

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF ILLINOIS
EASTERN DIVISION

H.S.O.,	)
	)
Petitioners,	)
	)	Case No. 1:26-cv-6386
v.	)
	)
MARKWAYNE MULLIN, Secretary of Homeland	)
Security;	)
ROBERT F. KENNEDY, JR., Secretary of	)
Health and Human Services;	)
ANGIE SALAZAR, Acting Director of the Office	)
Of Refugee Resettlement;	)
MARVENA TWIGG, President of the National	)
Youth Advocate Program,	)
	)
Respondents.	)
_____	)

PETITION FOR A WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS

COMES NOW H.S.O., the Petitioner, represented by their undersigned Pro-Bono attorneys, and very respectfully request that this Honorable Court issue a Writ of Habeas Corpus pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2241, ordering their immediate release.

Introduction

H.S.O., the Petitioner, is a 16-year-old immigrant child from Somalia whom the Respondents have detained for nearly six months. H.S.O.'s close family friend, a U.S. citizen ("Sponsor"), who was residing in the U.S. when H.S.O. entered the U.S., petitioned to sponsor H.S.O. immediately after she entered the U.S. on or about December 11, 2025. Since then, H.S.O.'s Sponsor has completed proof of income and address, background checks, a home study, and provided valid U.S. identification. The only element preventing H.S.O.'s reunification with her Sponsor is the ORR making a final decision. Per ORR regulations, the ORR "shall release a child from its custody without unnecessary delay." 45 C.F.R. § 410.1201. However, ORR is requiring a further questionnaires and in-person meetings to validate identification which is already in their possession in every case and weaponizing this to prevent family reunification. H.S.O. remains separated from their Sponsor, a U.S. citizen, who has successfully completed a Family Reunification Application ("FRA"), and wants to relieve H.S.O. of her isolation. The Petitioner seeks release from government detention to the custody of her Sponsor.

The Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act ("TVPRA") mandates that the government "promptly" release the immigrant children in its custody to the "least restrictive setting that is in the best interest of the child." 8 U.S.C. § 1232(c)(2). H.S.O.'s Sponsor can provide that setting. By (i) retaining custody of H.S.O.; (ii) keeping H.S.O. in isolation as the single female at the detention facility; (iii) engendering feelings of loneliness due to her ethnicity and religion, as H.S.O. is the only Somalian in detention and a Muslim; and (iv) separating her from her Sponsor, who can safely provide for her, Respondents are violating the TVPRA and H.S.O.'s Fifth Amendment right to due process.

The TVPRA requires that the Respondents act on sponsors' applications quickly—in the case of a parent within at most 10 days and in other cases within 14 days. Despite her Sponsor's suitability, the Respondents have unjustifiably kept the Petitioner in their custody and away from her optimal caregiver for nearly six months to the detriment of Petitioner's mental and emotional health. The Respondents have delayed release in violation of their own policies and based on newly created policies promulgated without notice and comment that require sponsors to furnish U.S.-issued forms of identification.

The delay in H.S.O.'s release and the new Office of Refugee Resettlement ("ORR") policies, necessitating U.S.-issued identification, are unlawful. First, the policies conflict with the TVPRA, which permits foreign-issued forms of identification because the foreign origin of a valid identity document is unrelated to the suitability of a sponsor or to the best interest of the children. The delay is also unlawful because it contravenes the time limit provisions of the TVPRA. The delay and new policies also violate H.S.O.'s Fifth Amendment rights; they unnecessarily impede familial association, prolong groundless institutional custody, are not rationally related to a legitimate government interest, and are procedurally flawed. Lastly, the new policies violate the Administrative Procedure Act ("APA") as they are arbitrary and capricious, violate the Constitution, fail to consider the impact of the policy on unaccompanied minors or their reliance of the previous policy and do not follow proper rulemaking procedures.

Therefore, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2241, H.S.O. respectfully requests that she be released into the custody of her Sponsor forthwith.

I. Parties

1. The Petitioner, H.S.O., is a minor immigrant child from Somalia, who entered the United States on or about December 11, 2025, and were unaccompanied by an adult when they voluntarily surrendered to immigration officers. She has been detained by Respondents for nearly six months.

2. Respondent Markwayne Mullin is the Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security ("DHS"), and as such, has influence over the detention of H.S.O. He is sued in his official capacity.

3. Defendant Robert F. Kennedy Jr. is the Secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services ("HHS"). He has authority over the ORR, a division of the HHS that directly oversees, controls, and manages the detention of unaccompanied immigrant children (“UIC”), including H.S.O. He is sued in his official capacity.

4. Respondent Angie Salazar is the Acting Director of the ORR, and as such, directly oversees, controls, and manages the detention of UIC, including H.S.O. She is sued in her official capacity.

5. Respondent Marvena Twigg is the President of the National Youth Advocate Program – Illinois (“NYAP-IL”), the immediate custodian of H.S.O. She is sued in her official capacity.

II. Jurisdiction, Venue, and Exhaustion

6. This court has subject-matter jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 2241 (habeas corpus), 28 U.S.C. § 1331 (federal question), and Article I, § 9, cl. 2 of the United States Constitution (Suspension Clause). Federal questions in this case arise under the TVPRA, 8 U.S.C. § 1232, and its implementing regulations, 45 C.F.R. § 410.1200-1210, and the APA, 5 U.S.C. § 701 et seq.

7. The Petitioner has standing to sue based on her detention in institutional custody. See, e.g., J.E.C.M. v. Lloyd, 352 F. Supp. 3d 559, 579 (E.D. Va. 2018) (finding standing to challenge ORR policies based on the ongoing invasion of due process rights, including separation from family, that resulted from the policies); Jacinto-Castamon de Nolasco v. ICE, 319 F. Supp. 3d 491, 502 (D.D.C. 2018) (finding indefinite separation or families not a compelling government interest therefore giving the plaintiff standing to sue). Further, the Petitioner remains detained because her Sponsor cannot compel the government to release the Petitioner despite complying with ORR policies and procedures. Thus, she is injured by the delay. See FDA v. All. For Hippocratic Med., 602 U.S. 367, 384-85 (2024) (finding injury to an individual through regulation of third-party individuals or businesses when there is “a predictable chain of events leading from the government action to the asserted injury”).

8. This Court may grant relief under the habeas corpus statutes, 28 U.S.C. § 2241 et. seq., the Declaratory Judgment Act, 28 U.S.C. § 2201 et. seq., and the All Writs Act, 28 U.S.C. § 1651.

9. Venue is proper in the Northern District of Illinois under 28 U.S.C. § 2241 and § 1391(b)(2) because the Petitioner is in Respondents’ custody in this district. Braden v. 30th Judicial Circuit Court of Kentucky, 410 U.S. 484, 493–500 (1973) (venue lies in the judicial district where petitioners are held). Venue is also proper in this district because Respondents are employees, officers, and agencies of the United States, and a substantial part of the events or omissions giving rise to Petitioner’s claims occurred in this district. 28 U.S.C. § 2241 and § 1391(e).

