required; and (3) prohibits the government from transferring them 27 out of this District and/or removing them from the country until these habeas proceedings have 28 concluded.