10. Exhaustion of administrative remedies is not required. First, under the TVPRA, Congress has not mandated that the Petitioner exhaust any administrative remedies. McCarthy v. Madigan, 503 U.S. 140, 144 (1992) (holding unless Congress has mandated exhaustion, it is not required under 28 U.S.C. § 2241). Second, a requirement that Petitioner exhaust an administrative challenge to her detention would be futile. See Carr v. Saul, 593 U.S. 83, 93 (2021) (exhaustion of administrative remedies not required if effort is futile); Honig v. Doe, 484 U.S. 305, 326-27 (1988) (same). Respondents have not supplied any reason for Petitioner to believe that an administrative challenge will lead to her release to her Sponsor who has complied with all requests—both statutory and arbitrary—that Respondents are demanding based on a policy that has not been subject to notice and comment. Third, the interests of Petitioner in her immediate release, permitting her to reunify with her Sponsor, and the delay that further exhaustion would necessitate, outweigh any discretionary judicial interest in exhaustion.

III. Requirements of 28 U.S.C. § 2243

11. The Court must grant a Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus or issue an order to show cause (“OSC”) to the Respondents to show cause why the writ should not be granted “forthwith,” unless it appears from the application that Petitioner is not entitled to relief. 28 U.S.C. § 2243. If writ or an OSC is issued, the Court must require Respondents to file a return “within three days unless for good cause additional time, not exceeding twenty days, is allowed.” Id. 14. Habeas corpus is “perhaps the most important writ known to the constitutional law . . . affording as it does a swift and imperative remedy in all cases of illegal restraint or confinement.” Fay v. Noia, 372 U.S. 391, 400 (1963). “The application for the writ usurps the attention and displaces the calendar of the judge or justice who entertains it and receives prompt action from him within the four corners of the application.” Ruby v. United States, 341 F.2d 585, 587 (9th Cir.1965).

IV. Case-Specific Facts

12. H.S.O. crossed the border into the United States on or around December 11, 2025, and was deemed a minor unaccompanied by an adult. Since her surrender, Respondents have confined H.S.O. in ORR custody or in the custody of ORR’s agents, severely restricting Petitioner’s freedom to move and otherwise engage in normal activities for a child. Petitioner is 16 years old, fled Somalia after being kidnapped, and found herself being held captive again in the United States. While being held in detention, H.S.O.’s mother was subsequently kidnapped as retribution for H.S.O. fleeing and her father is currently receiving threats, as well. H.S.O.’s father, despite the threats, had specifically arranged for the sponsor to take care of his daughter, and Sponsor, in good faith to H.S.O.’s father, has talked with H.S.O. daily and support her during

H.S.O.'s protracted detention. Thus, this prolonged and unjustified separation from her Sponsor and optimal caregiver, for nearly six months, has caused a marked deterioration in her mental and emotional well-being. H.S.O. urgently needs reunification with her Sponsor now. She needs a sense of stability and structure.

13. Promptly upon H.S.O.'s arrival at the shelter, her Sponsor completed an FRA to sponsor H.S.O. Sponsor has fully complied with the vetting process and completed all required steps, including background checks, a home study, providing valid U.S. identification, proof of income and address, and submission of all application paperwork. H.S.O.'s Sponsor has done everything within their power to secure H.S.O.'s release and provide her with a safe, stable home. Sponsor is ready and willing to care for H.S.O. immediately.

14. The sole outstanding issue preventing reunification is H.S.O.'s Sponsor's inability to compel a decision about releasing H.S.O. Apart from this one issue, H.S.O.'s Sponsor has complied with every ORR request promptly and in good faith. Nevertheless, ORR will not release H.S.O. to her Sponsor.

15. H.S.O. has suffered emotionally as a result of their prolonged detention. She is currently the only girl at the facility and the only child on her floor; H.S.O. has struggled with isolation due to being Muslim and Somali as the staff and children generally only speak English and Spanish. In addition, H.S.O. has missed a substantial portion of the school year while in custody, further exacerbating the harm caused by her continued separation.

16. Petitioner seeks her immediate release from institutional custody. "[T]he essence of habeas corpus is an attack by a person in custody upon the legality of that custody, and that the traditional function of the writ is to secure release from illegal custody." Preiser v. Rodriguez, 411 U.S. 475, 484 (1973). Petitioner only seeks release into the custody of her optimal caregiver.

V. Legal Framework

17. The care and custody of UIC is governed by a legal framework consisting primarily of two statutes, a settlement agreement and federal regulations. The two statutes are the Homeland Security Act of 2002 and the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2008 (TVPRA). The settlement agreement is the 1997 Flores Settlement Agreement, which is binding on the pertinent federal agencies. The federal regulations consist of the Foundational Rule (defined below), promulgated pursuant to the TVPRA.

A. The Flores Settlement Agreement

18. The Flores Settlement Agreement (defined below) arose from a lawsuit filed by a group of immigrant children challenging their detention and seeking to be released to family members and/or sponsors within the United States. See Flores v. Sessions, 862 F.3d 863, 869 (9th Cir. 2017) (discussing the history of the Flores litigation); see also Flores v. Sessions, Case No. CV 85-4544- DMG (C.D. Cal., July 9, 2018) (affirming the terms of the Flores Settlement Agreement). In 1997, the plaintiff children entered into a consent decree with the federal government that created a nationwide policy governing the custody and release of immigrant children by immigration authorities that applies to this case. Flores v. Reno, No. CV 85-4544, Settlement Agreement (“Flores Settlement Agreement”).

19. Among other things, the Flores Settlement Agreement requires: (a) release without unnecessary delay, (b) release to an adult caregiver, with parents, legal guardians, and other family members given priority, and (c) placement in the “least restrictive setting” appropriate to the minor’s needs. Flores Settlement Agreement, ¶¶ 11, 14.

20. Paragraph 14 of the Flores Settlement Agreement requires in relevant part:

Where the INS [ORR] determines that the detention of the minor is not required either to secure his or her timely appearance before the INS or the immigration court, or to ensure the minor's safety or that of others, the INS [ORR] shall release a minor from its custody without unnecessary delay, in the following order of preference, to:

- a. a parent
- b. a legal guardian
- c. an adult relative (brother, sister, aunt, uncle, or grandparent)
- d. an adult individual or entity designated by the parent or legal guardian as capable and willing to care for the minor's well-being in a declaration signed under penalty of perjury before an immigration or consular officer....
- ...
- f. an adult individual or entity seeking custody, in the discretion of the INS, when it appears that there is no other likely alternative to long term detention and family reunification does not appear to be a reasonable possibility.

See also 8 U.S.C. §§ 1232(c)(2)(A), 1232(c)(3) (codifying the Flores Settlement Agreement).

21. At the time of the Flores Settlement Agreement, a single agency – the Immigration and Naturalization Service (“INS”) – administered the custody, detention, and deportation of immigrant children.

B. The Homeland Security Act of 2002

22. The Homeland Security Act of 2002 (“HSA”) abolished the INS and transferred the care of UIC, like H.S.O., to ORR. 6 U.S.C. §§ 279(a), (b)(1)(A), (g)(2). Section 462 of the HSA extended the key terms of the Flores Settlement Agreement to all UIC. This was a deliberate choice by Congress to put the care of children in the hands of a non-law enforcement agency like ORR, with a mandate to make decisions in the children's best interests. 6 U.S.C. §§ 279(a), (b)(1)(B); 8 U.S.C. § 1232(c)(2)(A). Congress recognized that a child's welfare should not be in the hands of a law enforcement agency. It tasked ORR with safeguarding the welfare of children, most of whom have been victims of traffickers. See 8 U.S.C. § 1232(a)(2)(B).

23. When UIC arrive at the U.S. border or are found in the U.S. without papers, they are placed in the care of ORR. 45 C.F.R. § 410.1101(a). The HSA requires ORR to provide for the children in their custody, organize their care and placement, and protect the children from those who might seek to victimize them. 6 U.S.C. § 279(b)(1)(A) & (b)(2)(A)(ii). In making placement determinations for UICs in their custody, 6 U.S.C. § 279(b)(1)(C), ORR must ensure that these children “are protected from smugglers, traffickers, or others who might seek to victimize or otherwise engage them in criminal, harmful, or exploitive activity.” Id. § 279(b)(2)(A)(ii).

C. The Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2008

24. The TVPRA, enacted in 2008, reaffirmed the congressional directive for HHS to “establish policies and programs to ensure that [UIC] in the United States are protected from traffickers and other persons seeking to victimize or otherwise engage such children in criminal, harmful, or exploitive activity.” 8 U.S.C. § 1232(c)(1). This law codified a portion of the Flores Settlement Agreement. In recognition of the trauma that the separation from family and isolation in detention centers causes children, the TVPRA directs ORR to promptly place these minors “in the least restrictive setting that is in the best interest of the child.” 8 U.S.C. § 1232(c)(2)(A) (emphasis added).

25. In December 2022, the U.S. Senate Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs published a report identifying concerns with ORR’s sponsor vetting process. Minority Staff of S. Comm. on Homeland Sec. and Governmental Affs., 117th Cong., Federal Care of Unaccompanied Children: Minors Remain Vulnerable to Trafficking and Abuse (2022). In particular, the report noted that ORR’s completion of background checks had significantly declined despite an increase in the number of UIC entering the United States over the same period. Id. at 34.

26. Also in 2024, the HHS Office of Inspector General found widespread failures in ORR’s completion of case files and follow-through during the sponsor vetting process. See generally, Off. of Inspector Gen., Dep’t of Health and Human Servs., OEI-07-21-00250, Gaps in Sponsor Screening and Followup Raise Safety Concerns for Unaccompanied Children (2024) (“OIG Report”). OIG recommended developing additional safeguards. See OIG Report at 22.

D. The Federal Regulations

27. In 2024, ORR promulgated the Unaccompanied Children Program Foundational Rule (“Foundational Rule”), formalizing preexisting ORR procedures. 45 C.F.R. pt. 410 (2024). The Foundational Rule recognizes and incorporates the Flores Settlement Agreement, including favoring release of UIC to a suitable sponsor where ORR determines that “detention of the unaccompanied child is not required either to secure the child’s timely appearance before [DHS] or the immigration court, or to ensure the child’s safety or that of others.” Id. § 410.1201(a).

28. Potential sponsors must submit an application and be vetted by ORR to determine their suitability. Id. § 410.1202(a). The regulations direct ORR to assess whether a sponsor “is capable of providing for the unaccompanied minor’s physical and mental well-being.” 45 C.F.R. § 410.1202(b). The suitability assessment must include determining the sponsor’s ability to care for the child, verifying the sponsor’s identity and relationship to the child, and assessing the suitability of the sponsor’s home. Id. § 410.1202(b). In addition, ORR “may require such components as ... verification of the employment, income, or other information provided by the potential sponsor as evidence of the ability to support the child, interviews with members of the household, [and] a home visit or home study.” Id. § 410.1202(c). Potential sponsors and any adult residents in the potential sponsor’s home may also be required to submit their fingerprints for background checks. Id.

29. “ORR has found that 10 to 20 days is generally sufficient to thoroughly assess sponsor suitability and notes that the additional time may be needed for a home study or other background checks in some cases.”¹ 89 Fed. Reg. 34384, 34447. In recognition of this, 45 C.F.R. § 410.1205(b) provides that once the ORR determines that a sponsor is qualified and can provide a setting that is in the best interest of the child, ORR must “release a child from its custody without unnecessary delay.” Id. at § 410.1201.

30. If ORR denies release, it must appoint a “neutral and detached decision maker” to “promptly” notify the potential sponsor. Id. § 410.1205(c). The decision must explain the reason for the denial, and (unless safety reasons or the law forbids it) the evidence upon which the denial is based. Id. The decision is subject to de novo review, with the opportunity for legal representation, at an administrative appellate hearing. Id. § 410.1206.

E. Recent Change in ORR Document Policies

31. In March 2025, without following normal rule-making procedures, providing an explanation, or updating relevant agency documents, ORR drastically amended its proof of identification requirements for potential sponsors as set forth in its Policy Guide. Specifically, ORR eliminated certain forms of foreign-issued identification documents, such as passports,² birth certificates, and national ID cards, from its list of acceptable identification documents for prospective UIC sponsors.³

32. Additionally, ORR began requiring potential sponsors to provide specific documents to establish proof of address and began requiring all sponsors to provide evidence of their relationship with the child (even if they also complete DNA testing). ORR Policy Guide § 2.2.4. ORR further added the requirement that “Federal staff must exhaust all available avenues to verify the authenticity of birth certificates.” Id. This can cause significant delays for children from countries of origin where there is no functioning consulate in the United States.

¹ Pursuant to 45 C.F.R. § 410.1204, a home study is only required where a child is a victim of human trafficking, has a disability that requires particularized services or treatment, certain instances where the child has been a victim of physical or sexual abuse, or where the potential sponsor presents a clear risk of abuse, maltreatment, exploitation, or trafficking. In H.S.O.’s case, a home study is not required. Nonetheless it was conducted successfully.

² ORR only is accepting foreign passports that have a U.S. visa stamp. See Office of Refugee Resettlement, ORR Unaccompanied Alien Children Bureau Policy Guide: Section 2, <https://acf.gov/orr/policy-guidance/unaccompanied-children-program-policy-guide-section-2> (last accessed Apr. 2, 2026).

³ Office of Refugee Resettlement, ORR Unaccompanied Alien Children Bureau Policy Guide: Section 2, <https://acf.gov/orr/policy-guidance/unaccompanied-children-program-policy-guide-section-2> (last accessed Apr. 2, 2026).

33. On March 17, 2025, ORR began requiring DNA testing of all children and potential sponsors who claim to be biologically related to the child they are applying to sponsor.⁴ In practice, sponsors and children have reported having to wait weeks or even months for a DNA appointment.⁵

34. On April 15, 2025, ORR once again, without following normal rule-making procedures, providing an explanation, or updating relevant agency documents, amended the Policy Guide by implementing new proof of income requirements. While before, potential sponsors could employ a variety of methods to demonstrate their financial ability to support a UIC, the amended guide now requires potential sponsors to submit either (1) the previous year’s tax return; (2) paystubs from the last 60 days; or (3) a letter from the sponsor’s employer verifying salary and employment.⁶

35. On May 28, 2025, ORR removed the sponsor application packet from public access, which was previously on their website. After this point, a potential sponsor can only receive the application directly from ORR, which has caused additional delays.

36. On July 9, 2025, ORR began requiring potential sponsors to attend in-person appointments with ORR personnel to verify identification documents, sometimes with Immigration and Customs Enforcement (“ICE”) present. This is not formally set out in ORR policies but ORR's internal email states that "federal law enforcement agencies 'may be present to meet their own mission objectives, which include interviewing sponsors.'" See <https://www.cnn.com/2025/08/08/politics/exclusive-federal-law-enforcement-to-begin-interviewing-unaccompanied-migrant-children-in-government-custody>.

⁴ ORR Field Guidance #27, https://acf.gov/sites/default/files/documents/orr/FG-27_-_DNA_Testing_Expansion.pdf.

⁵ The Unraveling of ORR: A Quick and Calculated Undoing of a System Intended to Protect Children, National Center for Youth Law (2025), https://youthlaw.org/wp-content/uploads/ncyl_the-unraveling-of-orr_sept2025_final.pdf.

⁶ Office of Refugee Resettlement, ORR Unaccompanied Alien Children Bureau Policy Guide: Section 2, <https://acf.gov/orr/policy-guidance/unaccompanied-children-program-policy-guide-section-2.2.4> (last accessed Apr. 2, 2026).

37. Taken together, these new requirements ("ORR New Document Policies") represent an insurmountable obstacle for sponsors and a bar to minor reunification with qualified sponsors. The ORR New Document Policies conflict with existing federal regulations, which provide that an alien, including a sponsor of a UIC, may prove identity with a foreign-issued form of identification. See 45 C.F.R. § 410.1202(b).

38. ORR's own child welfare experts have long stated that best practice is to release UIC to their families within 30 days of admission. See, e.g., Exhibit 21 Part 2, J.E.C.M. v. Hayes, 18-cv-903 (E.D. Va. Sept. 16, 2019), ECF No. 242-13. In fiscal years 2021 through 2024, the average length of time a child remained in ORR custody ranged from 27 to 33 days. See U.S. Dep't of Health and Human Servs., Office of Refugee Resettlement, Unaccompanied Alien Children Average Monthly Data: Average Length of Care, <https://acf.gov/orr/about/ucs/facts-anddata>, last updated August 18, 2025. In 2025, the average length of time a child remained in ORR custody was 117 days or 4 months. See <https://acf.gov/orr/about/ucs/facts-anddata>.

39. Though this number is alarmingly high when compared to fiscal years 2021 through 2024, it is deceiving as it includes the months prior to the implementation of the ORR New Document Policies. Since the implementation of the ORR New Document Policies, the average length of time a child remained in ORR custody spiraled to 112 in March 2025, 217 in April 2025,

191 days in May 2025, 154 days in June 2025, 171 days in July 2025, and 182 days in August 2025.⁷

F. Restrictions Upon UIC in ORR Custody

40. Children in ORR detention have their freedoms significantly restricted. Children in ORR custody waiting to be released to a sponsor do not attend local schools. Instead, children are typically provided with “educational hours” in the detention center itself.

41. Children in ORR custody are not able to freely have phone calls or visits with their family members, including their parents, as many, like H.S.O., are held in districts located far away from where their parents, family members, or sponsors live.

42. Children in ORR custody are granted only 1-hour per day of “large muscle activity” and 1-hour per day of “structured leisure time activities” which are increased to three hours on non-school days. ORR Rule 3.3.

43. “Research has shown that separation from a caregiver or parent for even a short period of time can be traumatic for a child.”⁸ “Children often suffer from ‘detention fatigue’, particularly during long stays in ORR custody, with symptoms of increased stress, anxiety, behavior issues, and self-harm or suicidal ideation.”⁹ This concern may be particularly acute given H.S.O.’s traumatic background regarding her own kidnapping along with her mother’s. “Children in [longer stays] may experience psychological distress, stemming from a sense of helplessness, limited agency, and lack of trauma-informed care.”¹⁰

⁷ See Petition filed in K.A.P.L. vs. Angie Salazar, et als, 26cv2477, Dkt. No. 1, p. 12, United States District Court for the District Illinois, Eastern Division.

⁸ Punishing Trauma, Incident Reporting and Immigrant Children in Government Custody, Young Center for Immigrant Children’s Rights and National Immigrant Justice Center (September 2022) <https://www.theyoungcenter.org/wp-content/uploads/2025/03/20220921FINALSIIRREPORT-HYPERLINKED-1.pdf> citing S.A. MacLean et al., “Characterization of the mental health of immigrant children separated from their mothers at the U.S.–Mexico border,” Psychiatry Research, April 2020, <https://pubmed.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/31522891/>.

⁹ Id. citing Acting Inspector General Joanne M. Chiedi, HHS Off. of the Inspector General, Care Provider Facilities Described Challenges Addressing Mental Health Needs of Children in HHS Custody, Sept. 2019, 12, <https://oig.hhs.gov/oei/reports/oei-09-18-00431.pdf>.

44. Children in ORR custody “are restricted in their autonomy and agency, they have little knowledge or control over requirements or processes for release, they feel helpless in their circumstances ...”¹¹ and “quite universally want to be released to family ... and are being held against their will in restrictive settings” in which even the “least restrictive” setting in ORR custody still feels quite restrictive to children. Id.

45. Mental health clinicians document that a child’s mental health often deteriorates as the length of stay in ORR custody increases. Id. at p. 12. Research and reports tell us that “children’s experiences in immigration custody are associated with increases in psychological distress and functional impairment” including “increases in depression, anxiety, traumatic stress symptoms, and behavioral difficulties – sometimes leading to thoughts, urges, and acts of self-harm and suicidality – associated with children’s experiences of immigration detention.” Id. at p. 16.

46. After nearly six months in the shelter, H.S.O. has suffered detention fatigue given her isolation and limited ability to have interactions where she does not feel isolated or different from others. H.S.O. speaks regularly with Sponsor and occasionally with her father as she is trying to maintain meaningful familial bonds.

G. Prolonged Detention of Immigrant Children

¹⁰ Id. (citing Exhibit C: Declaration of Ryan Matlow: Psychological Evaluation of Children and Conditions at Fort Bliss Emergency Intake Site 2, Flores v. Garland, No. 85-cv-04544-DMG-AGR, ECF No. 1161-7 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 9, 2021) (describing “clinically significant psychological harm” suffered by children in prolonged detention in Fort Bliss)).

¹¹ The Unraveling of ORR: A Quick and Calculated Undoing of a System Intended to Protect Children, National Center for Youth Law (2025), 17, https://youthlaw.org/wp-content/uploads/ncyl_the-unraveling-of-orr_sept2025_final.pdf.

47. Due process requires “adequate procedural protections” to ensure that the government’s asserted justification for physical confinement “outweighs the individual’s constitutionally protected interest in avoiding physical restraint.” Zadvydas v. Davis, 533 U.S. 678, 690 (2001) (internal quotation marks omitted). In the immigration context, the Supreme Court has recognized only two valid purposes for civil detention—to mitigate the risks of danger to the community and to prevent flight. Id.; Demore v. Kim, 538 U.S. 510, 528 (2003).

48. In Demore the Court emphasized that, for detention under the statute to be reasonable, it must be for a brief period of time. See, e.g., 538 U.S. at 528 (detention permissible because, as compared to Zadvydas, “the detention here is of a much shorter duration”). Justice Kennedy explained in his concurrence that “[w]ere there to be an unreasonable delay by the INS in pursuing and completing deportation proceedings, it could become necessary then to inquire whether the detention is not to facilitate deportation, or to protect against risk of flight or dangerousness, but to incarcerate for other reasons.” Id. at 532–33 (Kennedy, J., concurring).

49. Following Zadvydas and Demore, federal courts have found either the immigration statutes or due process require a hearing for adult noncitizens subject to unreasonably prolonged detention pending removal proceedings. See, e.g., Black v. Decker, 103 F.4th 133, 147-58 (2d Cir. 2024); Hernandez-Lara v. Lyons, 10 F. 4th 19, 28-35 (1st Cir. 2021).

50. While the standard for prolonged detention for adults appears to be generally six months (180 days), the Flores Settlement Agreement, TVPRA, and the Foundational Rule all establish that the detention of immigrant children requires greater care and more restrictions upon the government than that of adult detention such as taking into account their best interest. In this regard, the TVPRA regulations mandate that UIC be released promptly to the least restrictive setting that is in their best interest. In the case of a responsible Sponsor, promptly should mean no more than two weeks.

51. H.S.O. has now been detained for nearly six months.

H. The Impact of the ORR New Document Policies

52. The inevitable result of the new policies is that sponsors who are undocumented in the U.S., and have only foreign-issued identification documents, cannot satisfy the new policies, despite being otherwise qualified to sponsor family members. Since March of 2025, the Respondents have applied the ORR New Document Policies to sponsors as “regulated parties,” resulting in the continued separation of children from their families and their continued and lengthy institutional detention. Even more egregious, ORR also requires that every member of a potential sponsor’s household also comply with the ORR New Document Policies.

53. Respondents have stated publicly that some unnamed countries are difficult to contact and some sponsors have used fraudulent foreign documents. The stated reasons are pretextual: the government continues to accept and require foreign-issued identity documents in a vast number of immigration-related contexts. For example, if the sponsors applied for temporary protected status, non-immigrant visas, permanent residency, asylum, or individual taxpayer identification numbers, the government would expect and accept the foreign-issued documents it rejects in the UIC sponsorship context.

54. In truth and in fact, the ORR New Document Policies seek to transform ORR from a program to foster child welfare into an immigration enforcement program that fosters the removal of undocumented sponsors and UIC.

55. The ORR New Document Policies are keeping H.S.O. and UIC like them detained and are unlawful. Under the TVPRA, ORR’s function is to act in the best interest of the child; not to prioritize immigration enforcement. The TVPRA also directs ORR to place children in the least restrictive setting that is in the best interest of the child. The ORR New Document Policies prevent ORR from complying with its congressional mandate.

56. The new ORR policies have resulted in longer detentions for minors and less reunifications with sponsors – precisely the opposite of the intent of the TVPRA. Between October 2025 and February 2026, the length of the detention for the over 2300 minors in ORR custody increased from 166 to 195 days.¹² ORR releases almost none of the children in its custody. Significantly, only about 5% or 119 of the 2348 minors in detention in February 2026 were released to sponsors; 2,229 remained detained.¹³ In March 2026 only 228 or about 10% of the 2173 minors in detention were released to sponsors; 1,945 remained in custody. *Id. The average number of days in ORR custody for UIC released to sponsors in March 2026 was six and a half months. Id. UIC who remain in ORR custody have been detained an average of seven months. Id. ORR is blatantly violating its mandate.

57. Petitioner submits that ORR's New Document Policies and its arbitrary policy to seek additional questionnaires and in person identification verification, regardless of the facts, have caused H.S.O. to remain isolated from her sponsor, who can provide the least restrictive setting that is in her best interest. As a result, H.S.O. remains in detention though she has a suitable sponsor willing to care for her.

58. The current administration has made no secret of its wish to deport as many undocumented persons as possible, including UIC, without due process. The ORR New Document Policies are just one more tactic to achieve this goal. In practice, under the ORR New Document

¹² See Office of Refugee Resettlement, Data, available at https://acf.gov/orr/about/ucs/facts-and-data#book_content_1 (last accessed March 19, 2026).

¹³ See Office of Refugee Resettlement, Data, available at https://acf.gov/orr/about/ucs/facts-and-data#book_content_9 (last accessed March 19, 2026).

Policies, UIC are removed from their communities, isolated from their families, placed in facilities unequipped to ensure their welfare and effectively coerced into waiving their rights. Immigration Enforcement Agents are brought into sponsor interviews to intimidate potential sponsors and coerce them into desisting in their applications. These goals are plainly unlawful and a blatant violation of the TVPRA, which requires ORR to act in the best interest of the child; not to engage in immigration enforcement. Even the appearance of coordination between ORR and immigration-enforcement personnel intimidates undocumented but qualified sponsors into not sponsoring loved ones, contrary to the TVPRA's stated and sole goal of ensuring the children's best interest and welfare.

VI. Claims for Relief

COUNT I

Violation of the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act

8 U.S.C. § 1232

(Custody must be in the "least restrictive setting" in the "child's best interest")

59. Petitioner incorporates paragraphs 1 to 58 by reference as if they were stated and set forth herein.

60. Through the ORR New Document Policies, the Respondents have kept the Petitioner in custody in violation of her rights under the TVPRA.

61. The TVPRA requires that Respondents place Petitioner in the least restrictive setting that is in their "best interest." 8 U.S.C. § 1232(c)(2)(A). This is presumptively with a willing and able sponsor who was selected by H.S.O.'s father and can provide for her physical and mental well-being. ORR regulations affirm "that, generally, placement with a vetted and approved family member or other vetted and approved sponsor, as opposed to placement in an ORR care provider facility, whenever feasible, is in the best interests of unaccompanied children.” 89 Fed. Reg. at 34440.

62. The ORR New Document Policies and policy to seek additional questionnaires and in person identification verification presumptively impaired Petitioner’s sponsor, even though, based on U.S.-issued identification documents, fingerprints, home study, and background checks, Sponsor is who they purport to be, and they can provide the least restrictive setting that is in Petitioner’s best interest. Therefore, according to TVPRA regulations, custody of Petitioner must be transferred to Sponsor. 45 C.F.R. § 410.1201. Yet the Respondents continue to unreasonably delay deciding whether to release the Petitioner to Sponsor, based on factors unrelated to Petitioner’s “best interest” or the mandate of the TVPRA. Additionally, the ORR New Document Policies imposed a new U.S.-issued identification document requirement for the sponsor without notice and comment, which H.S.O.’s sponsor produced. The ORR New Document Policies are unlawful and yet were complied with. Sponsor has satisfied every request of the ORR.

63. The ORR New Document Policies contravene not only the TVPRA but also its regulations. The TVPRA’s regulations explicitly provide that the government may determine identity by using non-U.S.-issued documents: “ORR may consult with the issuing agency (e.g., consulate or embassy) of the sponsor’s identity documentation to verify the validity of the sponsor identity document presented.” 45 C.F.R. § 410.1202(b).

64. Even after receiving U.S.-issued forms of identification from Petitioner’s sponsor, Respondents are maintaining Petitioner in their custody, which is not the least restrictive setting that is the “best interest,” of H.S.O., in violation of the Petitioner’s rights under the TVPRA.

65. The Petitioner is thus entitled to release under 28 U.S.C. § 2241.

COUNT II

Violation of the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act
8 U.S.C. § 1232
(Release must occur “promptly” and “without unnecessary delay”)

66. Petitioner incorporates paragraphs 1 to 58 by reference as if they were stated and set forth herein.

67. Under the TVPRA, the government must release immigrant children in its custody “promptly.” 8 U.S.C. § 1232(c)(2). “Prompt” means “[d]one quickly, immediately, or at the right time; performed without delay” Black’s Law Dictionary (12th ed. 2024).

68. Likewise, under TVPRA regulations, the Respondents must release the immigrant children “without unnecessary delay,” 45 C.F.R. §§ 410.1200, 1201.

69. These commands are strict: “without unnecessary delay” means that ORR shall ordinarily adjudicate a sponsorship application within 10-14 calendar days in the case of parents and close relatives. Id. § 410.1205(b). While the regulation does not establish a specific time frame for the review of an application by a non-relative sponsor, there is no reason that such review should take much longer than the review of an FRA by a close relative. In any event, six months violates Petitioner’s due process rights. ORR may deny a sponsorship only if it determines that the sponsor cannot provide for the “well-being” of the child or that placement with the sponsor would endanger the child or the community. Id. § 410.1205(a).

70. These regulations obligate ORR to release the Petitioner to Sponsor unless the Respondents have notified the sponsor of a decision that relies upon evidence subject to appellate challenge supporting a valid reason not to release. Id. §§ 410.1205-1206. Respondents have not done so.

71. By taking well over 14 days to release Petitioner to Sponsor, and by not supplying a valid, evidence-based decision for denying release, the Respondents are violating the Petitioner's rights under the TVPRA.

72. Under 28 U.S.C. § 2241, the Petitioner is entitled to release.

COUNT III

Violation of the Fifth Amendment (Deprivation of Liberty Without Due Process—Indefinite Detention)

73. Petitioner incorporates paragraphs 1 to 58 by reference as if they were stated and set forth herein.

74. “[T]he interest in being free from physical detention” by the state is “the most elemental of liberty interests[.]” Hamdi v. Rumsfeld, 542 U.S. 507, 529 (2004). A child’s interest in being free from confinement is no narrower than that of an adult. In re Gault, 387 U.S. 1, 13 (1967) (“neither the Fourteenth Amendment nor the Bill of Rights is for adults alone”); see also Reno v. Flores, 507 U.S. 292, 316 (1993) (O’Connor, J. and Souter, J., concurring), quoting Gault, 387 U.S. at 13 (“[The Supreme Court] ha[s] consistently [...] rejected the assertion that a child, unlike an adult, has a right ‘not to liberty but to custody’”). Further, “incarceration is rarely if ever a necessary condition for raising the living standards of those capable of surviving safely in freedom, on their own or with the help of family or friends.” O’Connor v. Donaldson, 422 U.S. 563, 575 (1975). Thus, as a matter of substantive due process, the Petitioner has a liberty interest in freedom from institutional custody, even though minors are “always in some form of custody.” Schall v. Martin, 467 U.S. 253, 265 (1984); see Lucas R. v. Becerra, No. 18-5741, 2022 WL 2177454, at *14 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 11, 2022) (finding that ORR policies for placing minors in more restrictive facilities violated due process because minors have liberty interest in freedom from institutional custody).

75. The Petitioner's interest in freedom from institutional custody is particularly pronounced as her detention lengthens. The Supreme Court has warned that institutional detention of adults for six months or longer may deprive them of the liberty interest protected by due process unless the government supplies a detainee-specific justification. Zadyvydas v. Davis, 533 U.S. 678 (2001).

76. The Petitioner is a child who has been detained for nearly six months. To a child, nearly six months may appear even longer than for adults. Therefore, the substantive presumption from Zadyvydas applies at least as strongly to H.S.O. Here, the government has not provided any detainee-specific justification for prolonging Petitioner's detention.

77. Courts have found that family separation and prolonged detention harm children. See, e.g., Jacinto-Castanon de Nolasco, 319 F. Supp. 3d at 502 (determining that family "[s]eparation irreparably harms plaintiffs every minute it persists"); Andreiu v. Ashcroft, 253 F.3d 477, 484 (9th Cir. 2001) (en banc). In view of this finding, ORR is obligated under the TVPRA to determine the suitability of a close family member or, in this case, a close family friend chosen by H.S.O.'s father for sponsorship "without unnecessary delay," that is within 14 days. 45 C.F.R. § 410.1201. Failure to do so violates the TVPRA regulations and H.S.O.'s right to be free from unjustified detention.

78. Respondents have not identified a permissible justification specific to Petitioner, such as flight risk or dangerousness that justifies her continued detention. Zadyvydas, supra. ORR's ongoing and prolonged detention of Petitioner bears no reasonable relation to any government purpose. Petitioner has not committed any crime and is not a danger to themselves or others. Petitioner's sponsor has demonstrated themselves as a capable and willing sponsor to care for Petitioner, according to the requirements of law. Moreover, H.S.O.'s sponsor is in fact capable, proper, and fit, and Petitioner presents no flight risk.

79. Respondents' refusal to make a determination in this case resulted in H.S.O.'s prolonged and indefinite detention; and therefore, violates her Fifth Amendment right to liberty and freedom from unjustified institutional custody.

80. Respondents continued detention of Petitioner under these circumstances violates her due process rights under the Fifth Amendment, entitling her to release under 28 U.S.C. § 2241.

COUNT IV

Violation of the Fifth Amendment (Deprivation of Liberty Without Due Process—Procedural Fairness)

81. Petitioner incorporates paragraphs 1 to 58 and paragraphs 73 to 80 by reference as if they were stated and set forth herein.

82. The right to due process also contains a procedural component that constrains the process by which the government may deprive a person of a legally protected liberty interest. See Matthews v. Eldridge, 424 U.S. 319, 332 (1976). Due process requires that the government not deprive an individual of their constitutional rights without meaningful notice and an opportunity to be heard before a neutral arbiter to protect against the risk of erroneous deprivation. Mathews v. Eldridge, 424 U.S. 319, 335 (1976). Due process also requires that government action be rational and non-arbitrary. See U.S. v. Trimble, 487 F.3d 752, 757 (9th Cir. 2007).

83. The fairness of any government decision-making process involves a familiar balancing test: (1) assessing the private interests, that is, Petitioner's interest in creating familial bonds and freedom from institutional detention; (2) the risk of an erroneous deprivation of that interest without added procedural safeguards; and (3) the government's countervailing interest. See Matthews v. Eldridge, 424 U.S. at 335.

84. Based on the balancing of these three factors, the fact that a decision has not been reached is unconstitutional, and the Petitioner should be released.

85. First, as established, the Petitioner's interest in her liberty is profound and clear. It is based on her constitutional right to familial association and freedom from institutional detention. It is also rooted in the TVPRA's assignment of nondiscretionary duties to the Respondents. The Respondents must "promptly place[]" each child in the least restrictive setting that is in the child's the "best interest." 8 U.S.C. § 1232(c)(2)(A) (emphasis added). When, as here, constitutional and statutory dictates contain "specified substantive predicates" eliminating agency discretion, the beneficiaries—like the Petitioner—has a protected liberty interest. Ky. Dep't of Corr. v. Thompson, 490 U.S. 454, 463 (1989).

86. Second, the risk of an erroneous deprivation of that constitutionally protected interest—the disqualification of an otherwise suitable sponsor—based on the ORR New Document Policies is high. If a decision remains delayed due to questionnaires and identification validation, that is a guarantee that the government will never grant custody to the Petitioner's sponsor, even though their identity, relationship to the Petitioner, and ability to care for the Petitioner is not in doubt.

87. Finally, the government's interest in retaining custody of the Petitioner at this point is low. By law, ORR's duty is not in enforcing immigration policy against others. Its only duty is to safeguard the well-being of the Petitioner. The government has and can continue to comply with its duty through the verification of foreign-issued identification documents, background checks, fingerprint checks and DNA testing. In addition, it can verify a sponsor's ability to care for a UIC without requiring tax returns, paystubs or employer's employment letters. Thus, the government's interest in the Petitioner's well-being requires her release from institutional detention and reunification with Sponsor.

88. The Respondents' detention of the Petitioner based on the procedural requirements imposed by the ORR New Document Policies denies her a prompt and accurate resolution of her claims for release. Her detention thus violates the Petitioner's rights to due process under the Fifth Amendment. She is entitled to release under 28 U.S.C. § 2241.

COUNT V

Violation of the Fifth Amendment (Deprivation of Equal Protection)

89. Petitioner incorporates paragraphs 1 to 58 by reference as if they were stated and set forth herein.

90. The Fifth Amendment's right to due process includes an equal protection component applicable to the federal government. Bolling v. Sharpe, 347 U.S. 497 (1954).

91. Equal protection requires that the government supply a rational basis for treating undocumented aliens differently than documented aliens. Plyer v. Doe, 452 U.S. 202 (1982).

92. The Respondents' refusal to grant custody of the Petitioner to her suitable sponsor, based on any further requested documentation or identification requests, when Sponsor has complied with all prior requests for nearly six month and where they would otherwise grant custody to the sponsor, is irrational and has no relation to ORR's mandate under the TVPRA.

93. The delay in making a release decision is irrational because the government can and does control its ability to make a decision. The refusal to determine the eligibility of a sponsor violates the Equal Protection Clause by treating those who have received sponsorship determinations differently from those who have not without rational justification as the government controls scheduling.

94. Because the lack of a sponsorship determination is irrational, it violates the Petitioner's Fifth Amendment rights to equal protection, entitling them to release under 28 U.S.C. § 2241.

COUNT VI

Substantive Violation of the Administrative Procedure Act
5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A)-(B) (ORR New Document Policies are Arbitrary and Capricious and in Violation of Constitutional Rights)

95. Petitioner incorporates paragraphs 1 to 58, 73 to 79, 80 to 87 and 88 to 95 by reference as if they were stated and set forth herein.

96. The APA, 5 U.S.C. § 551 et seq., authorizes suits by “[a] person suffering legal wrong because of agency action, or adversely affected or aggrieved by agency action within the meaning of a relevant strategy.” Id. § 702. The APA requires courts to “hold unlawful and set aside agency action” that is “arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of discretion, or otherwise not in accordance with law,” or “contrary to constitutional right, power, privilege, or immunity.” Id. § 706(2)(A)-(B).

97. The policy to request further questionnaires and duplicative identification is a final agency action because it is “the consummation of the agency’s decision-making process” and determine “rights and obligations” and create “legal consequences.” Bennett v. Spear, 520 U.S. 154, 177–78 (1997). Final agency action is subject to judicial review. 5 U.S.C. §§ 551(4), (13); id. § 706(2)(A); see also Dep’t of Homeland Sec. v. Regents of the Univ. of Cal., 591 U.S. 1, 17 (2020).

98. The Supreme Court has instructed that “the agency must examine the relevant data and articulate a satisfactory explanation for its action including a rational connection between the facts found and the choice made.” Motor Vehicle Mfrs. Ass’n of U.S., Inc. v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 463 U.S. 29, 43 (1983) (internal quotations omitted). An agency action is arbitrary or capricious if the agency “has relied on factors which Congress had not intended it to consider, entirely failed to consider an important aspect of the problem, offered an explanation for its decision that runs counter to the evidence before the agency, or is so implausible that it could not be ascribed to a difference in view or the product of agency expertise.” Zero Zone, Inc. v. United States DOE, 832 F.3d 654, 668 (7th Cir. 2016) (quoting Nat’l Ass’n of Home Builders v. Defs. of Wildlife, 551 U.S. 644, 658 (2007)).

99. In enacting the ORR New Document Policies, ORR failed to consider the impact of the policies on H.S.O. and other UIC and their reliance on the previous policies.

100. Because ORR immediately implemented the ORR New Document Policies, which revised preexisting policies as well as conflicted with representations made on its FRA, it needed to “assess whether there were reliance interests, determine whether they were significant, and weigh any such interests against competing policy concerns.” DHS v. Regents of the Univ. of Cal., 591 U.S. 1, 33 (2020). ORR knew that the new document requirements would significantly impact children and their sponsors who acted in reliance on the previous documentation policies as well as pursuant to the representations by ORR on its FRA. The impact is particularly damaging to H.S.O., who traveled to the United States with the expectation that their father had chosen their best sponsor. And in fact, H.S.O.’s sponsor immediately applied to sponsor H.S.O., and but for the ORR New Document Policies, H.S.O. would have been released into Sponsor’s custody. ORR changed the document requirements without warning, without notice and comment, and applied them to H.S.O.’s proposed sponsor.

101. ORR had an obligation to consider the impact its new policies would have before changing the status quo. Not only did it not consider its impact on UIC and their reliance on the status quo, but it also failed to consider other less burdensome alternatives. Cf. FCC v. Prometheus Radio Project, 592 U.S. 414, 417 (2021) (applying arbitrary-and-capricious review to the FCC's weighing of a policy factor even though the FCC was not statutorily required to consider that factor).

102. The reasons advanced by ORR for its new document policy are wholly unsupported by the evidence. The government failed to provide a plausible explanation for the ORR New Document Policies; therefore, it necessarily follows that the new policies are unsupported by a rational explanation. Cf. Alpha Pharma, Inc. v. Leavitt, 460 F.3d 1, 5–6 (D.C. Cir. 2006).

103. The government's willingness to cause delay of reunification of H.S.O. in the context of qualifying sponsors for detained UIC under the TVPRA violates H.S.O.'s due process rights.

104. The ORR New Document Policies are so irrational that they cannot be ascribed to agency expertise. ORR drastically changed its proof of identification and proof of income requirements without any explanation, without waiting to lawfully update the FRA, and without any consideration for the reliance interests of sponsors and UIC, the impact on children's length of detention, or less burdensome alternatives to verify sponsor identity and proof of income. These changes are arbitrary and capricious and violates H.S.O.'s substantive due process rights. Therefore, Petitioners is entitled to release under 28 U.S.C. § 2241.

105. The ORR New Document Policies are arbitrary and capricious. They result in denials of sponsorship based on failure to provide documentation that has no rational connection to ORR's mandate under the TVPRA. This is in direct contradiction to years of ORR policy and the Foundational Rule, without any reasoned explanation. Additionally, the ORR New Document Policies are arbitrary and capricious because, in adopting the new document requirements, Defendants failed to take into account important aspects of the problem such as the impact on children's length of stay in custody in direct controversy to the child's welfare and right to expedited family reunification. ORR has failed to articulate a reasoned explanation for its decision, failed to consider reasonable alternatives to the new requirements, failed to take into account reliance interests, and offered no reasonable explanation for their decision other than pretextual explanations that run counter to other immigration policies. See Angelica S. v. United States HHS, 786 F. Supp. 3d 158, 173-175 (D.D.C. 2025) (finding at the preliminary injunction stage that it was substantially likely that the ORR new sponsorship documentation requirements were arbitrary and capricious because ORR provided little to no explanation as to how it weighed findings against relevant factors).

106. The ORR New Document Policies are in fact law enforcement policies that do not align with ORR's mandate under the TVPRA. Their intent is to keep children in custody by prohibiting a sponsor who was chosen by H.S.O.'s father, who is otherwise qualified, from serving as a sponsor. But Congress removed UIC from the custody of a law enforcement agency and placed them in the custody of ORR, with a clear mandate that it prioritize the well-being of the children – not law enforcement.

107. Additionally, the ORR New Document Policies are contrary to the Fifth Amendment of the U.S. Constitution and in violation of H.S.O.'s right to familial association and freedom.

108. Petitioner has suffered and will continue to suffer irreparable injury as a result of these unlawful policies implemented by Respondents, as alleged herein. Therefore, H.S.O. is entitled to be released to their sponsor under 28 U.S.C. § 2241.

COUNT VII

Procedural Violation of the Administrative Procedure Act (ORR New Document Policies Promulgated Without Complying with Rule-Making Procedures)

109. Petitioner incorporates paragraphs 1 to 58 by reference as if they were stated and set forth herein.

110. The APA requires courts to hold unlawful and set aside any agency action taken “without observance of procedure required by law.” 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(D). These rulemaking procedures are required before engaging in actions that impact substantive rights. See 5 U.S.C. § 553.

111. HHS is an agency, 5 U.S.C. § 551(1), and ORR is a division of this agency.

112. Respondents promulgated the ORR New Document Policies, drastically changing their policies regarding what documents ORR would accept as proof of identification and income without following proper rulemaking procedures as required by the APA. This action resulted in unnecessary delays in Petitioners’ reunification with her sponsor, resulted in her prolonged detention, and is a violation of the APA’s rulemaking requirements. Therefore, H.S.O. is entitled to be released to her sponsor under 28 U.S.C. § 2241.

Requests For Relief

Petitioner respectfully urges that this court:

1. Assume jurisdiction over this matter;
2. Declare that Petitioner’s current detention is unlawful;
3. Issue a Writ of Habeas Corpus ordering Respondents to release Petitioner from custody to the custody of their sponsor forthwith;
4. Prohibit the Respondents from transferring Petitioner from the district without the court’s approval;

5. Prohibit the Respondents from requiring any further documentation and identification requests of H.S.O.'s Sponsor given that nearly six months have passed since Sponsor submitted all other required documents;

5. Award Petitioner her attorney's fees and costs under the Equal Access to Justice Act, and on any other basis justified under law; and

6. Grant any further relief this court deems just and proper.

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Charles Roth

Charles Roth
National Immigrant Justice Center
111 West Jackson Blvd, Suite 800
Chicago, IL 60604
(312) 660-1613 (tel)
(312) 660-1613 (fax)